Star School targeted by vandals

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Sometime around Dec. 23, someone broke into and destroyed much of the interior of the Star School House, a community building in Eveline Township located at the corner of Wern Road and Loomis Road. "If they (the perpetrators) have this much hatred I would hate to see what they would do to an animal or a child," a comment Gail Farley reiterated that she had heard following the incident.

The school house was ravaged — currently, the windows are boarded as the vandals broke all but one. Piles of glass litter the floor and broken tables, chairs and clocks lay in pieces about the room.

The hardwood floor of the small bathroom located to the right of the entrance, that once housed the school's original toilet from the 1800s, is now covered in shards of the toilet's broken porcelain.

The perpetrators did not stop there, they also attacked the original blackboard that lined the wall students and later a church congregation used to face.

The vandals attempted to take a hammer to the blackboard, but when they found the old style board does not shatter they lost interest and moved along to ruining other relics, Farley said.

School House Historical Society, a committee that worked to further renovate the facility and to coordinate on-site events.

As temperatures reached only 11 degrees on Wednesday the Farley family walked around the cold room with looks of anguish in their eyes. And as other members of the society filed into the school house for the first time since the incident tears came to their eyes.

One member stood by the shattered, hand-carved, antique piano and explained that she and her husband of 28 years had first held hands around this very piano.

City water supply claimed to be cleaner than bottled

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In the last few years, many people have been seen toting bottles of water from springs around the world for reasons ranging from convenience to safety. But they may not have to.

According to City of Charlevoix Superintendent of Water and Waste Water Sam Creswell, Charlevoix residents need not pay the extra cash for clean drinking water, the free flowing tap water in the city is as clean as it comes.

"We have excellent water, I would rate it a 10 (scale 1 unsuited for drinking - 10 excellent)," Creswell said.

The City of Charlevoix is home to one of few area water treatment plants. The only other similar plants in the area are located in Traverse City, Alpena and St. Ignace.

The plant siphons approximately half a million gallons of treated Lake Michigan water per day into city, and some Charlevoix Township, homes. This figure rises from one to two million gallons per day during busy summer months. The plant's capacity is three million gallons.

Plant lead operator Jim Caldwell said that should the community require the capacity amount, the plant would have to ration water. Which would mean less lawn watering.

However, Creswell does not see water rationing as an issue in Charlevoix.

"We feel we are in good shape for the foreseeable future," he said.

The plant currently operates eight hours per day. If the number of gallons needed by the community rises, so too would the hours of operation.

The treatment plant, adjoining Michigan Beach off of Park Avenue was built in 1986.

Prior to the treatment plant having been built, city residents were consuming a mixed water source that was a combination of lake water and ground water. Because of ground water's greater potential for contamination, the new plant uses only lake water.

Creswell said that when ground water was being used, traces of a solvent based degreaser were found. Apparently someone had spilled the hazardous material and low levels of it found their way into the aquifer.

Currently, water quality testing is done each day in the plant's laboratory.

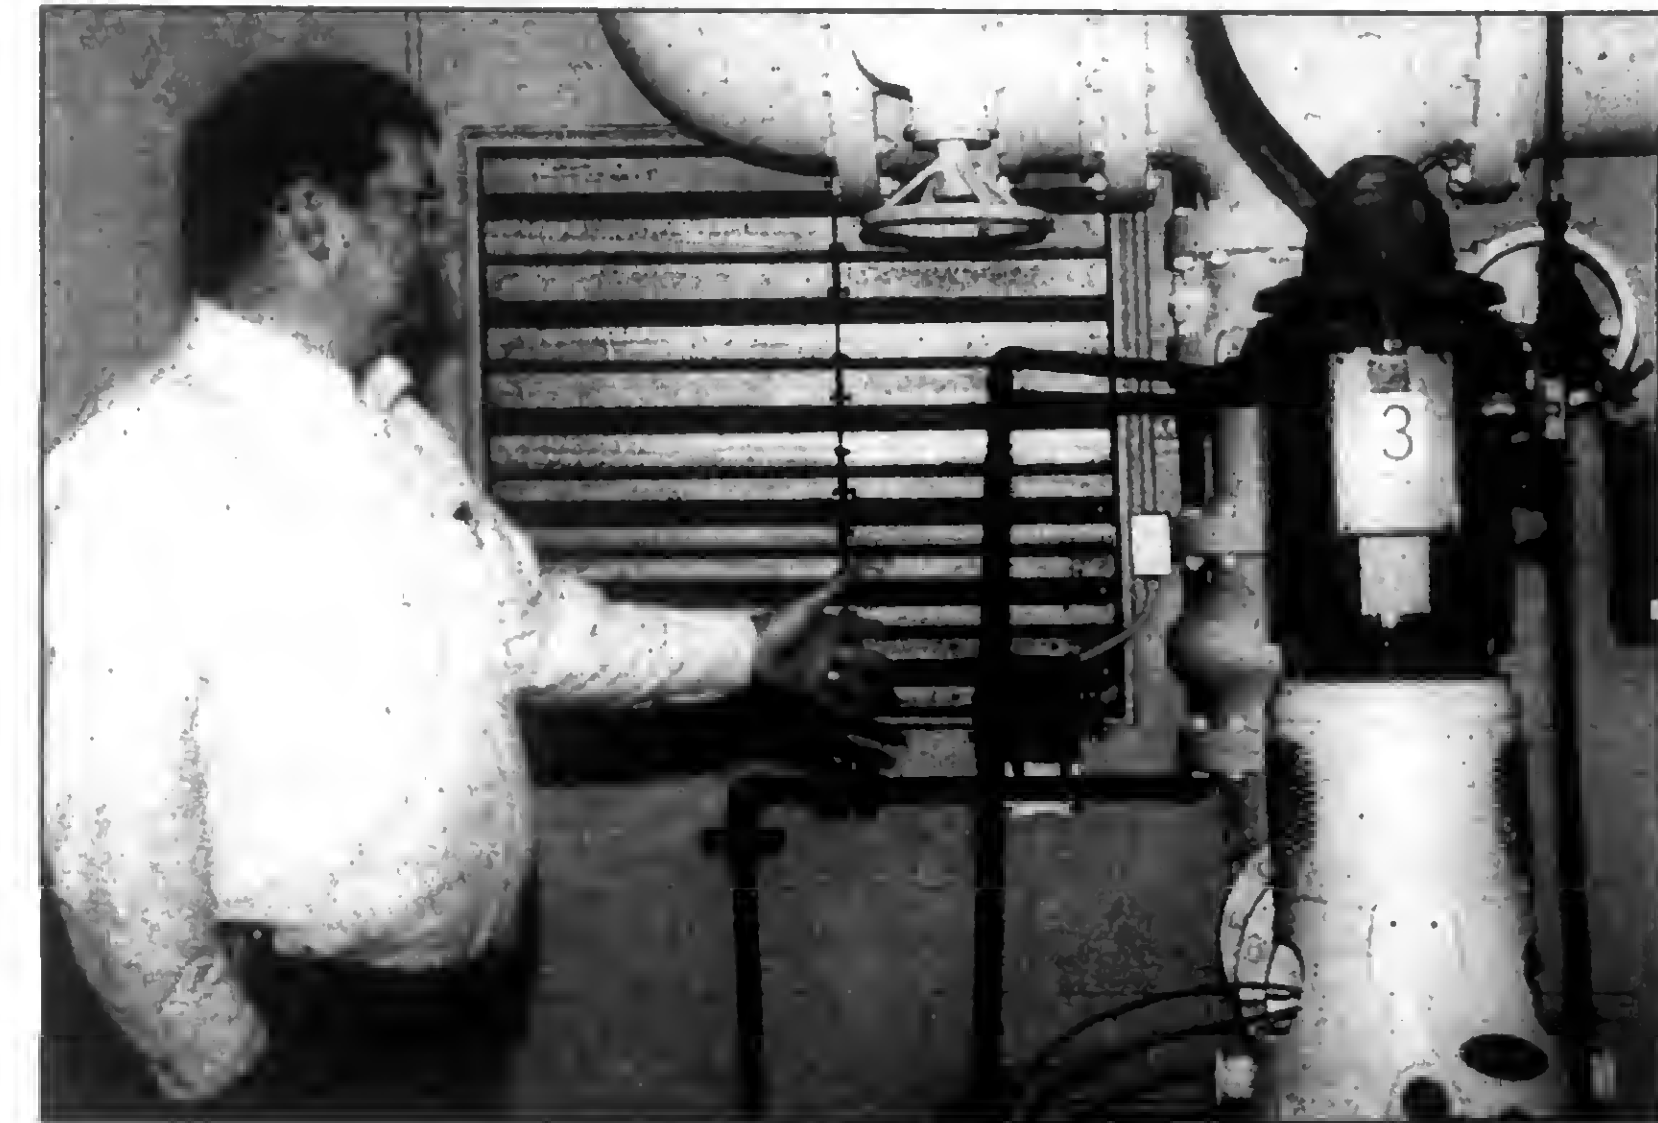

In the new system, the water comes in through the plant's pump located beneath the sandy bottom of Lake Michigan. This setup is called a buried intake. Creswell said the pump location offers residents a unique dual filtration — the sand acts as a pre-filter and, once inside the plant itself, a second treatment is administered.

However, the old, combination water source did not require chlorine treatment. Creswell said that the chlorine was a change for some people in town who claim they can taste its presence.

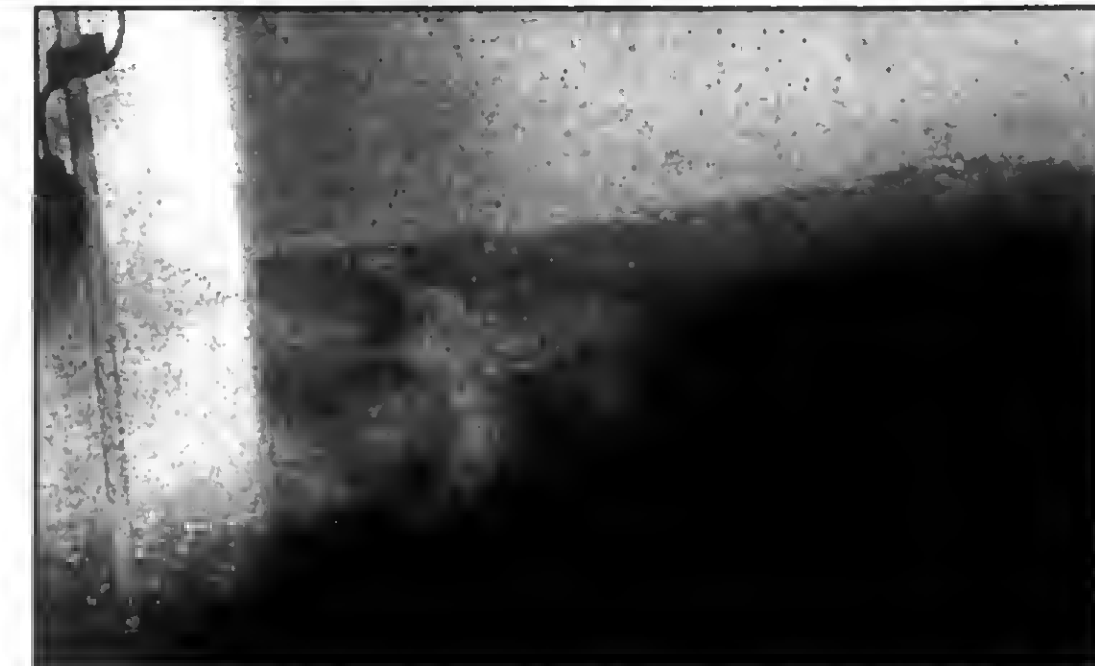

"State regulation said that surface water (Lake Michigan) has to be chlorinated. We feed no more than we have to. The chlorine is used to kill bacteria. The water in Lake Michigan is quite clean to start with, it doesn't need a lot of chlorine," he said.

While some complain about the presence of chlorine in the water claiming it may harm them and they can taste it, Creswell said the low levels, usually around .3 milligrams per liter, are not a threat to tap water drinkers.

Correction

In last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier, there was an error in the story titled "What equals the legal limit?" on page 3.

In the confusion of dealing with the volunteers, Editor Jeremy McBain mixed up the weights of Julie Musilek and Shirley Gibson in his notes and, thus, reported them wrong. McBain was not taking part in the experiment other than as a reporter.

The story should have said Musilek weighs 115 pounds and Gibson weighs 135 pounds.

OPINIONS

It is officially the new millennium

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Happy new year and happy new millennium!

That's right, it is officially a new millennium. Unlike what some people may believe — like every seller of commemorative millennium merchandise last year — the official start of the new millennium was Jan. 1, 2001, which was Monday.

I got a kick out of all the millennium hoopla last New Year's Eve. Everywhere I turned, I saw people not realizing that the millennium didn't start for another year. People were having millennium parties, buying millennium mugs and attending millennium sales at local stores, not knowing they were being duped into believing a false-hood.

The main culprit behind this — I believe — was television. Newscasters filled their shows with stories about the new millennium and what it means to the world, CNN even had a series on the matter. This provided me further proof for my belief that television newscasters are more concerned with "flashy news" rather than the facts.

But, a year later, here it officially is; the new millennium along with a new year.

With all new years there are two similar traits: celebration and change. People are always excited about what will happen in a new year, creating a celebratory mood and a desire to change certain aspects about their lives — these are called new year's resolutions.

What do you do with a new millennium? It seems so much bigger than just a new year. It would seem the celebrations would be bigger and the changes bigger with a new millennium.

But, people are somewhat parted out this year after last and it is too early to really tell what the big changes will be. However, we decided to get into the celebratory mood at the Charlevoix Courier, while also respecting the aspect of change.

This week you will notice a special front page photo of the community. This picture was taken during a cold morning on Dec. 2 by me, with the help of G. Randall Goss of the Petoskey News-Review, from the small bucket of a "cherry picker."

Goss and I were crammed into this bucket and raised high into the air over the crowd, who waited patiently for us in the cold weather as we tried to reassure ourselves that we would not fall out. Luckily, if we had, there were people on the ground with cameras that could take pictures of us for the next weeks' edition of the paper. I even had a headline already written in my mind: "Editor hospitalized after falling out of bucket truck. Lands on Petoskey News-Review photographer."

But, I didn't fall and the picture turned out great.

I would like to give out some thanks: First to Goss for his help with the picture. He provided some great tips and a needed back-up. I would also like to thank Ivan Witthoef of Charlevoix Electric Service for allowing us to use his truck and — while we ended up not using it — I would like to thank the McCarthy family for the use of the roof of the Wharfside building. Lastly, I would like to thank the community members who came out for the picture, their images will make a fine record of what Charlevoix was like at the turn of the new millennium.

Some people have asked me if this community picture will be a yearly event. At this time, I am not sure. I originally envisioned it as a one-time event marking the beginning of the new millennium, but it would make a great yearly tradition for Charlevoix.

I still have a year to think about it.

Additionally, along with the idea of change in a new year, you may have noticed a couple of changes in the way this week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier looks, specifically the headlines to our On the record, Beacons of Blessing and Obituaries sections. These are just a few of the style changes you will see in the Courier over the coming months in an effort to give the newspaper a "fresh" look.

Feel free to let us know what you think of these changes or offer some of your own ideas.

I hope everyone has a fun, safe and prosperous new year and new millennium.

Hunting season does more than just thin a herd

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Someone once described ecology as the study of how everything is connected to everything else.

As the definition suggests, ecology is an extremely complicated thing. Only in the last few years have ecologists begun to learn some of the complex truths about how the natural world works.

What has been most interesting to me about those complex truths is that they seem to fly in the face of what we are likely to call common sense. Our common sense about the natural world is often what we wish it were, rather than what it is.

By making careful measurements of what happens in the world of plants and animals we can and have learned some pretty important things that are not yet widely understood and that seem to defy common sense.

For example, would you believe that caterpillars and other insects eating the leaves of trees could cause those trees to grow faster? In an ordinary forest with a number of different kinds of trees, the effect that leaf eating insects have on tree growth is not simple, but the truth in the first sentence of this paragraph is genuinely incontestable.

Reliable people have made careful measurements and when insects eat up to one quarter of the total leaf surface on forest trees, the forest actually grows faster and the whole forest produces more wood.

Of course that doesn't mean that the caterpillars eating the leaves of a tree growing in your yard are helping that tree. It only works in a forest with a multitude of different trees and other kinds of living things that are there.

What this uncommon sense means in practical terms is that while you may help the tree in your yard by spraying to control the caterpillars, you may actually hurt the whole forest and reduce the amount of wood products that might come from it.

Almost as difficult to believe is the effect that large predators can have on the natural communities they are part of. There is sound evidence from careful measurements that when you remove coyotes from some of our western grasslands, the amount of plant matter produced and the number of kinds of different plants actually go down.

There is equally good evidence that removing large predators like wolves and mountain lions, which used to live in all of Michigan, causes a dramatic drop in the number of different kinds of birds, plants and small animals.

The exact reasons for these strange changes are not always clear, but the careful measurement and counting of kinds of creatures in many parts of the world have established — without much fear of contradiction — that removing large predators — which we humans have been very good at doing — causes remarkably important changes in almost everything else that lived where the predators did.

With the wolves just beginning to return and mountain lions completely gone from Michigan, we are the only large predators left and we need to perform the job of those predators if we wish to live in a biologically complex world.

There is a connection between the number of deer killed each fall in Michigan and how many kinds of small songbirds we have. Fewer deer means more songbirds and even more wildflowers; not because the deer are injuring the songbirds or even eating the wildflowers, but because all those creatures are a part of an extraordinarily complex system that we are beginning to understand.

Anyone professing some love for nature and its multitude of diverse kinds of creatures should be happy to have an effective hunting season for deer in Michigan. If we can't or won't let the wolves and mountain lions do it, then we had better take responsibility.

Act like a predator, make the world a richer place. Do your part for birds and wildflowers by supporting deer hunting in Michigan.

Recycling such a success, the bins are overflowing

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Recycling has been a big hit in Charlevoix, but some residents are saying maybe the program has mushroomed beyond its capacity.

"Things have been going along very well. From the very beginning we have had a good response," recycling committee member Shirley Roloff said.

However, the positive response from residential recyclers has also led to bins located at the site of the county jail to reach capacity and in some cases overflow, turning potential recyclers away.

According to recycling committee member Larry Levengood, cardboard has most commonly been the first bin to fill. Both he and Roloff agreed that the increased rate at which the cardboard bin is filling, as opposed to the others, probably reflects use of the site by businesses.

"Businesses may be using the cardboard bin, but the site is for residential use only. We hope they (businesses) would call their own hauler and get their own contract," Roloff said.

Roloff added that the committee expected to see increased volumes of recyclables following the holiday season.

Both said that the bins are checked on a daily basis and when a full bin is located Waste Management, the contracted hauler, is contacted. Waste Management then has 24 hours to respond.

However, there were procedural differences that apply to cardboard pickup. Until about a week ago, Waste Management would only pickup cardboard on Mondays and Wednesdays.

This stipulation was changed and now the cardboard, like the other bins, will be picked up after 24 hour notice. Levengood hopes that the procedural change will help keep the bin accessible to area residents.

Problems associated with cardboard recycling are the most common. Upon starting up the program here in Charlevoix the management team at the Emmet County Transfer Station warned the recycling committee not to have cardboard capabilities right away.

The Charlevoix station heeded the warning, but according to Levengood they may have added the cardboard bin too quickly. When it comes to cardboard the new location in Boyne City is realizing the same problems as the local recycling station.

Recyclers can help create more room for their cardboard and lessen the time lapse between pickups by crushing boxes they put into the bin. Levengood said a crushed box requires much less capacity than one that is intact.

In terms of other bins like plastic, tin or paper products being full Levengood urges recyclers to check the other compartment. There are two compartments allotted to each material.

In relation to bins reaching capacity, Roloff explained the trend she has seen. She said that cardboard fills the most quickly, while newspapers, magazines and catalogs are the second most commonly used bin, then plastics and lastly tin.

Roloff expects to have a pickup of hazardous materials some time in the spring, summer or fall.

Four new year resolutions that will enrich your life

By FR. JIM GUNN, RECTOR Christ Episcopal Church

Beacons of Blessing

Whenever Dec. 31 looms on the chronological horizon, we start to hear talk about "New Year's Resolutions."

Many people start off seeing the transition from one year to another as an opportunity to somehow start over, to "turn over a new leaf." However, those resolutions that were adopted with so much enthusiasm and motivation tend to get shipwrecked, often before the end of January!

I would like to quote to you a verse from the Bible which points to the possibility of four resolutions and I will guarantee that your life will be enriched if you can keep these resolutions throughout the year of 2001.

The verse is Acts 2:42 and, in the New International Version, it says, "They devoted themselves to the apostle's teaching and to the fellowship, to the breaking of bread and to prayer."

By my reading that verse speaks of the early Christians dedicating their lives to four things: Reading the Bible, meeting with others, worshipping and praying.

To devote yourself to the apostles' teaching is to seek to know what believers have come to understand about God and His will. The most complete repository for that knowledge is the Holy Bible.

To read God's Word is to invite

Him to instruct our minds and our spirits in His ways. 2 Timothy 3:16-17 describes the nature and purpose of the Bible: "All Scripture is God-breathed and is useful for teaching, rebuking, correcting and training in righteousness, so that the man of God may be thoroughly equipped for every good work."

To come together with others in fellowship is far, far more than a few minutes over coffee after church on Sunday. It is sharing our lives and encouraging and upbuilding the lives of others so that we may be better servants of God.

One of the most prominent images for the Church in the New Testament is the Body of Christ — it doesn't make much sense to think of a body that is spread all over the place!

The breaking of bread is not another way of talking about early church potluck suppers; it is often used in the New Testament to speak of Holy Communion and I would say that, in general, it can refer to coming together for worship.

There are more benefits and reasons for that than can be touched on in a brief piece like this. Let me just mention what is found in Hebrews 10:24-25: "And let us consider how we may spur one another on toward love and good deeds. Let us not give up meeting together, as some are in the habit of doing, but let us encourage one another — and all the more as you see the Day approaching."

Finally we come to the point of prayer. I preached a series of sermons during the Advent Season on "Four Qualities of Christians Preparing for the Coming King."

One of those qualities was prayerfulness and I cannot stress too strongly the importance of our communication with God. Earlier this year I taught a nine week course on prayer and I still believe that is only scratching the surface.

Again, let me hold up just one brief word from scripture: "Do not be anxious about anything, but in everything, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to God. And the peace of God, which transcends all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 4:6-7, NIV)

In conclusion, let me say that, as good as those four resolutions are, you can keep them all on a regular basis and your life will not truly be enriched unless you first and foremost devote yourself to an even more basic resolution.

It is my prayer that each and every one of us make and keep the resolution to come to know Jesus better during the course of 2001.

Damage estimated around $10,000 inside Star School VANDALS

She said that it had been there as long as she could remember.

The vandals took an ax to the piano's keys. Farley believes the damage caused is irreparable, but they will attempt to have the keys redone and will some day hear the piano's melodies again.

Those on-scene explained that the school house recently hosted a community Christmas play and commonly would have school children come to experience an afternoon in an old school house. The society members' chalk Christmas greeting was still printed on the chalkboard.

Prior to this incident, members of the Eveline Township community had come together to restore the school house as closely as possible to its original appearance and had since been utilizing the location as somewhat of a community meeting place.

Farley added that her mother was once a student at the school house and the destruction caused by the vandals had really hit home.

"They destroyed everything except for the picture of Jesus. They broke every piece of glass in the building. They did not take anything, they just destroyed everything. We figure the damages are close to $10,000. We have no insurance; this is a little community building," Farley said.

Community members have gathered to help board the windows and a donor came forward with $1,000 to kick-start the cleanup. The Charlevoix County Sheriff's office is offering a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest of the responsible person or persons.

Citizens with information have been asked to contact Sheriff Lasater or Detective/Sergeant Rex Behling at (231) 547-4461.

Water treatment plant keeps supply pollution-free

WATER

Creswell added that the plant is currently looking to make a transition from the pure chlorine gas they are currently using to an alternative he called, "a type of hypo-chloride."

He said that the hypo-chloride is safer to handle and does not require the hazardous containment of the pure chlorine gas. The gas is currently housed separate from the building.

The plant also adds fluoride to the water — fluoride strengthens teeth and occurs naturally at low levels in water.

It also has a contained room holding a third substance, ammonia, but Creswell said that the plant has never had to use ammonia. They would only have to put in the chemical if the water was heavily polluted.

When looking out of the plant's laboratory window a visitor has a view of Lake Michigan with the lighthouse to the right and Southdown to the left. When asked if this heavy industrial site located close to the intake valve poses a threat to water quality Creswell replied it is not an immediate threat.

Creswell said that this concern has been raised by local environmental group WATCH. The group sees the presence of two remaining covered kiln dust piles at the Southdown site as potential pollutants, he added.

In order to respond to these concerns, the treatment plant has made plans to do additional water quality testing to ensure leaching from the two piles has not occurred. The Department of Environmental Quality has told Creswell that the additional testing would be adequate to cover the threat.

Ways to keep those resolutions

For many, making New Year's resolutions is the easy part of the New Year. Keeping those resolutions is much more difficult.

University of Michigan psychology Prof. Christopher Peterson gives suggestions on how to make resolutions so that they are easier to keep, and tips on how to keep them:

1) Choose a habit to change that is not so deeply ingrained that it is impossible to dent it.

2) Take stock of the bad habit so you know what you are up against: What is it; how often do you do it; what are the circumstances?

3) Have a specific (concrete) goal in mind: "Losing 15 pounds" is a better goal than "getting into better shape."

4) Acknowledge intermediate steps and avoid black-white thinking in evaluating your progress.

5) Make a public declaration of your intent: Shame and humiliation can be powerful motivators.

6) Find a partner in change: Misery loves miserable company.

7) Cultivate a replacement activity: It is easier to say no to one thing while also saying yes to another.

8) Try to change your routine and surroundings; this will help dislodge the habit.

9) Don't resort to bizarre strategies (like grapefruit and vodka diets to lose weight) that you cannot sustain for the rest of your life.

10) The best advice is just to forget about it all: Learn to love yourself the way you are.

For more information, contact Peterson at (734) 764-6567 or chrispet@umich.edu.

YOUR HEALTH

How a simple conversation can lead to injury

F. James Stewart, M.D.

'Your health'

We hear them in restaurants, theaters and airports, and even watch people shopping while talking on the phone. Now we find people driving their cars while talking on the phone — cellular phones have become an integral part of our daily experiences.

Since their introduction in 1983, the market for cellular phones has expanded as they have become more compact, easier to use and so utilitarian that we are taught to believe that we shouldn't be without one.

A study in 1988 found that 85 percent of cell phone users admitted that they used them occasionally while driving their automobile. With an estimated 80 million users, this becomes a significant number.

Is this a safe practice? Can we recommend this? Nope. There is one thing that everyone looking at driving and cell phone use agrees on: Talking on the phone does not make you a safe driver.

One study found that talking on the phone quadruples your risk of becoming involved in a collision. This represents the same risk level as driving with a blood alcohol content of 80 milligrams percent. We can go to jail, pay big fines and spend lots of quality time with parole officers when we drink and drive.

Phoning and driving is associated with all varieties of careless roadwork, from driving on the wrong side of the road, speeding, striking fixed objects, running off the road and overturning the vehicle.

It appears to be the inattention or distraction provided by the phone that causes our driving to suffer. Studies indicate that the average cell phone call consumes about 2 minutes and 30 seconds.

You can create a lot of mischief in two-and-a-half minutes of careless driving.

Carrying on a social conversation on a cell phone while driving at 50 miles per hour adds six car lengths or 96 feet to your stopping distance over non-phone driving.

One study of cell phone accidents found that as many as one-third of the drivers did not respond to the impending collision at all, but continued to talk until the point of impact.

In 1996, the Cellular Telecommunications Industry Association conducted a large study that concluded that cell phone use in cars produced a 34 percent higher risk of having an accident. Repeated studies have confirmed the early report and now lawmakers are beginning to take notice.

Australia, Brazil and Italy now have strict laws against cell phone use while driving, and in this country many townships and county boards are writing laws against the use of cell phones while operating a motor vehicle.

Washington State has written a motor vehicle code that permits the use of "hands-free" communication only, such as speaker phones or headphones. Since the law was written, several large studies have shown that even these phones are dangerous and distracting.

It's the conversation and the distraction of communicating with someone outside of the vehicle that creates the danger that it does.

But Santa just brought you a new cell phone and you are probably going to use it someday while you are driving. Here are some tips about how to use it:

- Get to know your phone. Learn to use speed dial and redial. Learn to memorize the phone keypad so you can use the speed dial function without taking your attention from the road.

- Position your phone within easy reach. Be certain that you can reach it without taking your attention off the road. If there is an incoming call, let the voice mail answer it for you.

- Suspend conversation during hazardous driving. Let the person you are speaking with know that you are behind the wheel, and stop talking if the driving becomes more difficult.

- Remember, as a driver your first responsibility is to pay attention to the road. Don't read from notes or an address book while driving.

- Plan to make your calls before entering traffic.

- Don't engage in stressful or emotional conversations that will be distracting. They can be the most dangerous of all. Be certain to inform the person you're conversing with that you are in traffic. It will likely change the tone of the conversation.

- Use your phone to call for help, if needed and use it to help others if necessary.

Cell phones are here to stay with an estimated 40,000 new users buying one each day. It would help if everyone learned to use them in a responsible way. Be careful.

City may appoint planner for marina project soon

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The city was recently awarded a grant to fund the local share of the Wharfside acquisition and demolition, part of the shore-side renovation planned for downtown parks, but the marina expansion specifics are still undecided.

In a recent interview City Manager Mike Weisner said that the city may appoint a planning official to integrate the public's ideas and concerns surrounding the project.

Public hearings will also be planned in order to coordinate project plans and community desires.

Downtown Development Authority Chairman Hugh Mason said that the appointment of a planning individual to oversee the project's progression will most likely be discussed at the group's January meeting.

WATCH is one group that plans to comment on the dock expansion plan for the project. WATCH director, Jerry Puhl said that the environmental group does not agree with the extent of the proposed marina changes.

"Our organization is against the project especially to the extent that the city has proposed to do it. The marina expansion encroaches on the beauty of the lake and downgrades the natural, pristine beauty of the area. It's the lake that makes Charlevoix what it is," Puhl said.

While Puhl does agree with plans to integrate a system of floating docks, he doesn't agree with the extent they are planned to reach. He said the environmental group feels that the proposed 100 feet the docks will extend is beyond what is necessary.

"The proposed floating docks are going out too far, they undermine the beauty of the area. They have spots for 100 foot boats, all you will be able to see is boats and nothing past them," he said.

The meeting of the Downtown Development Authority, where the park project planner may be appointed, will take place at 5:30 p.m. Jan. 10 in city council chambers at city hall.

Community health joins hospice coalition

A coalition of four area hospices has recently formed.

The coalition includes a combined service area of six counties, which are: Charlevoix County Hospice/Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, Hospice of Little Traverse Bay, Hospice of the Straits and Hospice of Sunrise Shore — together providing supportive care to patients and their families at the end of their lives.

The coalition's goal is to improve the quality of life for people at the end of life so that they may take life's final journey with dignity and respect. It hopes to do this by increasing awareness of local hospice programs, providing outreach and educational material to churches, service clubs and community groups on end of life issues and facilitating discussions about the needs of area residents at the end of life.

Each hospice in the coalition will celebrate 20 years of service to the communities they serve. As non-profit organizations, they are lead by local community boards of directors, staffed by community residents and supported through local contributions.

"Our goal for the coalition is to address the needs of area residents through our agencies," Margaret Lasater of Charlevoix County Hospice/Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency said.

"The various hospice agencies have worked together in the past, but never within the context of a formal coalition. This is exciting for us and our communities as we build our relationships and provide more consistent care to the patients in our area."

Charlevoix County Hospice and Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency work in partnership with each other to provide skilled hospice nursing, social work support, volunteer and bereavement services to Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim counties, as well as Otsego County on a case-by-case basis.

"Individuals who need support for grief and loss issues are welcome to contact us," Lasater said.

gan Community Health Agency, said, "The purpose of the coalition is to share our expertise and resources in order to better serve our communities."

SCRAPBOOK

Five lives lost in boat blast

Editor's note: This article originally ran in the Jan. 6, 1937 edition of the Charlevoix Courier. It was submitted by Cynthia Postmus on behalf of the Charlevoix Public Library. It has been edited for content and size.

New Year's Day, traditionally hailed as the beginning of another year with its possibilities for happier and better things, brought to Beaver Island, and Charlevoix as well, the most tragic marine disaster in many years.

Five lives were lost in an explosion which riddled the Charlevoix-Beaver Island mail boat Marold II while engaged in salvaging gasoline from the tanker J. Oswald Boyd, abandoned on Simmons Reef, where it grounded in a storm early in November.

The victims were Capt. L.L. Hill, 83, captain of the Marold II, his son, Leon H., 50, the engineer, and Everett Cole, 35, his brother, Raymond, 30, and Bruce McDonough, 33, CO-owners of the Beaver Island Transit Co., operators of the ill-fated vessel.

The Marold II, replacing the freighter Rambler, which had made 24 salvaging trips, left this port at 8:15 Friday morning on its second trip to the tanker. That the ship and its crew had met possible disaster was ascertained here when, at 5:30 Friday afternoon, the coast guard lookout reported smoke arising from the vicinity of the Boyd. This report and an account of the coast guard participation in the subsequent investigation is detailed in the following report of Commander Oscar Smith of the Charlevoix coast guard unit, which follows:

"At 5:30 p.m. the station lookout report columns of smoke as from a steamer or from fire on board a steamer had appeared suddenly to the north and apparently a long distance away. Called the officer in charge, Beaver Island station, who verified the direction and location of the wreck of the steamer J. Oswald Boyd, on Simmons Reef. It was also ascertain that the Marold II had left Charlevoix in the early morning hours to go to the wreck to load gasoline. On the possibility that an accident may have occurred in connection with the loading of gasoline by the Marold II, the station lifeboat was launched and the officer in charge and three men set out for Simmons Reef, 42 miles north of Charlevoix.

"Considerable ice was encountered in the trip which delayed the time of arrival at the scene of the accident. Arrived there about 11:30 p.m. Found the Mackinac Island and Beaver Island lifeboats had already arrived and were cruising about in the vicinity.

"On getting near the wreck, it was found that the Marold II had blown up and burned. The entire metal deck, the funnel, and other metal parts from the Marold II were thrown across the deck of the Boyd. Both boats were still burning. On the Marold II the fire was from a couple of oil barrels resting on the part of the stern projecting a little above water, while on the Boyd there was considerable fire from amidships to the bow. As there was no fire on the Boyd from amidships to the stern, there was a possibility that there might still be life on board that part of the ship. Surfman Fred Looze and Surfman Fred Clayton managed to get on board and reach the after deck of the Boyd, but were unable to accomplish a through search on account of the intense heat, fumes and smoke blown from the burning forward part to the after deck by a strong easterly wind. Took the men off the burning ship and pulled away with the lifeboat to await daylight.

"Shortly after midnight, sent the Beaver Island lifeboat back to their station to report to the district commander what had happened and what steps were being taken. The Mackinac Island lifeboat cruised to the westward looking for any small boats that may have gotten away before the explosion took place.

"As the Charlevoix lifeboat pulled away from the burning wrecks to join the other lifeboat, a heavy explosion took place in the wrecks, followed shortly afterwards by another loud explosion which had the effect of diminishing the intensity of the fires. Cruised about in search of smaller boats until daylight and then returned to the burning boats. During the night we were joined by the freighter Rambler from Charlevoix.

"On approaching the wrecks after daylight, it was found that the fire on the Marold II was apparently out, but the Boyd was still burning amidships and near the bow. To the leeward of the wrecks the surface of the water was covered by oil from which with broken ice fields to make conditions for contact with the wrecks by lifeboat very bad. When contact was made, put two men, Quentin R. Duham and Fred Looze, on board the Boyd. The men searched the ship from bow to stern, finding two badly burned and charred bodies and several pieces of bodies. While searching for and loading the burned bodies into the lifeboat, the freighter Rambler, with Archie Cross, Joe Sendenberg, Ulysses McCann, Emil Pischner and Buddy White aboard, came up within hailing distance and offered to stand by to give aid in case of explosion taking place.

"From finding the bodies along with the wreckage of the decks, funnel, davits and other metal parts from the Marold II blown on top of the Boyd, it left little doubt but that all on the ship had been killed by the explosion and resultant fire. On account of heavy sea running and the fast driving ice floes and fields, a search of the lake bottom around the wrecks for bodies by grappling was not possible.

guards, were identified Sunday as Everett and Raymond Cole by Dr. D.S. Nettleton, dentist. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon from the Methodist church and burial was at Brookside cemetery. Both men are survived by their widows and Raymond a small son, in addition to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Garret Cole, of Nomad, Beaver Island, and other relatives.

Bruce McDonough is survived by his young widow and an infant daughter, besides his parents, brothers and sisters and other relatives. Capt. Hill, who at one time owned the Hill Steamboat Co., of Kenosha, Wis., had been operating the Marold II on the Beaver Island run for several years. He at one time was also part owner of the Hill-White Transit Co., of Milwaukee, Wis. His company operated the freighters Sheboygan, Waukegan, Kenosha, City of Marquette, and other boats between Chicago, Milwaukee, and upper Lake Michigan points. The company went out of business in 1928. Hill is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Mark Kindt, Mrs. Ruby Wons, wife of Tony Wons, Chicago radio entertainer, of Kenosha, Wis.; and Mrs. John Hazel, of Prescott, Ariz.; also a son, W.E. Hill, of Grand Haven.

Everett Cole, recognized as one of Beaver Island's most prominent and aggressive business men, owned the Strang Hotel and a garage at St. James, besides other large real estate holdings. He was a majority stockholder in the Beaver Island Transit Co., and associated with him were his brother, Raymond, Bruce McDonough and brother, Lloyd. The interest of Nels Lafreniere had been but recently acquired. The organization owned the freighter Rambler and was purchasing the Marold II from the Hills. An airplane acquired last winter furnished transportation of mail and passengers when ice tied up boat navigation. Cole held a four-year government contract to carry the island mail. Only last week he had established and office here to carry on his numerous business enterprises.

The transit company had been salvaging gasoline from the tanker Boyd for about six weeks. Until last week the operations were carried on by the Rambler, which is understood to have made 24 trips, carrying 9,000 gallons each trip. With ice threatening to stop operations, the Marold, regularly assigned to mail and freight service between Charlevoix and St. James, was transferred to the job because of its steel hull and larger capacity. The Marold had made one trip, carrying and estimated load of 17,000 gallons. The gasoline was being sold locally and in adjoining counties, and other consignments were taken as far as Cleveland, O., by truck.

Early reports following explosion of the Marold II were to the effect that several local persons were aboard the boat. Later investigation proved them false, although revealing that perhaps fate alone saved at least a half dozen Charlevoixians from death. New Year's being a holiday, several had planned to accompany the Marold on a sight-seeing trip. That they failed to be at the ship for its early departure proved a happy coincidence.

That Charlevoix was fortunate in still another respect is gained through the report of a Brevort resident named Gustafsen on the force of the explosion which destroyed the Marold. Gustafsen claimed to have witnessed the tragedy from the north shore mainland, a distance of 10 miles. Stated the blast shook the ground at that point. Looked at from this angle, it is not hard to picture what might have happened if the explosion had occurred when the Marold was unloading gas at the foot of Mason street.

Investigation by the federal marine inspection service was an aftermath of the tragedy.

License of the freighter Rambler, which was to replace the Marold II on the Beaver Island run, was suspended by Inspectors Bernie Gellick and Hugh Mulligan, of Grand Haven, until the boat is steamed out to remove traces of gasoline accumulated in the salvage operations. The inspectors found the Rambler's hold saturated with gasoline which, due to its content of lubricating oil, was said to be slow in evaporating. Until the Rambler passes inspection, fish boats will be used for transportation between the mainland and Beaver Island.

In regards to the Marold II, the inspectors were quoted as having stated that while criminal negligence was apparent due to the fact operators of the Marold failed to observe even the most ordinary precautions in handling the gasoline, no charges would follow.

Two killed in US-31 accident

Icy roads caused a four vehicle accident that claimed the life of a 11-year-old Charlevoix boy and a 67-year-old Bay View woman and sent two others to the hospital with serious injuries around 9 p.m. Saturday on US-31, just north of Burgess Road.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, the accident occurred when a Dodge Caravan driven by Elijah R. Pace, 16, of Charlevoix, lost control on icy roads, crossed the centerline and was struck by a Jeep Wrangler driven by Brian J. Hater, 19, of Ironton, traveling in the opposite lane.

The Caravan was then hit broadside by a Toyota Camry driven by Gaylor Jones, 68, of Bay View. Gaylor's passenger, Joyce Bailey Jones, 67, of Bay View, was killed and pronounced dead at the scene.

The Caravan was struck a third time by a Ford Taurus driven by Nicholas L. Dennison, 18, of Walloon Lake.

Luke T. Pace, 11, of Charlevoix and a Northwest Academy student, was pronounced dead at the scene. He was a passenger in Elijah's vehicle.

As of Monday, Elijah and Gaylor were both in intensive care at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey with multiple injuries, including closed-head injuries.

None of the occupants in the Hater or Dennison vehicles were injured.

According to Lasater, all of the victims were wearing their seatbelts at the time of the accident.

Local man dies in automobile accident Jan. 3

By JEREMY MCBAIN

A traffic accident around noon on Jan. 3 near the intersection of Boyne City and Charlevoix roads claimed the life of a 92-year-old Hayes Township man and sent two women to the hospital.

Stewart Boal

Stewart Boal was killed after he lost control of his vehicle on snowy roads and it slid into the path of another vehicle driven by Gwen Rauch of Hayes Township.

Gwen and Shawna Rauch, a passenger in the vehicle, were taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital, treated and released. However, Shawna was pregnant at the time of the accident and gave birth shortly after. Her baby was sent to Northern Michigan Hospital.

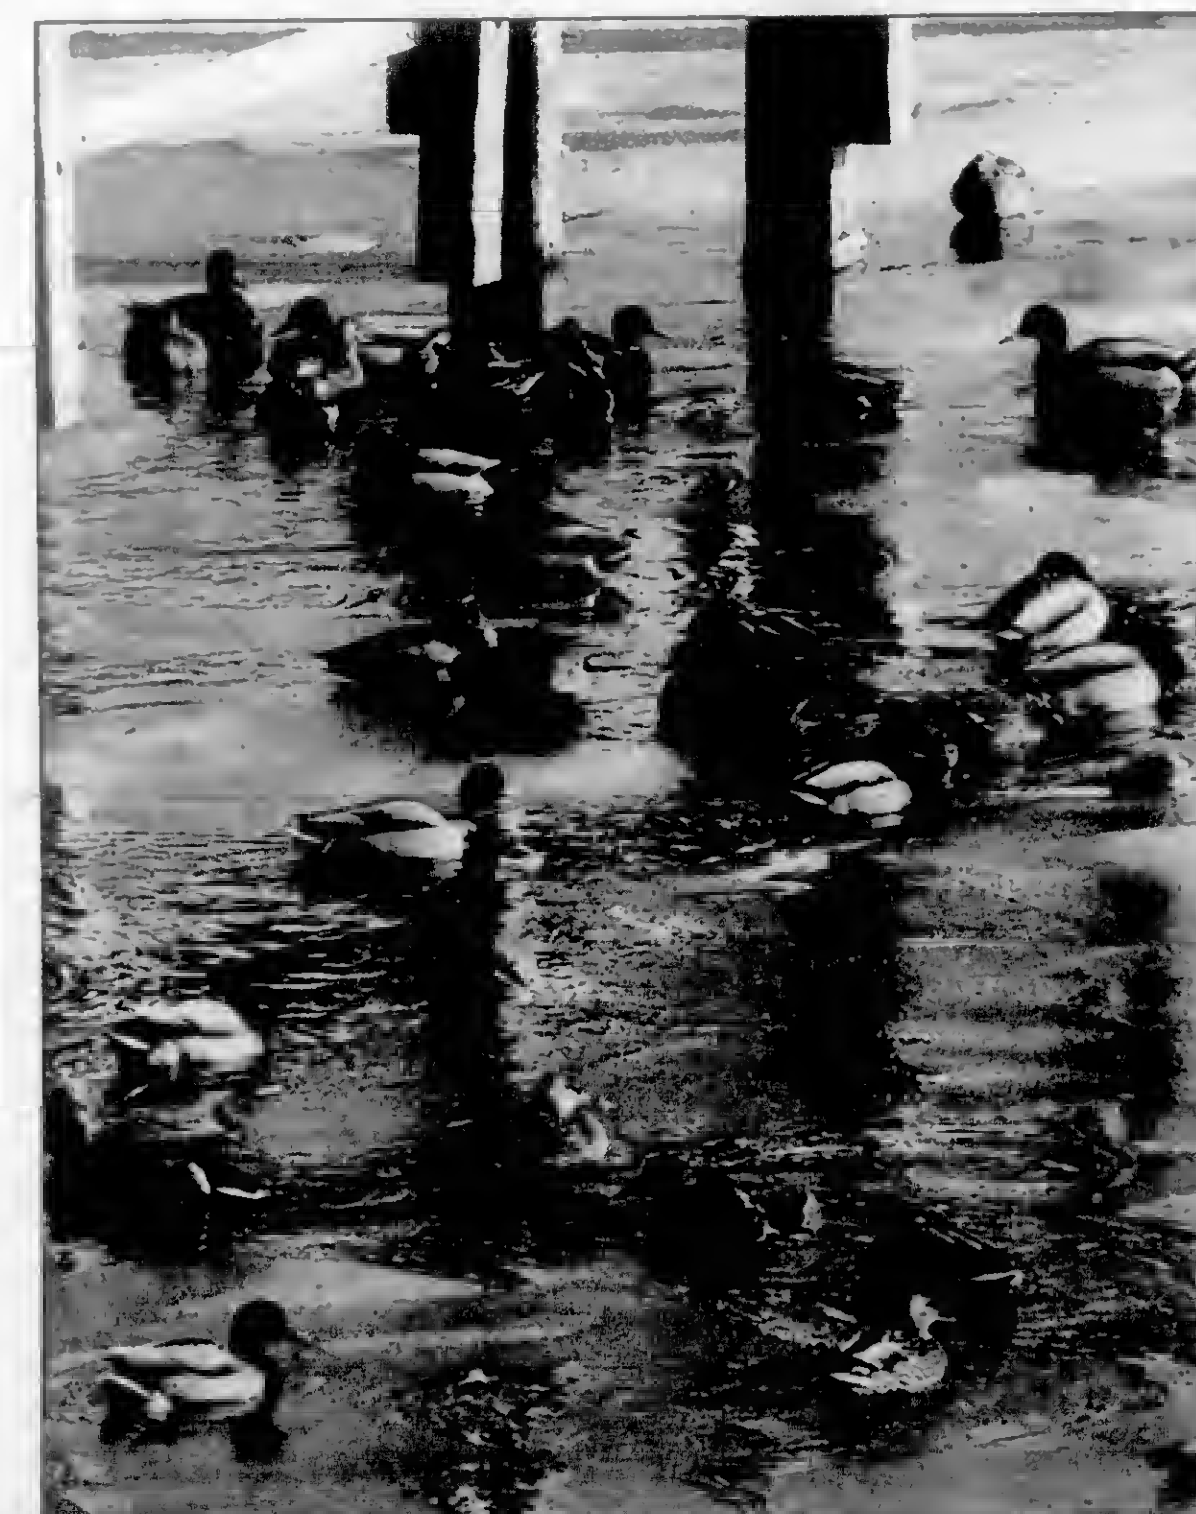

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, the accident was similar in many ways to one that killed a 26-year-old Charlevoix Township woman just before Christmas on US-31. In both accidents, the cause was attributed to road conditions and the person killed was the driver of the vehicle that lost control.

"No one was doing anything wrong. There was no excessive speed or no bad driving," Lasater said. "In both of the accidents, as I responded to them, even I was doing some sliding."

Everyone involved in this crash was wearing their seatbelts at the time.

Lasater said these two accidents show unless your travel is urgent, it is best to wait for the road conditions to improve before venturing out.

Star School case one of a string of crimes

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A recent incident of property destruction in Eveline Township spurred an investigation that lead to the arrest of four East Jordan area males who will be charged not only with the ransacking of the school house, but also with a laundry list of other crimes.

The most recent incident the "young adult" perpetrators were involved in was at the Star School House, a community facility on the corner of Wern Road and Loomis Road where they inflicted an estimated $10,000 in damage.

However, according to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater over New Year's weekend deputies heard confessions from all the men involved, including the mention of their role in multiple other incidents reported within the last six months.

The men were caught as a result of evidence, confessions and tips from outside sources.

A press release printed by the sheriff's department, records uncovering of the men's involvement in five home invasions, eight breakings and enterings, 24 larcenies, seven mailbox bombings and malicious destruction of property to traffic signs/lights and several deer poachings.

Deputies seized a sawed off rifle, seven pipe bombs and a quantity of commercial high explosives as well as recovering approximately $5,000 in property taken from the home invasions, breaking and enterings and larcenies.

Suspects also confessed to eight home invasions on Drummond Island and the malicious destruction of a vehicle on M-134 near Cedarville, the sheriff's department said.

The suspects were arrested Sunday and were formerly charged with the aforementioned crimes yesterday.

The three felony charges carry heavy maximum sentences. The charge of using explosives to damage property carries a maximum 20 year sentence. The home invasion charge is punishable by a 15 year maximum sentence and the breaking and entering charges may result in a 10 year maximum sentence.

Gene Farley, a member of the Star School House Historical Society said that he was glad to hear the incident at the community building was their "stumbling block."

"The Star School happened to be their downfall. If that's what it took to catch them and get them off the street then you have to look at the flip side of the coin, they were caught before someone got hurt. That seemed to be the direction they were headed in," Farley said.

Lasater said he would like to recognize the stalwart efforts of Deputy Sheriff Rex Behling, Deputy Sheriff Sherry Sproul and Detective Sergeant Don Sproul who were involved in this investigation.

"The citizens of Charlevoix County should be very proud of these officers who worked diligently for several days to solve these crimes, even working beyond their duty hours," he added.

Snowmobilers go through the ice near Ironton launch

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Father and son snowmobilers ventured out onto Lake Charlevoix near the Ironton boat launch off of Fifth Street and learned the hard way that the ice was not thick enough to sustain their weight.

"It is most definitely too early to be out on the ice," Fire Department Shift Commander and incident rescue responder Lyle Gennett said.

The Charlevoix Fire Department received a call from William H. Klingbeil at 11:42 a.m. Dec. 31. Klingbeil said that he and his son Fred Klingbeil of Cleveland, Ohio together riding one rented snow machine, had recently fallen through the ice but both were ok.

According to Gennett, Klingbeil was concerned because his helmet was left beside the hole where they had gone through — he didn't want anyone to get the wrong idea.

William Klingbeil said that he and his son had rented the machine earlier that morning and were riding along the shoreline for approximately five miles when they ventured out a little further and the ice gave.

He said that they had seen ice shanties about a mile and a half out and thought that if the ice was thick enough to sustain the weight of the shanty it would hold the snow machine, him and his son.

"This was the first time I had been swimming in Lake Charlevoix in four years," Klingbeil said.

He added that he was very thankful to be riding with his son who was able to pull him out. The two then crawled across the ice, back to shore, where a fisherman who had seen them go through was waiting to help.

The fire department arrived on scene and marked the hole where the sled had gone through. Gennett said they do this to warn others of the hole.

Gennett added that the ice in this particular incident had cracked and split beyond the initial hole and the area itself was extremely unstable and not suited for walking on.

He said that the practice of marking the hole with trees may be changed in the near future. A colorful flag is more easily distinguished, he said. In the past, from far away people have confused the tree itself as being a snowmobile.

The 1998 rented Ski-Doo was submerged in 40 feet of water until a recovery team arrived Thursday and pulled it out.

"It looked expensive," Klingbeil said of the machine's appearance after being recovered.

He said that two divers arrived with a truck. One diver went down and attached "balloons" to the machine which subsequently surfaced. They then attached a long rope to the snowmobile and pulled it out using a truck.

Klingbeil will be returning to Florida for the rest of the winter but will be back in Charlevoix this summer, he has summered here for 60 years.

"In my opinion people should not be out on the ice with them (snowmobiles) hardly at all. When out on the water you don't know what you could be getting into. There is a lot of land around to ride on. They shouldn't have to ride on the water," Gennett said.

Filling spot on council too easy

You have to love how easy it is for the Charlevoix City Council to replace an outgoing member.

They don't seem to have to ask if anyone would like to apply for the position, give a little time to accept applicants, carefully study them and nominate a person they feel would be willing to assume the responsibilities of a vacated elected office.

All this council has to do is appoint someone they know is interested in a position on council at the same meeting the seat opens up. As for the ward represented by the seat, there is no need to have any others living in it apply for the position, because City Council doesn't need applications or input from voters to decide.

What we are talking about is the recent appointment of Charlevoix resident Bernie DeVries to the city council seat originally held by Valerie Barnes. Barnes, who ran unopposed for the seat in November, had to resign at the last council meeting because she will be moving outside the ward she represents.

DeVries, a former city council member who also had to resign when he moved out of his former ward, was appointed to the seat the same night Barnes vacated it. According to Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell, he knew DeVries was interested in another position and when Barnes' seat opened up, it happened to be in a ward DeVries lives in. So Russell asked him if he would like it.

Now, DeVries is known to have been a pretty good council member in the past and may even be great in his newly appointed seat on council. That is not the problem.

The problem is, what about the other voters in that ward? Recently, a council seat was vacant in Traverse City, but that council did not just appoint someone to the seat as soon as it opened up. That council asked for applications from residents interested in this open seat and decided how to fill it from there.

Charlevoix voters in the ward formerly represented by Barnes were not given that opportunity. They were not even given the opportunity to voice their opinion on who they would like as representation.

The decision was made for them and in the matter of one meeting they had a new representative on city council.

This leaves us wondering, "Why the rush?"

It also leaves a city ward with a representative they did not vote into office for the next two years and had no other say on.

Letters to the editor

Downtown not accessible to the handicap

Editor:
Growing up in Charlevoix, I remember a woman by the name of Fran Martin who was confined to a wheelchair. Many will remember her as well.

Fran used to go everywhere in her electric wheelchair; well almost everywhere.

On many occasions when a rain would pop in, Fran would be sitting under the awning of one of the downtown businesses. As a child I used to think she must just enjoy sitting outside and watching the rain come down.

Now many years later I see things much clearer. I have multiple sclerosis and much of the time I'm in a wheelchair.

We were downtown many times last summer. There are very few stores wheelchair accessible. At one point I came out of a store I was able to go in but upon exiting my chair got caught in a loose area of the exit and I went on my face.

The park rest room that the blue wheelchair access sign is not meant for those truly handicapped. The slope on the accesses crossing streets at the lights is not really safe.

I would like to see the city council men take an afternoon this spring, sit in wheelchairs and spend the day using the main streets of Charlevoix, try to shop or use the restrooms as a handicapped person.

Charlevoix is worried about tearing down buildings for park space. Let's first bring the town up to date and make it truly wheelchair accessible.

We wish to thank the many individuals, businesses and their employees for their most generous response to the Marine Corps Reserve program, Toys for Tots. Due to your generosity many children, from babies to 18 years old, had an enjoyable Christmas.

The toys were sorted and bags filled for local distribution from lists we had obtained from local sources. The overage was then forwarded to the Petoskey Salvation Army for distribution among their lists of children.

This year's program was a huge success. Thanks to you, who donated presents, money and time.

Snow accumulation already over last year's total in area

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

From October through half of the first week in the new year the local weather station recorded that Charlevoix had already been dumped on by more snow than all of last winter combined.

According to a database maintained by the Water Treatment Plant, as of Jan. 4 Charlevoix had seen 88 inches of snowfall while during the previous season, October 1999 through April 2000, 85.4 inches of snow fell total.

The average snowfall for Charlevoix in December is 26.6 inches. This year that statistic was blown out of the water — Charlevoix recorded 67.2 inches in December.

The current December numbers are just shy of the month's maximum of 68.1 inches that fell in December of 1989 (statistics tabulated from 1955 to the present.)

The winter of 1989-1990 recorded a total snow fall of 151.3 inches. However, Sam Creswell, cooperative weather observer for the National Weather Service for Charlevoix, said that similar December numbers do not dictate the course snowfall will take for the rest of this winter.

"I wouldn't even guess. It

(the snow) could stop and clear up, that's what happened last year, or it could snow clear into April. If I've learned anything over the years it's that you just don't know what the weather is going to do," he said.

While we are currently seeing snow fall in larger quantities than we are used to Creswell said winters around here are more mild than they were 10-12 years ago.

"I don't feel we've really had as severe winters as 12 years ago. I can't say why. We have had some good snow fall but not a lot of wind. We can handle 10, 12 even 14 inches of snow, but it takes quite a bit to bring everything to a halt," he said.

Some people have said that these "mild winters" may be the cause of low lake levels so, will this season's snow bring our lake water levels back up?

Creswell replied, "Probably not; that would take a lot of snow."

He explained that snow, especially the light and fluffy flakes we have been blanketed in, is not rich in water. He said that in six to seven inches of snow there is approximately 2.2 inches of water.

"There are a lot of inches of snow in an inch of water, but the lake level goes up and down. I'm sure it (the lake level) will start up again," Creswell said.

Creswell pointed out the winter from 1982-1983 when Charlevoix recorded only 39.6 inches of snow. This was the low from 1955 to present.

Creswell maintains that "mild" winters like that from 1982-83, coupled with the augmented efficiency of the street department, may lead drivers and residents to feel the harsh effects of winter a little less.

Creswell also explained that throughout different months during the season various townships will be hit harder, the mystical phenomenon commonly referred to as "lake effect."

However, he added that as winter wears on and the lake fills with snow and ice the shoreline will get more snow.

Wind direction also plays a role.

Creswell gave the example where the wind direction will cause Hayes Township to see mass snow accumulation and the city will have barely any. He said you can see drastic differences in snow conditions in just five miles.

Each day at the Water Treatment Plant a reading is taken of the high and low temperature, precipitation and snowfall. This information is reported to the National Weather Service once a month.

On Tuesday morning a Charlevoix resident reported seeing an explosion south of Beaver Island. After a search of the area, the Coast Guard determined the sight was caused by the moon or another natural phenomenon. (Above) A county sheriff deputy watches the lake for any signs of the explosion. 11-year-old and 67-year-old killed on US-31

ACCIDENT

"It was really bad (Saturday). I couldn't even travel to the accident scene over 35 mph myself," Lasater said. He stressed alcohol was not a factor in the accident.

According to Luke's mother, Paula Pace, the small boy — who would say he was 4 feet, 11 inches "STILL" — would make up for his size by being big in every other way.

"He was very confident in who he was," Paula said.

She said he was a passionate child who loved his big brothers, animals and music. Of the animals, Luke was a natural horseman who, until he enrolled at Northwest Academy, was "moving to Montana, where he would work on a ranch, drive at 14, fly fish and play his trumpet," Paula said.

Luke was called the grain-boy in the horse barn, where he knew everything that the horses needed.

"He had everything under control in the barn," Paula said. "He was one with the (horses). We have photos of him actually running with the horses."

Paula spoke of one time when Luke climbed into the middle of a round hay stack and laid down singing, while horses surrounded the stack and ate.

Counselors were on hand Monday at Northwest Academy as students mourned the loss of Luke.

Northwest Academy Principal Steve Bennett said news of the death hit the charter school's close-knit community hard.

As an administrator he has watched Luke grow and has had the honor of in some way shaping that growth, Bennett said. He added that to have lost him was like losing part of the Northwest family.

"In my opinion, he was flawless. He was an excellent student with a neat, spontaneous personality — he was very witty and fun," Bennett said.

Luke's mother enrolled him at Northwest in the fall of 2000. According to Bennett he had since established himself as an accomplished trumpet player and student.

Bennett struggled to hold back tears as he recalled Luke's impeccable solo performance at the Northwest jazz band's Christmas concert.

He stressed the significance of his musical gift and said that Luke's high level of performance was to soon be honored by a transition from the seventh grade band to a coveted chair in the advanced band.

Paula said Luke was fascinated by music, at 11 years old, he could talk about great jazz artists and folk artists.

She said she took him to a Lyle Lovett concert at Interlochen Arts Academy recently and he was "blown away."

"He had never seen a person use their voice and instruments like that," Paula said. "He said, 'Mom, that was so cool.'"

Paula added, while Luke may be gone, he is helping others as his corns and heart valves have been donated to another child.

While Luke's brother Elijah is currently listed in critical condition, Paula believes he will recover.

"I am more concerned about him emotionally," she said.

High school principal Gary Grundman described Elijah as a good kid — a member of both the cross country and track teams and also a member of the band.

"It has been a real challenge this morning (Jan. 8.) It's been a bad year," Grundman said of his difficulty in coping with the reality of the accident and of the other losses the Charlevoix community has endured due to harsh weather conditions.

Police, Charlevoix City Fire/Rescue, Charlevoix Township Fire Department, Michigan State Police and the Little Traverse Band of Odawa Police.

Paula would like to recognize her son's love for music and animals by having memorial contributions be made to the Northwest Academy Theater Fund or to the Charlevoix County Humane Society.

Boal remembered as energetic, full of ideas

BOAL

The sheriff's department was assisted at the scene of the Jan. 3 accident by the Charlevoix Township Fire Department, Charlevoix EMS and the Michigan State Police.

Lasater, who knew Boal, said Boal was a very quiet person who was very supportive of the community and always had a nice greeting.

"He was a good solid citizen and a good neighbor. I have never heard anyone say anything bad about him," Lasater said.

Boal's son, Ellis Boal, said his father was very energetic and active. He said, even at 92 years old, Boal was on his way to work when the accident occurred.

"He had a million ideas. He was very merry and everybody loved him. He also really cared about his family," Ellis said.

Boal was a well known businessman in Charlevoix and was the CEO of Pointes North in Charlevoix. He was also known for his athletic feats, one of which was when he won the 100 meter dash at the Michigan USA Track and Field Championships for his age group at 90 years old.

He born on Feb. 21, 1908 in Winnetka, Ill. When he was 6, he began spending his summers in Charlevoix with his family and worked on a farm.

Boal graduated from North Shore Country Day School in Winnetka, Ill. in 1925 and married his wife Susan (Ballard) in 1938.

In 1940, Boal started his first business, Randolph Laboratories, where he made fire extinguishers and he was the half-owner of a gold mine in Alaska.

Boal bought a farm house in Hayes Township in 1950, where he spend his summers. His winters were spent in Chicago, Ill. He also acquired his father's farm and raised sheep for a while.

In the 1970s, Boal turned the farm into the Windmill Farm Campground and moved to Charlevoix as a permanent resident in 1980. He later sold the land, which is now the Dunmaglas Golf Course.

Boal is survived by his wife, Susan, his sons, Stewart Boal Jr. and his wife Susan, Ellis Boal and his wife Marilyn; his daughter, Nina Duryee Boal and grandsons, Christopher Randall Boal and Stewart "Scott" McKendree Boal.

A memorial service will be given at 4 p.m. Feb. 17 at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix.

Cable upgrades another three weeks off in town

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Many Charlevoix residents south of the bridge who were told they were getting new cable channels by Dec. 1, 2000, are finding they must wait a little longer.

Last fall, Charter Communications, the cable provider in Charlevoix, informed its customers that they would be getting 12 new channels at the beginning of December.

However, at that time, only residents north of the bridge in Charlevoix received the channels. Residents on the south side of the bridge were told they must wait until Dec. 31.

Now, according to Charter spokesperson Heidi Argue, that wait has been extended for three more weeks due to weather and contractor delays.

She said in order for the cable company to provide the new channels to its customers, the cable system in Charlevoix had to be completely rebuilt. While it has been rebuilt on the northside of town, the southside has not.

"Contractors are working on a daily basis to get the system rebuilt," she said.

Argue added, as contractors complete sections of the system, some southside residents may see the new channels before others.

"This has been a very long time coming and is long overdue," she said.

Additionally, Argue said she is not aware of any price increases in the Charlevoix area related to these improvements in cable service yet.

Once the new system is installed, Charter customers in Charlevoix will receive The Outdoor Life Network, CNBC, Odyssey, Court TV, HGTV, Sci-Fi Channel, Animal Planet, Ewin, Speedvision, Bravo, The Travel Channel and Soapnet.

Channels are chosen according to consumer requests and what is available to the cable company in the area, Argue said. She added the company tries to balance the type of channels in order to provide something for all of their customers.

For more information on the new channels or the service, call Charter at (800) 545-0994.

Obituaries

Stewart Boal: Feb. 21, 1908 - Jan. 3, 2001

Stewart Boal, 92, died in a car crash on a snowy Charlevoix-Boyne City Road Wednesday morning, Jan. 3, 2001 on his way to work.

He was born in Winnetka, Ill., on Feb. 21, 1908. When 6 years old he began spending summers in Charlevoix at family property on the north side of Lake Charlevoix (then called Pine Lake.) With his brothers and sister he worked on the farm across the road for half a day and the rest of the day swam and boated on our beautiful lake. He worked hard, played hard and learned a lot.

He graduated from North Shore Country Day School in Winnetka in 1925. While a senior, he with a friend and a couple of guides, climbed Mount Edith Cavell, one of the highest on our continent. His Harvard class was 1929. He then was a "man about town" in Chicago until his marriage to Susan Ballard on April 20, 1938.

He started his own company in 1940, Randolph Laboratories, where a variety of fire extinguishers were made. The company prospered during World War II (a fire extinguisher in every tank) and the family grew with two sons and a daughter.

For a year and a half in the '40s he co-owned a gold mine in Candle, Alaska.

In 1950 his father, Ayres Boal, divided the lakefront property among his four children. At that time Stewart bought an old farm house built by a Methodist minister around 1880. It was situated high on a hill, across the road about a mile away. With energy and persistence he arranged to have the house moved and brought to its present location, surrounded by cedars, spruce and pines, with its beautiful view of the lake, especially the sunsets. They named it "Stewart's Folie."

Early in his Chicago career he started the Snow Chase Club, having become enamored of skiing during one high school year in Switzerland. The club was a smash hit with all of the Midwest wannabe skiers, and made many trips to LaCrosse, Wis., where Stewart had built the first rope tow in the Midwest.

Meanwhile, he and Susan were riding avidly to the hounds (drag hunt style) in outlying Chicago meadows and forests in the fall. In Charlevoix in the summers they had horses for the growing number of cousins who spent their summers in beautiful Hayes Township. For more fun and games, they had a lovely 27-foot sloop, Mimosa, to enjoy on local waters and even up to the North Channel.

Stewart acquired his father's farm (his choice) where he raised sheep in growing numbers, but alas kept losing money. So, the sheep were sold and in the '70s Windmill Farm Campground was inaugurated. The Boals ran it for 10 years with varying degrees of success. They had never camped a day or night in their lives, and so had to start from scratch. Meanwhile, Stewart and Susan had moved to Charlevoix as permanent residents in 1980.

Finally getting too old for the heavy-duty life, the farm property was sold, and it has now become Dunmaglas Golf Course.

Stewart's last major sporting adventure was at 90 years old, running the 100m dash for athletes aged 90 plus at the Michigan USA Track and Field Championships. He won!

His last business venture was the Pointes North Inn in Charlevoix. A few years ago Stewart and Susan went there thinking of buying a unit to use in the wintertime, where they would be out of the woods and into civilization. What happened? He bought one unit, then another, and another, until finally he became the CEO of his new venture. And what happened to the Boals? They still lived at Stewart's Folie in the woods and happily so.

Stewart is survived by his wife of 62 years, Susan Ballard Boal; two sons, Stewart Boal, Jr., and his wife, Susan Hutchins, and Ellis Ballard Boal and his wife, Marilyn Morehead; a daughter, Nina Duryee Boal; and two grandchildren, Christopher Randall Boal and Stewart (Scott) McKendree Boal.

For those who wish to give a gift in his memory, please consider Planned Parenthood, 1003 Spring Street, Petoskey, MI 49770; First Congregational Church, 101 State Street, Charlevoix, MI 49720; Crooked Tree Arts Council, 461 East Mitchell, Petoskey, MI 49770.

A memorial service will be at 4 p.m. Feb. 17 at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix, with supper to follow at 5 p.m.

On March 17 the interment will take place at Christ Church in Winnetka, Ill.

DeVries named to Barnes' former council seat

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Bernie DeVries, 55, of Charlevoix will be replacing Valerie Barnes, in representing the first ward in the Charlevoix City Council.

"I feel honored that the mayor and council thought enough of me to appoint me to serve the remainder of the term," DeVries said. He was appointed after Barnes resigned from her seat on council due to her pending marriage that will take her out of the ward.

Barnes said that she knew she may have to resign when she got engaged in August but was hoping that she and her fiancée would be able to find a home in the city. But she said they "couldn't work it out."

She formally let her decision be known Jan. 2.

Barnes handed her letter of resignation to each member of council just before the Jan. 2 council meeting got underway. DeVries was appointed to the first ward seat by the end of the meeting.

Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell said that Barnes had contacted him the morning of Jan. 2 to inform him that she had planned to submit her resignation at that evening's meeting.

Russell said that DeVries had already served on council, representing the third ward, but had relocated to the first ward. DeVries said that after the move he was still interested in serving on council but liked first ward representatives, Barnes and Norman "Boogie" Carlson.

He said he was content to wait for a spot to open.

Russell said that he knew of DeVries' interest in the position and called him after speaking with Barnes. Russell added that DeVries' experience played a major role in the council's decision to appoint him and Barnes agreed.

"I'm happy with Bernie. It was easier to resign knowing that Bernie would be taking my place," Barnes said.

While waiting for an opportunity to serve again on council DeVries joined the planning commission. After accepting the first ward council seat, he had to resign from his post on the planning commission. Barnes was reelected in the November primary and DeVries will be completing the two years remaining in her term.

"I look forward to getting more done on the Michigan Beach project," DeVries said.

When asked whether or not he is in support of the city's plan to build a viewing platform at the site of the old water tower DeVries responded, "I'll see what the city has planned, maybe there will be enough contention to shelf it. There is no use putting something in if the people don't want it."

15-year-old injured in Marion Center accident

A 15-year-old Charlevoix girl was treated for minor injuries following a one vehicle crash around 12 p.m. Jan. 7 on Marion Center Road, approximately one quarter mile south of Clark Road.

Samantha Joseph, of Charlevoix, was traveling south in a 1996 Dodge Caravan when she lost control as she entered a curve.

The van left the roadway and struck a large tree head on. The van bounced off the tree and slid backwards across Marion Center before coming to rest on the opposite shoulder.

Both airbags deployed upon impact, but Joseph complained of head pain. She was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by a Charlevoix City Ambulance where she was treated and released.

Her passenger Steven Closs, 31, also of Charlevoix, refused treatment. The van was totaled.

Investigation determined it was one of Joseph's first experiences in driving on snowy/icy roads.

Young anglers to be out on the ice this winter

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

This winter, ice fisherman will be joined on area lakes by a class of young anglers in pursuit of finned feasts.

The Charlevoix Elementary School has added the outdoor sport of ice fishing to its line-up of enrichment classes for students ages six to 12.

The junior ice anglers started in Nov. 2 and according to their leader, Executive Petty Officer Brad Adams of the United States Coast Guard, the students have since blossomed into well informed anglers.

"We are providing a platform to get kids in the outdoors, cold as it may be. Our ultimate goal is to turn kids into better fishermen than their parents are," Adams said.

Since November the group of 15-20 kids have met at the Coast Guard Station bi-weekly on Wednesdays. During these sessions the students learn important aspects of ice fishing including ice safety.

Department of Natural Resources marine biologist Jori Jonas also attends meetings and talks about a different species of fish; offering tips on everything from what they like to munch on to how you can identify them if you hook one.

A special meeting took place on Jan. 4 when the young anglers learned from special guest marine biologist Tim Smigielski about crappies, the sessions featured fish and also had a crash course in rigging equipment.

At the meeting kids curiously turned containers of live bait, closely inspecting their contents while seasoned anglers demonstrated knot tying tactics.

Everybody was gearing up for Saturday's big trip. They were supposed to head out on Susan Lake Saturday for their first of four, three hour afternoon outings on the ice. The trip was canceled due to ice conditions but, ice-permitting, was re-scheduled for Jan. 13.

Adams stressed that Coast Guardsmen went out on the lake first to check ice conditions and drill holes for the students. They will be conducting this safety test before each excursion.

Students are offered all of this information and guidance free of charge. Adams pointed out that the only expense beyond equipment costs is the elective for students to purchase the course hat.

"I say that there is zero cost because if the kids want to participate but they can't afford the equipment there is plenty to share. We can always come up with a pole," Adams said.

Joey Cates learns the ins-and-outs of a fisherman's great ice weapon, the tip-up, at the Jan. 4 meeting of the junior ice anglers. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Adams added that other students are welcome to join. The only thing they would have missed is ice safety which is a point that is stressed at each meeting.

The program is scheduled to be completed in February and may not be offered again next year.

After two and a half years in Charlevoix, Adams will be relocating to Alpena this spring and leaving next year's junior ice anglers program in need of a new leader.

"I'm hoping that a parent involved will pick up the torch next year when I leave," Adams said.

Library to have Children's Winter Activity Hour

The Charlevoix Public Library will have another year of the Children's Winter Activity Hour.

The activity hour takes place every year on Saturdays at the library in the lower level meeting room from 11 a.m. to noon.

It all begins Jan. 13 with an hour of "Fun with Music" with Marina LaBlance.

The next event is Jan. 20 with Erika Chamberlain from Harbor Health doing "Exercise and Fitness."

Jan. 27 will feature "Friends for Life," an hour of cute pets and how to care for them by Humane Educator Carole Heubotter.

In February when kids are complaining that they are bored and have nothing to do, bring them down to the library where on Feb. 3, it will have a real fire truck supplied by Lyle Gennett.

On Feb. 10 the library will have snow machines. This afternoon will showcase real snowmobiles that the Charlevoix Sheriff's Department has agreed to bring down to show the kids.

Officers will talk a little bit about winter safety. Kids should dress warmly and be sure to bring questions.

On Feb. 17 we will round out the program with Greg McMasters from TV 7 & 4 presenting a program on "Weather."

Preschool story hour meets on Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. in the lower level of the library. Story hour follows the school's calendar.

If school is canceled due to snow, so is story hour.

Charlevoix Area Hospital gives large amount of food

Charlevoix Area Hospital donated over 1,110 pounds of food and other staples to area food banks and agencies as part of the 2000 Michigan Harvest Gathering — a statewide program that distributes emergency food to those in need.

Charlevoix Area Hospital and the other hospitals and health care systems that are part of the North Central Council (NCC) of the Michigan Health & Hospital Association (MHA) combined to donate 23,406 pounds of food and other staples to area food banks and other agencies.

Kathy Johnson of Charlevoix Area Hospital said hospital employees, medical staff and volunteers collected the food during a two-week drive in October.

Donations also came from employees at the Boyne Area Medical Center and Boyne Area Rehab Services. The fund drive was coordinated by HERO (Hospital Employees Reaching Out) Club, a large group of employees who help support hospital projects.

After the drive concluded, the food was distributed to food pantries in Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan, Ellsworth and Central Lake.

Varsity basketball team having a winning streak

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Rayder's varsity basketball team is on a roll.

While they started out a little rocky early this season, the team has improved its play and put several wins under their belts. The latest were two shellackings dished out last week against Harbor Springs and East Jordan.

"They are really playing well and they are starting to believe in themselves," Coach Keith Haske said.

Charlevoix beat Harbor Springs Jan. 3, 91-60, and beat East Jordan Jan. 5, 100-58.

At the Harbor Springs game, Haske said he was particularly pleased with the Rayders defensive game.

"It was a great team effort. Everyone scored except one kid," Haske added.

Leaders for the team were: Scott

Keith Haske,

Parrish with 22 points, 11 rebounds and three blocks; Jim Shepherd with 19 points; Jeremiah Teuscher with 10 points; Keith Daly with nine points and Rob Boss with eight points and 10 rebounds.

At the East Jordan game, Haske attributed the wide margin between the scores to a rebuilding year for their opponents. He said East Jordan is a very young team and the Rayders just caught them at a starting point in this process.

In this game, several Charlevoix players scored double figures.

Leaders for the game were: Parrish with 19 points, 11 rebounds, four assists and two blocks; Shepherd with 14 points; Teuscher with 14 points; Doug Rieck with 12 points; Daly with 12 points; Patrick Gowell with 10 points and eight assists and Boss with eight points and 10 rebounds.

Haske said the real test for the Rayders skills came last night with a game against St. Ignace, a team ranked number one in the state for Class C.

"We'll see what we are made of," Haske said in an interview Monday. (The game against St. Ignace) will tell us a lot. It is a big game and it is on the road. It will be important to play well."

The results of that game were not known before press time.

Charlevoix resident strives to keep area's history alive

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix's Clayt Smith loves to share his stories, and with 85 years on earth under his belt, he has many.

In his life he has been a trapper, hunter, farmer, Civilian Conservation Corps worker and traveling fruit salesman, as well as having hitch-hiked throughout the United States during the early part of his life.

To share his stories, the Charlevoix resident wrote a book in 1991 titled "Seventy-Five Years with a Country Boy" and has spent countless hours documenting the lives of various other "old-timers" in Charlevoix for another planned book. Smith also constructed a replica trappers cabin from the early 1900s on his US-31 property just south of town he lovingly calls, "Smiths' Little Acres."

"I always read a lot of books and I had all these stories that I had accumulated," Smith said of his decision to write a book on his life.

The second book came about because of his desire to keep the memories of Charlevoix's history alive. To do it, he interviewed 30 of the "old-timers" about their lives and paid to have them published.

"Those people had some interesting stories. It was kind of a fun thing to do," Smith said.

However, the book was too expensive to print in bulk, so very few copies of it exist. But, each time one of the people he interviewed passes away, Smith prints out a copy of his interview with them and gives it to their family. It was his way of giving their family a lasting memory of a loved one.

As for the cabin, Smith built it in 1982 as a tribute to his trapping-partner, friend and brother-in-law Art Stool. Stool and Smith trapped animals throughout northern Michigan, until he was accidentally killed in an accident on Beaver Island in 1954.

Now, in an effort to help keep Charlevoix's past alive, Smith will be contributing various historical articles on Charlevoix to the Scrapbook section of the Charlevoix Courier. The articles will appear at various times throughout the year.

Smith was born on Nov. 1, 1915 in his parents' farmhouse near Barnard, five miles south of the city of Charlevoix. He spent his boyhood on the classic farm; working with teams of horses for plowing and travel, using cows for fresh milk, a couple of pigs and a few chickens to eat in the cold winters and various acres of crops.

In the 1936, Smith joined the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC), a program started by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in an effort to help bring the country out of depression. The CCC's primary job was to clean-up and replant forest land.

"I probably enjoyed myself as much in the CCC as anything else. Anybody that was in the CCC in the 30s have sort of a fellowship with one another," Smith said.

While in the CCC, Smith planted 1,000 trees a day to help rebuild forest land near the Au Sable River 30 miles from East Tawas.

Throughout his life as a young adult, Smith also hitch-hiked throughout western United States. "That is how we got around then," he said.

His biggest trip was to California to see relatives. The trip took Smith onto the famed Route 66, where he met various characters and even experienced what it was like to shoot jackrabbits from a moving vehicle in the panhandle of Texas.

At the age of 33, Smith started to settle down and married his love, Kay. He soon had four kids, Debbie, Randy, Linda and Gail.

To provide for his family, Smith started peddling fruit throughout the Upper Peninsula, where he further learned of life in northern Michigan.

"They depended on me for their fruit and I depended on them. I still know an awful lot of people in the country," he said.

To learn more about life in northern Michigan during the early part of this century, keep an eye on the Scrapbook page in the Charlevoix Courier throughout the year for articles by Smith.

Charlevoix students to attend Jan. 20 inauguration

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

While some of us watch the inauguration from home, two junior and 12 senior Charlevoix High School students will witness this historical event first-hand.

"The trip will hopefully ignite an interest in politics among the students. (Washington) D.C. is a fun city," Ann Marie Conway, twelfth grade government teacher and inaugural trip coordinator said.

In lieu of the nationwide controversy surrounding the presidential election it may seem that possible protests at the event would cause school officials to be hesitant to have students attend.

Conway, who will be escorting the students to the inauguration for the second time, doesn't see this prospect as a threat. She took students to the inauguration of President Bill Clinton four years ago.

"I'm actually excited about the protests. Last time we attended the inauguration a lot of Right to Life protesters were there. It's an exciting time. That's America — the right to free speech. It shows that democratic values are alive and well," Conway said.

Students participating in the event agreed with Conway. They said that the mirage of debate and confusion following the election makes their inclusion in the inauguration all the more exciting.

How do citizens contact a city council member?

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix City Council makes administrative decisions that shape the city of Charlevoix and at many council meetings public attendance is low, so how do citizens voice their concerns to these elected officials?

To determine this, the Charlevoix Courier called all seven of the elected Charlevoix City Council members, including the mayor. Six of the seven returned the newspaper's telephone calls.

Of those, they all said that they consider themselves to be accessible to the public and gave tips on how the public can contact them.

First ward council member Norman "Boogie" Carlson personally visited the Courier office to talk about the matter only five minutes after receiving a telephone call.

Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell answered his home phone which is also used as the business phone for Charlevoix Towing and was responsive to questions.

Gabe Campbell (second ward) also responded to questions immediately after the newspaper called his home phone. Sperm Chamberlain (third ward) took time out of his work schedule to field a phone call and answer questions.

"Track me down any place. Call me at my business or at home. I usually walk home for lunch and people grab hold of me. Constituents from any ward can let me know what their concerns are and I'll see what I can do to take care of the problem," Chamberlain said.

Beware of thin ice

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater is warning the citizens and visitors of Charlevoix County that the warmer temperatures and especially the fluctuation in temperatures can cause ice to weaken on the lakes.

Ice can form in several different conditions, and some are more perilous than others.

Clear ice is the strongest, formed by a long hard freeze, and can vary in color from green, blue and black depending on the water color beneath the ice.

Snow ice is milky looking and is formed from re-frozen melted snow. Snow ice is low in density and is very weak.

Layered ice is just that, many layers of frozen and re-frozen snow, giving it a striped appearance.

Lasater also said the notion that ice thickness is the only factor in determining ice strength should be discarded once and for all.

Because ice seldom freezes at the same rate in the same body of water, it is not uniformly thick from one location to another, he said. Ice can be one foot thick in one location, and only one inch thick just ten feet away.

If you do break through the ice, there are some things you can do to avoid serious injury or death.

First, try not to panic and thrash about. The air in your clothes will help you float. Yell for help. Turn toward the direction that you came from. The ice is likely to be stronger there. Place your arms on the edge of the solid ice.

Keys, a pocket knife, ice pick, or a belt buckle will help you grip the ice. Once you've got a grip on the ice, kick your legs hard and pull yourself up on the ice.

If the ice breaks, move forward and try again. When you're out, do not stand up, but roll away from the break and stand only when you've reached solid ice.

Go to a place of shelter and warm up immediately.

Former mayor, traveler, McRae, dies Jan. 15

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Many of us move into new homes or use local services like those provided at Boulder Park Terrace or the Pine River Place and never ask ourselves, "How did this come to be?"

Ralph McRae

Most of what we enjoy in Charlevoix is the work of someone that came before us, a piece in the puzzle of history. That is exactly the story the life of Ralph McRae tells, part of Charlevoix's history.

All those who knew McRae referred to him as a visionary: a man who knew no limits and stopped at nothing on his quest toward community progress.

McRae was born Jan. 23, 1906 and died Jan. 15, 2001. In his 94 years here on earth he did it all — from circumnavigating the globe, to serving as mayor, to being a Charlevoix Courier guest writer, to responding to the needs of the local elderly population.

McRae grew up in Pellston. He graduated from Pellston High School and then went on to Albion. He attended Albion for two years.

McRae's nephew Dave Norton pointed out that his uncle showed his ambition early — attending college at that time was a big step. It was not common for people from Pellston to pursue their studies beyond high school.

After college, he married his wife Dorothy, and the couple lived in Chicago for a while.

Once again McRae chose the path that was anything but normal. When World War II started, he volunteered for the service. It may seem that many men did choose to fight in World War II, but at this time McRae was in his mid-thirties and he didn't have to go but he wanted to.

After the war he returned to Michigan and ran the family business, the McRae Lumber Company in Pellston, for a number of years.

After McRae sold the lumber company he became a contractor, building homes in the Charlevoix area. McRae Construction was a result of the combined efforts of McRae, who did all the estimating and his partner Ray Borowiak who specialized in carpentry.

The duo built over 100 homes in the Charlevoix area. Many remember not only his excellent craftsmanship, but also his generosity. Charlevoix resident and president of the Alano Club, Howard Horton, claims that McRae "saved his life."

Horton was in the process of building his home; he had it framed but had come to a standstill. McRae stepped in and finished the project that on the surface appeared impossible.

McRae was also a strong political force who envisioned huge projects and made sure they became a reality. In addition to serving on Charlevoix City Council in 1986, at the age of 80, McRae became mayor of Charlevoix. City Manager Mike Weisner remembers McRae well.

"(McRae) certainly cared about the community. He worked very hard as mayor. (McRae) was instrumental in the construction of the band shell and was a force behind senior housing in Charlevoix. He was always concerned about the city. When (McRae) made up his mind to develop a project, he stayed the course," Weisner said.

His energy also took him outside of city hall as he set his course outside of the United States.

the kitchen and his father's workhorse mentality cushioned the economic hardships of the time.

Ed Heise

Some referred to him as the Godfather, others as Doonie and his daughter Lorraine Warner called him Takunka "The Great Buffalo" — friends and family of Edward C. Heise hail him a man of many titles and many accomplishments.

Ed was born Feb. 24, 1917 at 226 Antrim Street. His parents were pioneers in Charlevoix and like his parents, Ed left his mark on the city.

Lorraine said he had a "wonderful childhood." He told Lorraine that he never felt the hardships of the Depression; his mom's handiwork in ease from the fever and died at 16.

Ed was a curious young adult who during his junior or senior year in college traveled the rails and sat around campfires where he learned first-hand of the life of hobos.

Lorraine said that one evening in a box car one of his fellow travelers asked him if he had a family and a home. Ed responded "yes," and the man said, "Then you are lucky, go home."

Ed returned home and completed his college education at Western Michigan University, but he didn't stay planted for long. He joined the army during World War II.

Fochtman, businessman and former mayor dies

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

William "Bill" Fochtman, a well known Charlevoix businessman, former city council member and former mayor died Jan. 13 at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Fochtman owned Fochtman Chevy Buick in Charlevoix, which was later called Crown Motors after he sold the business to retire. However, Fochtman was soon back at work at Crown Motors, where he stayed for several years before working for Wernig Chevrolet in Gaylord.

He was also known for his commitment to the city of Charlevoix through his governmental service. Fochtman had served as a city council member before becoming the mayor in 1966, a post he had for five years.

During this time he was responsible for the development of the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant, Ferry Beach, the tennis courts and airport improvements, among others.

Tom Hanna, Charlevoix city manager during Fochtman's tenure, remembered him as a mayor who would put the needs of the city ahead of his business.

"He would drop everything to attend to city business," Hanna said. "He was dedicated and someone you could count on or trust."

But, it was Fochtman's dedication to the city that sticks out most in Hanna's mind.

OPINIONS

Some random thoughts in the winter

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

The winter doldrums have gotten to me lately and I have been spending too much time watching television, therefore eroding my attention span.

Because of this, my thoughts have been in the form of small snippets, almost like a machine gun firing off. Some of them are serious thoughts while others are a little light-hearted.

Here are just a few of them:

The curse

I think I have been cursed. This little curse, as I call it, is my inability to write a story involving Charlevoix Courier Staff Writer Julie Musilek without getting some sort of fact wrong.

It started when Musilek was hired and I wrote an introductory story about her. I gave the wrong name for her soon-to-be-fiancé and spelled her father's name wrong. The curse lasted into the next story I wrote when she announced her engagement; I put in the wrong date for her wedding.

The latest attack of the curse came when I wrote a story about the effects of alcohol on the body. Musilek was a volunteer in this test and had to give me her weight to publish. I, of course, messed up and wrote the wrong weight down in my notes. It was 20 pounds more than what she actually weighed.

She was quick to point out the error — and continued to point it out several times throughout the week.

With each of the errors I have published a correction, as I do with every error that is reported to me.

But, any error ever made in this newspaper drives me insane. When it is something I wrote and it is about our staff writer, well that makes me madder than ever at myself.

It is easy to say nobody is perfect; it is hard to admit it when you fall in that category. Especially when your error is seen by over 2,000 people.

The curse continues to haunt me.

How available are officials?

In this week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier, we have published a story telling readers how accessible Charlevoix City Council members are and what is the best way for their constituents to contact them.

I found the mayor's comments a little humorous when he said he felt he was very accessible. We have been trying to contact him for an interview about the future of the city for four weeks, but he has not been able to meet with us.

I guess accessibility does not include meeting with the local newspaper to share your thoughts on Charlevoix with the readers — many of whom are constituents.

I have to admit, at least he answered our questions about his accessibility. I should also point out, most city council members returned our calls or met with our staff writer, Musilek, pretty quickly.

But, one city council member, Bill Bellows, has not returned our calls on this matter. As of Monday, Musilek had left messages at his home four times in a one week period to find out how accessible to the public he is.

It kind of makes me wonder how the voters in his ward can contact him, especially since the local newspaper can't.

Chew me out

Recently, I was informed that a lot of people disagreed with my editorial opposing the demolition of the Wharfside building. However, I haven't received any letters stating this.

Folks, feel free to send in a letter to the editor when you disagree — or even agree — with my editorials. That is why I write them.

I am trying to start a dialogue on the subject and trying to get people to express themselves in the newspaper. I want people to prove me wrong when I write an editorial, and I want to be able to publish them proving me wrong.

I hate it when people call me up or stop me on the street to tell me why they disagree with an editorial I wrote. Write down your opinion — in 450 words or less — send it in and let the community know you think I am wrong or right.

I am not afraid to put my opinion in print on this page each week, so why are you?

Announcing the 'name that snow' contest

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

I've been thinking a lot about snow lately, or I've been thinking about a lot of snow lately.

Either way our winter landscaping medium has had my attention. The snow that must be pushed off the driveway on a daily basis, the snow to be cleared off the porch, the snow to be scraped off the roof, all receive some sort of contemplation. I think about the snow when I am pushing it around and get not only the usual winter exercise program, but also some more or less useful thoughts.

I have read for years how the aboriginal people who lived in the far reaches of the arctic had dozens of names for the many kinds of snow that they encountered in their daily lives. I am beginning to wonder why it is that those of us blessed with much more than the usual amount of the white stuff haven't followed the lead — of what we called Eskimos when I was in grade school — and developed a variety of names for all those different sorts of winter precipitation.

Some days four new inches of that stuff on the driveway will have almost no weight at all and can be pushed around like a load of feathers, and other days even two inches is enough to get the heart pumping and the arms aching. Sometimes it packs together and other times it resists compression like a box of Styrofoam peanuts. Yet each day when I visit with a neighbor or relative about it, all we can say is that it snowed again.

Wouldn't life be more interesting if we could specifically name the nature of the snow that had just arrived or was still hanging around? Would winter seem less boring if we had multiple words for snow? I believe it would. What to do?

Therefore, I propose the first annual snow-phase naming competition.

The English language has more than enough adjectives that modify the noun snow, but very few nouns distinguishing determinably different types of snow. The problem might already be solved by words that I have not yet encountered, but I am aware of only one new noun for a distinct snow type.

At our former home in Iowa, the product of strong northwest winds across fall-plowed fields and the snows of winter was a substance called "Snirt," with a color and texture midway between snow and dirt, piled up around corners and in road ditches in amounts that required a new word. In the spirit of the Iowa word-makers, let me suggest a few names as a goad to those who might enjoy making new language that would be useful here in our lake-effect snow ridden corner of Michigan.

I just now finished moving a driveway's worth of very light, feathery snow. The 15 minutes of contemplation associated with that activity suggested that the word "frowl" might fit.

Feathery, light, reflective substance that falls gently from the sky is way too complicated. If I could tell people there was a frowlfall last night, they would know immediately that they needn't worry about a heart attack when removing it.

We also benefit from a word for that combination of salt, snow, ice and slush that accumulates under car fenders this time or year. How about "snish." It's short, to the point and sounds almost as ugly as what it names.

The rules for the first annual snow-phase naming competition are as follows: No adjectives — No gd-snow no f-snow: nouns only, with six or fewer letters. They should be new words, not words used for other purposes.

Send your entries to 408 Burns Street in Charlevoix. I am hoping that before winter leaves us we can publish a list of new snow words and definitions.

Who knows, the contest may be more fun than snowshoeing, and certainly warmer. First prize is a broken shovel I have in the garage that would be useful for moving any of the types we might name.

Letters to the editor

Has the editor changed his mind?

Editor:

In your editorial of Sept. 15, concerning the new high school development, you said: "There's no question that a building the size of the proposed school will have some impact on the existing farming community. However, we don't foresee this to be all negative. And, we're confident the sprawl issue can be addressed with careful thought and long-range planning by everyone affected."

In your editorial of Dec. 13, concerning the demolition of the Wharfside Building you said: "What the city is wanting to do is buy a currently occupied building in the downtown business district, remove the occupants and demolish the building — which probably has historic significance. This will create less room for business in the business district, thereby creating sprawl. There are many people in this area very concerned about sprawl, just look at the debate surrounding the new school on Marion Center Road. Now the city wants to create sprawl for a scenic view? Less business in the downtown district also means less jobs for residents and fewer shops for visitors to spend their money at. So, the city will have a really nice park, but fewer places for locals to make a living at. On its face, the plan to purchase and demolish the Wharfside building just seems silly. The loss of a building in the downtown district means less space for business, less space for jobs and fewer places for visitors to spend money. The city needs to come up with a solid plan to address these problems before spending money on this project."

Which is it then? Substitute "school" for "Wharfside building" and it seems you are in favor of both sides of the sprawl issue. Why is sprawl a good thing in Marion Center and not inside the city limits? How is it possible to have both sides of an opinion on the same subject? Either you are for something 100 percent or you are against it. Is this to say that you have recanted your earlier position on the new school construction? Hopefully so, since you seem to now acknowledge some of the earlier arguments against unrestricted sprawl.

A local television station recently reported on local communities. I quote them in saying "the school is the heart of the community." Since our new school is to be located outside our community, does that mean that we have torn the heart out of this town? It is not too late to stop before the damage is complete.

Pine River Place just one legacy

McRae

"He took a trip around the world at 80. He headed out with some credit cards and had no plans," Norton said.

On Nov. 17, 1987, McRae headed west from Detroit aboard an American Airlines jet. Seven weeks later he was back in Michigan having traveled in 12 countries, boarded 13 airplanes and logged 50 hours in the air. He came home with 888 photos.

McRae's life is chock full of multicultural experiences. He had no children of his own, but housed two exchange students. Ria Groen was closest to him. She was an exchange student to Charlevoix from the Netherlands in 1964, but has stayed in close contact with McRae over the years.

McRae not only visited other countries, but he tried to bring cultural awareness to Charlevoix.

In 1989 he formed the Charlevoix International Club, a local chapter of "People to People International." His aim was to increase international understanding.

The group offered home stays to international visitors from chapters overseas, organized community missions for travel overseas, introduced foreign students to our culture and us to theirs. McRae coordinated one such visit in 1989, when two Soviet men and two Soviet women spent some time in Charlevoix.

What many remember of McRae were what Norton referred to as his two biggest accomplishments: senior housing and a community swimming pool.

"(McRae) was a visionary, he could see things that had to be done. He did Pine River Place. He laid the ground work on the Pine River Place. He went down to the legislature and met with senators. He also laid the ground work for Boulder Park Terrace. McRae donated money for the land to get the option to build," Norton said.

Charlevoix resident Edith Gilbert added, "He was a wonderful man. I think that the Pine River Place is a monument to him. He put that through almost single-handedly. Nobody ever thought of it in those days. He researched it himself and got it rolling. He was a very giving person, so kind and gentle."

He also thought that at one time Charlevoix should have a swimming pool. He was the beginning drive behind Charlevoix eventually getting a swimming pool.

"If there was anything worthwhile or beneficial to the community, he was part of it," Charlevoix pool board member Bruce McArthur said.

McRae passed away at Boulder Park Terrace.

Fochtman just couldn't retire

"There were times when I know it hurt his business, because he would jump in a car and head to Lansing with me to work on a grant," Hanna said.

Bob Gill, former city council member when Fochtman was mayor, also said Fochtman was a good mayor.

"He made good judgments, firm judgments, judgments that weren't wishy-washy," Gill said.

Gill, who has known Fochtman for many years, said he was also a great friend and he always enjoyed his companionship. He added, Fochtman and him seemed to be spending more time together seeing other old friends off at the funeral home lately.

"Now I don't know who will join me," Gill said.

According to his daughter, Nancy Reinert, who now lives in the Chicago area, Fochtman loved Charlevoix and his family.

"He was a great man. There was always a story about dad (Fochtman)," Reinert said. "He was up on a huge pedestal. We couldn't imagine anyone like our dad."

In addition to his many achievements for the city, Reinert added Fochtman was also a driving force behind Mt. McSaubia in the 1950s. She remembers him taking an old truck to the ski hill, with a table on back and a rope hooked to it as the original tow rope.

Overall, she said, Fochtman was a man that will be missed by many people.

"He loved people. He was charming. He could walk into a room and get along with everybody. People were drawn to him," Reinert said.

A funeral service was given yesterday at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Philip G. Scharbaum officiated. A burial followed in Brookside Cemetery.

Board opts to participate in state technology program

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix School Board has opted to participate in the Teacher Technology Initiative (TTI) which will put advanced technology in the hands of eligible teachers in Michigan.

"The goal of the program (TTI) is to provide teachers with access to technology and also to provide them with some training. As a result of teachers learning to use technology, the long-term result may be improved student learning. Teachers who learn to use the technology can better utilize it in teaching students," technology coordinator for Charlevoix Public Schools Scott Mays said.

Last January Governor John Engler announced the vision behind the TTI program in his State of the State Address. In this speech Engler asked Michigan Virtual University (MVU) to help with the administration of the project.

The university has since added a link to their web site, www.mivu.org that lists commonly asked questions about the program and teacher eligibility criterion.

The site states that to reach Engler's aim of enhancing the learning environment of Michigan school districts, "Teachers will be provided with a personal computer, software, remote Internet access (dial-up) and Web-based professional development."

With the conceptual side of the program under his belt, Engler pushed forward and in July of 2000 funding for the state-wide project was planned for — he signed legislation approving the State School Aid Act which provides for $110 million dollars in project funding.

Recently, the Charlevoix School Board passed a resolution recognizing some of the program requirements and opening the district's doors to these technological advantages offered by the state.

This resolution also showed the state that the district has agreed to the long-term (three year) loan to the staff.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools John Sturock said the district has already done an "awful lot" in terms of integrating technology into the schools, but the program does offer the schools an opportunity to advance further.

Teachers to get updated technology for classroom

"The state is putting a lot of money into this program. Any time the district is given extra dollars to help with technology, we are given a great tool to supplement students education," Sturock said.

Like Sturock, Mays recognizes the benefits of the program but says there are still some kinks that need to be worked out.

For instance the machines will be under full warranty. But if something is to go wrong, who is responsible, the vendor or the school district?

"I wasn't really excited about 75 laptops, they are tough to maintain," Mays said.

Questions have also been raised concerning the quality of the laptops. At $1,200 a piece, some have questioned how high power and technologically advanced the computers will be.

Mays doesn't see their quality as too much of an issue. "When you are buying 70,000 computers, you get a pretty good price on them," he said.

"The positives are additional access to technology. It is extremely difficult to keep up with fast paced changes in technology. We are doing a good job trying to keep up but it's nice to get new technology in our hands. We have to do what we can do to benefit the students. I think this program will ultimately benefit the students."

Each "eligible" teacher will be given $1,200 to work with. The district then decides on the technology the schools will receive on a building by building basis.

The school district has not yet met building-by-building and the state has not yet finalized contracts with the five vendors they plan to use. Vendor choices are scheduled to be made by the end of January.

Mays said that there is no need to react immediately, the $1,200 per eligible educator does not have to be spent until June 30, 2002.

Singers to perform for loved ones

Wouldn't you be surprised if four penguins showed up on your doorstep singing "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" or "I Love You Truly?" Well, not quite penguins, but four men in tuxedos, and there are other songs that might be sung.

This is what the Windjammers Barbershop Quartet Singers are preparing to do for Valentines Day. For five years now, the group has been singing Valentines for many surprised ladies (and some men) and presenting a flower on behalf of a sentimental admirer.

You may have also seen some of the fellows singing Christmas Carols in the shops and restaurants downtown on the day of the Charlevoix Christmas Open House. You may even remember seeing the quartets sing on the street before the Venetian Parade last year.

The organization sings for the fun of it as quartets and in mass as the Windjammer Chorus.

They also make charitable contributions to the HeartSpring Foundation to aid speech impaired persons.

The group meets at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesdays in the Methodist Church on State Street; all men and boys are invited. Call 237-9392 for more information.

Nancy Jean Russell, 53, of Charlevoix, died Jan. 15, 2001 at Emmet County Medical Care Facility in Harbor Springs.

A funeral service will be at 11 a.m. Thursday, at the Community Church of God in Charlevoix. The Rev. Neil Turner will officiate. Burial will take place in Brookside Cemetery.

Nancy was born on February 4, 1947 in Charlevoix, the daughter of James T. and Bessie Faye (Skeel) Whitley. She attended Charlevoix School graduating in 1966.

On August 19, 1967 Nancy married Gordon T. Russell in Charlevoix. During the late 1960's the couple traveled the country living in Texas, Kentucky and Alabama, before returning to Charlevoix.

She spent her life doing what she enjoyed most, being a mother, wife, and care-giver to children.

Nancy was a Sunday school teacher at the Community Church of God, and a member of the Church of God Women's Missionary. She was also a Girl Scout leader for nine years.

The Charlevoix High School varsity volleyball team was beaten by Elk Rapids Jan. 11 at home, 10-15 and 12-15.

However, Coach Carolyn Loper said considering Elk Rapids is undefeated in the conference, the Rayders did very well against them.

"I am seeing them playing much better, team-wise. We were playing right up with them as far as talent and potential," Loper said.

Charlevoix's top players for this match-up were: Kelly Reid as a server, Jenny Miller on the offense and Molly Arnold on the defense.

The team was back on the court on Saturday at a tournament at Inland Lakes.

The Rayders won the first match-up against Bellaire, 15-8 and 15-6. However, they lost the next two against Pellston and Rudyard, 6-15, 7-15 and 8-15, 6-15 respectively.

Since Charlevoix did win its first match-up against Bellaire, the Rayders moved on in the tournament to bronze medal play.

In the first match they faced Forest Area and lost 10-15 and 8-15. They split the second match with East Jordan 15-12 and 13-15.

Loper said she was very happy with the team, stating they faced some tough competition at the tournament.

"I think the girls are gaining confidence and realizing they can win if they play together," she said.

Loper commended Reid, Kelly Dreyer and Libby Withrow for their serving in the tournament. She also congratulated Kate Madison, Krista Swenor, Jenny Miller and Lisa Miller on their abilities in the front row.

She added everyone did a great job in the back row, particularly Taryn Drost, Amber Parsons and Katie Swenor.

Basketball team loses one, wins one last week

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Rayders varsity basketball team continues to thrill their fans with some fine skills on the court.

The team faced the number one ranked St. Ignace team Jan. 9 and played a league game against Elk Rapids on Jan. 12 in away games. They lost to St. Ignace in a hard-fought game, 89-81, but beat Elk Rapids, 65-45.

Coach Keith Haske said he was very proud of the way his team played against St. Ignace, especially considering their opponents' high ranking and the fact Charlevoix was on St. Ignace's home turf.

"I liked our intensity. I was very pleased how we came out to play against them," Haske said.

Since the next time Charlevoix will meet St. Ignace would be in the quarterfinals and on a neutral court, Haske said he and the Rayders are confident they could beat them.

"It is something that is pretty encouraging," Haske said.

Leaders for the game were: Scott Parrish with 33 points and 10 rebounds; Jim Shepherd with 18 points; Rob Boss with 13 points and 13 rebounds and Patrick Gowell with nine points and eight assists.

In the Elk Rapids game, Haske said he thought the team played very good defense, but had a few problems in other areas to work on.

"It wasn't one of the better games we played. We were sloppy at times, but our defense carried us," Haske said. Specifically, he said the Rayders were having some problems passing and scoring.

Leaders for the game were Parrish with 20 points and 15 rebounds and Shepherd with 16 points.

As of Monday, Charlevoix's overall record is 5-3 and its league record is 3-0.

Skiers start season showing their skills

By LAURIE LOUNSBURY

With two major ski meets under their belts, members of the Charlevoix High School Ski Team have shown that they are a solid team with strong potential.

The high school ski season officially started with the Harbor-Petoskey Invitational meet, hosted at Boyne Highlands Jan. 2. Thirteen schools, including four class A schools, competed in the meet. Charlevoix finished in seventh place overall.

The Charlevoix boys' team was in sixth place after the giant slalom event.

In a field of 77 racers, Charlevoix boasted the only two women racers competing among the men. Wilson and Trubilowicz are skiing on the boys' team since Charlevoix didn't have enough female racers to field a girls' team.

The team ran into some trouble in the slalom event, when both Smith and Serrels had to hike. Standings in slalom were: Johnson, twenty-eighth; Fisher, thirty-fourth; Wilson, forty-fourth; Smith, fifty-eighth; Serrels, sixty-third; and Trubilowicz, sixty-fifth.

"If we can keep everybody healthy, and everyone finishes the races without hiking, we'll be a really competitive team this year," said Coach Sue Miller.

Annual Drinking Water Quality Report of the

January 2001

Here is this year's Annual Quality Water Report. It is designed to inform you about the quality drinking water and services we deliver to you every day. Our constant goal is to provide you with a safe and dependable supply of drinking water. We want you to understand the efforts we make to continually improve the water treatment process and protect our water resources. We are committed to ensuring the quality of your water. The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

Our water comes from Lake Michigan, considered surface water. The State will be performing an assessment of our source water by the year 2003; we will inform you on how to get a copy when it is available.

We are pleased to report that your drinking water is safe and meets all State and Federal requirements...

This report is a snapshot of the quality of the water we provided to you in the year 2000. Included are details about where your water comes from, what it contains, and how it compares to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and State of Michigan standards.

If you have any questions about this report or concerning your water utility, please contact Sam Creswell at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant, (231) 547-3256, or Ed Whitley at the Charlevoix Water Department, (231) 547-3278. We want our valued customers to be informed about their water utility. The City of Charlevoix Water Supply routinely monitors for contaminants in your drinking water according to Federal and State Laws.

This report shows the results of our monitoring for the period of January 1 thru December 31, 2000. All drinking water, including bottled drinking water, may be reasonably expected to contain at least small amounts of some constituents. It's important to remember that the presence of these constituents does not necessarily pose a health risk.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations and wildlife.

Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals which can be naturally occurring or result from urban stormwater runoff, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture and residential uses.

Radioactive contaminants, which are naturally occurring.

Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban stormwater runoff, and septic systems.

The State of Michigan and Environmental Protection Agency require us to test our water on a regular basis to ensure its safety.

We met all the monitoring requirements for the year 2000 with the exception of Lead and Copper sampling by the September 30th deadline. These samples were taken on November 15, 2000, and results indicated no health concerns.

Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution System personnel sampled and tested for over 100 contaminants that were NOT detected in our water supply. The following constituents were detected at low, but safe levels, well below the MCL (Maximum Contaminant Level).

In the following tables you will find many terms and abbreviations you might not be familiar with. To help you better understand these terms we've provided the following definitions:

Parts per million (ppm) or Milligrams per liter (mg/l) - one part per million corresponds to one minute in two years or a single penny in $10,000.

Parts per billion (ppb) or Micrograms per liter - one part per billion corresponds to one minute in 2,000 years, or a single penny in $10,000,000.

Nephelometric Turbidity Unit (NTU) - nephelometric turbidity unit is a measure of the clarity of water. Turbidity in excess of 5 NTU is just noticeable to the average person.

Action Level (AL) - the concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.

Treatment Technique (TT) - A treatment technique is a required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.

Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) - is the highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG) - is the level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

n/a: not applicable nd: not detectable at testing limit

TEST RESULTS

NOTES:

*Turbidity - turbidity is a measure of the cloudiness of the water. We monitor it because it is an indicator of our filtration system.

Lead and Copper - Lead and copper testing is on a three (3) year schedule, test results reported here are from the 1997 year; next round of testing is year 2003. (No lead was detected).

Unregulated contaminants are those for which the EPA has not established drinking water standards. The purpose of unregulated contaminant monitoring is to assist EPA in determining the occurrence of unregulated contaminants in drinking water and whether future regulation is warranted.

Contaminant (units)	Charlevoix Water	MCLG	MCL	Likely source of contamination
Unregulated Contaminants
Sodium (ppm)	6	n/a	n/a	Erosion of natural deposits
Sulfate (ppm)	28	n/a	n/a	Erosion of natural deposits

Chlorodibromomethane (ppb)	2.9	n/a	n/a	By-product of drinking water chlorination
Dichlorobromomethane (ppb)	3.9	n/a	n/a	By-product of drinking water chlorination

We're proud that your drinking water meets or exceeds all Federal and State requirements. We have learned through our monitoring and testing that some constituents have been detected. The EPA has determined that your water IS SAFE at these levels.

All sources of drinking water are subject to potential contamination by substances that are naturally occurring or man made. All drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by cryptosporidium and other microbiological contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

Please, call us if you have any questions.

We ask that all our customers help us protect our water resources, which are the heart of our community, our way of life, and our children's future.

About our system - The City of Charlevoix operates a Direct Filtration Water Treatment Facility which uses water from Lake Michigan. With a capacity of approximately 3 million gallons per day, water enters the plant through a submerged intake structure. Storage includes a one million gallon above ground reservoir at the plant, and a 300,000 gallon elevated tank (water tower) on Charlevoix's north side. The City has approximately 32 miles of distribution lines serving approximately 5,000 customers in the City of Charlevoix and areas of adjoining Charlevoix Township, as well as the influx of summer visitors to the area. Present flow rates vary from around 400,000 gallons per day in the winter to as much as 2.5 million gallons per day in the summer. In service since 1987, it is a modern, efficient facility staffed by licensed, well trained operators. Charlevoix is continually improving its distribution system, and is close to achieving its goal of a totally "looped" system, assuring fresh water and adequate pressure throughout our entire service area. An electrical generator at the Water Plant assures normal operation at full capacity in the event of loss of electrical power. We at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution system work around the clock to provide top quality water to every tap.

We welcome plant tours - call for arrangements.

The 1998 Michigan Safe Drinking Water Act, (1976 PS 399, as amended) requires all Community Water Supplies to provide to its customers Consumer Confidence Reports as required by title XIV of the Public Health Service Act, chapter 373, 88 Stat. 1660, popularly known as the Safe Drinking Water Act.

This report is provided to the customers of the City of Charlevoix Water Supply, and covers the reporting period of calendar year 2000. It is not being mailed to individual mailing addresses. The report is available at the following locations: City of Charlevoix City Hall, Charlevoix Public Library, Water Treatment Plant at 97 Grant Street, Charlevoix Electric & Water Department at 401 Carpenter Ave. Copies are available by mail from the City Manager's Office, 210 State Street, Box 550, Charlevoix, MI 49720. Ski season starts for high school SKIING

Class A powerhouse Marquette took first place in the invitational meet, followed by Traverse City West, another class A school and in third place was Petoskey. Sutton's Bay claimed fourth place and the Boyne City boys finished fifth, followed by class A Traverse City Central.

The Charlevoix team faced off against its biggest competitors in northern Michigan Thursday, Jan. 11, at Boyne Mountain. At the meet were Petoskey, Charlevoix, East Jordan, Boyne City and Harbor Springs.

Charlevoix was in second place after the giant slalom event, trailing Petoskey by a mere eight points.

GS finishes were: Serrels, second; Smith, fifth; Johnson, ninth; Fisher, seventeenth; Wilson, twenty-second; and freshman Mike Dupuis, twenty-third. The top racer for Charlevoix, Serrels, again had trouble in the slalom event.

Serrels was in second place after his first slalom run, but had to hike on his second run, moving him back to a twenty-sixth place finish. Slalom finishes were: Smith, second; Johnson, thirteenth; Fisher, fourteenth; Wilson, nineteenth; Serrels, twenty-sixth; and Dupuis, twenty-seventh. The Charlevoix team finished in third place overall.

"We're skiing really well in GS, now we just need to work on getting some strong finishes in slalom," Miller said.

Charlevoix's next race will be at 5 p.m. Jan. 25 at Nub's Nob. The event will be a conference meet.

Buday acquires city land to give customers more access

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Ed Buday, owner of Buday's Sound Advice on US-31 south, recently acquired a piece of city-owned property that he said permits the business' customers and employees to access the store more "easily and safely."

Buday said that when the new Marion Center Road was installed, access to his business was limited. He added that acquiring the city owned land parcel, which abuts the site of his Charlevoix business, has alleviated this accessibility issue.

"We could get in OK but getting out was hard without it," Buday explained.

City Manager Mike Weisner said that the city purchased the parcel about two years ago to facilitate construction of the new intersection of US-31 and Marion Center Road.

The property Buday purchased from the city was what remained after the road project had been completed.

The parcel is small, .32 of an acre, and is shaped like a piece of pie making it awkward and not well-suited for development, but ideal for access.

Part of the agreement made between Buday and the city was that the Michigan Department of Transportation would step in and build the entrance and exit.

"I think it is a safer entrance and exit. The business had limited on-site parking. With the new parcel he has some parking area," Weisner said.

Buday explained that with the additional land and the new driveway right off of Marion Center Road the business location is safer. Before he had purchased the land people were turning off of US-31 into the Buday business while drivers turned out of nearby Marion Center Road.

Buday foresaw this as a possible hazard and is pleased with the outcome, as he has seen it benefit both his customers and his employees.

Weisner added that there remains a larger city-owned land parcel, three quarters of an acre, located across the street from Buday's that was used as a temporary retention pond for the Marion Center project. He said that the city is looking to fill the pond this spring and will thereafter look to sell the property which he considers to be "more usable" than the Buday piece.

As of this year, Buday's Sound Advice has been in operation for 25 years. The business recently opened a new location in Petoskey. Buday said that his hope down the road is to expand the Charlevoix location.

There is currently a residence owned by Buday located behind the business in a commercial district. There is a lifelong lease on the property extended to the lessee.

Buday hopes to eventually incorporate this adjoining piece and enlarge the Charlevoix store.

Buday said that his sons Doug and Dan who are currently helping manage the operation will eventually take over the reigns of the entire business.

SCRAPBOOK

The politics of being a Charlevoix post master

Marilyn Boss
'Days gone by'

In years gone by, the job of postmaster was a politically appointed one. Then in 1951, Peter Timmer was appointed to the post, and this ended the trend.

He served as postmaster for 13 years, and resigned in 1964. This began a time of debate as to how to appoint the next postmaster. During his tenure at the post office, Timmer sorted and delivered mail. He told how life was definitely keyed to a tempo that would seem strange to people living in the 1960s.

Timmer recalled in an editorial at the time, that the bulk of the mail came in on trains, in the morning and the evening. During the summer the resort trains carried so much mail, that the post office worked two shifts. Postal savings were also a big thing. At one time the Charlevoix Post Office had $200,000 in postal savings on deposit.

Glenn Sheppard, the editor of the Courier at the time, lauded Timmer for his work in making Charlevoix's Post Office one of the town's best liked institutions. He spoke of how summer visitors were awed by the congenial service they received, and how the townspeople enjoyed going to the post office twice a day.

Timmer was the last person to claim any of the credit for this. He said, "It's the guys...they've been wonderful to work with."

Sheppard also said, "It would be sheer blindness to ignore the fact that the post office's not being a center for political pork barrel has been a major factor in its unique atmosphere. The Courier feels it is to all of Charlevoix's benefit to maintain a non-political post office."

The postmaster's job was generally considered a political plum and was usually administered as such. Timmer was the most qualified man for the job in 1951, so the outgoing postmaster recommended him for it...even though it meant crossing party lines. In maintaining a non-political post office, it would mean that Assistant Postmaster Dan Geneit would be promoted to postmaster.

Timmer, in a letter to the editor of the Courier, said, "The statement that the Postmaster's job is deliberately designed to be a reward for service to a political party is open to serious question. Serious attempts have been made to take it from the grasp of politicians and the practice is odious to the general public. The practice undercuts the morale of postal employees and outrages the sense of justice of the average citizen. The promotion of a postal employee to the position of Postmaster is relatively simple...in fact much simpler than appointing one from the outside. This proves that you don't need to be an ardent politician to get the job and also that the job isn't designed ONLY to be a reward for political service."

The heading in the next Courier read: POSTMASTER ROW BOILS.

The Charlevoix County Democratic Committee met after the announcement of Timmer's resignation and several participants said it was "as good a show as the Republican convention on TV."

County Democratic Chairman George LaBlance staunchly denied reports of a "split" in the party. LaBlance admitted that there was a "lot of heated tempers" at the meeting.

He also said he had no comment regarding rumors that he was personally interested in getting the job. The leaders were split on whether the postmaster's appointment should be made on the basis of political patronage or qualification for the job.

Dan Geneit, assistant postmaster was favored by Timmer for the job. Martha Tunison was a former County Democratic Chairman and had long been active in party activities. LaBlance said there was "no opposition to Geneit as far as the party was concerned, but this is a patronage appointment. Tunison has worked very hard for the party."

Due to a parliamentary disagreement, the meeting never got around to voting on the appointment.

LaBlance arbitrarily adjourned the meeting when debate got out of control. It eventually came about that Dan Geneit was appointed postmaster and he served Charlevoix well.

It was gratifying to the populace that control was in local hands.

Heise helped many maintain sobriety

After the war, his father, Edward Heise Sr., died, but Ed Jr. did not choose to continue the family plumbing and heating business. Instead Ed became a jack-of-all trades.

His work included opening army/navy surplus stores here in Charlevoix in the early 1950s, opening antique stores and also working at Hess Furniture.

While working at the Hess business, Ed fell down an elevator shaft. He lived to tell the tale but the fall had disabled him.

Following the accident he let his artistic spirit soar. He climbed out of his wheelchair and mounted himself on a pair of crutches and eventually walked with a cane. This cane took him down to local beaches where gathered Petoskey stones that he crafted into jewelry and he sold at a store in Lansing that featured crafts of the disabled.

While he discovered various trades and raised a family, from the mid 1920s on, he battled his greatest foe, alcoholism.

Lorraine explained that at that time there were no meetings in the area for alcoholics so he would travel with his best friend Jerry Whitley to Mackinac Island and Alpena to attend.

When his mother died unexpectedly in 1961, Ed lost his will to stay sober.

In 1963 he married his second wife Jane Bishaw. The couple parented two children, Edward Jeffrey and William Thomas.

1963 was the same year that Ed reunited with his sobriety. Ed would have celebrated his thirty-seventh year of sobriety on May 4, 2001.

"His greatest joy in life was knowing he was sober," Lorraine said.

He lived at 104 Mason for many years and was a founding father of the Alano Club that was started at the site in 1986. Lorraine said that in 1986, Ed's career began.

"His second greatest joy was being of any assistance to anyone who walked through the door. He had been at every low and high point. Helping others with drug and alcohol problems humbled him so much. He knew he walked in their shoes and he never gave up on anyone," she added.

According to Norm Lawson, Ed Heise was one of the founders of the Serenity House. His long-term sobriety gave others hope. Lawson said his commitment to the program showed others "it wasn't the end of the world."

Ed's passion for sobriety and helping others overcome addiction was closely matched by his political savvy.

"My dad was a strong, strong Democrat. A few years ago he was honored as one of the oldest Democrats in Charlevoix County. He was given a flag that had flown at the capital. He would defend his political beliefs to the end," Lorraine said.

Heise family members and Serenity House friends said that in his 83 years, Ed lived through five wars and 11 presidents, he traveled extensively, raised three children and told stories that would put you right in the moment.

Funeral services for Edward Heise will take place at 11:30 a.m. Thursday at the Charlevoix United Methodist Church.

Students to see swearing in of next U.S. president

All of those students involved in the trip that were interviewed said this inauguration carries special significance and will most likely mark the first step in a rocky term for president elect George W. Bush.

The interest of local students involved that were interviewed ranges from political curiosity to a disdain for politicians to the excitement of being a part of history.

"I've witnessed the inauguration on TV many times but being able to see it in person will be an unbelievable experience," 17-year-old senior Lisa Miller said.

The group said that they look forward to attending not only the inauguration, but also two Kennedy Center performances and checking out both the Smithsonian and Georgetown's campus while in Washington D.C.

Tickets to the inauguration were provided by Congressman Bart Stupak. Students were asked to bring their own spending money for the other afternoon and evening outings.

The students, along with four adult chaperones, will depart from the high school at 3 p.m. Jan. 17. They will be traveling in three rented vans.

The D.C. bound group is scheduled to return Jan. 22, but this arrival date depends on the weather.

The best way to contact your elected city official

COUNCIL

In addition, both August "AJ" Witthoef (third ward) and newly appointed Bernie DeVries (first ward) returned messages left on their answering machines within 24 hours.

However, the Courier left four messages on the answering machine of second ward council member Bill Bellows over a period of one week about his accessibility. He has yet to respond.

City council is made up of individuals that create policy that governs the City of Charlevoix. In many cases their accessibility is the difference between constituents of a given ward being represented or not.

Each member of council that responded, said that they do hear about ward concerns from ward residents.

"Most of them aren't shy in telling you what the problems are. Most of my constituents have the same concerns that I do. I have a few regulars that contact me," Carlson said.

None of the council members interviewed have regular office hours nor is there an office in city hall for council members to meet with city residents.

Both Campbell and Carlson said the lack of a designated office in city hall may reflect the chain of command in Charlevoix's government. Charlevoix is administratively structure as a "city manager government." This is a setup where power and responsibility lie mainly in the hands of City Manager Mike Weisner.

Weisner is in charge of the day-to-day operations of the city, but policy is still being set by council.

"Most questions can be answered through my office. I would like to think the quickest avenue is to call us and see what we can do for them," Weisner said.

Council meets the first and third Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in council chambers at city hall.

Harsch: No meeting just for marina

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

According to City Planner Gerry Harsch, after a project planner is appointed for shore-side renovations planned for East Park, the public will be invited to meet with this individual to provide a vision of park changes, but no public meetings are being planned to specifically discuss the marina expansion.

"At some point there will be discussion heard about the whole project. This doesn't inhibit people who want to comment. There is a plan out there with proposals as to how the marina will work. Proposal plans have been published. At any public meeting there is an opportunity for the public to be heard," Harsch said.

The Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority (DDA) recently decided that the city will be ready to appoint a project planner for East Park renovations in March.

City Manager Mike Weisner referred to East Park as a multiple use area and said that the city is looking to hire a planning firm that is, "used to doing things like that and guiding us along."

"In my opinion this is the most important piece of property that the city owns. The feeling is, you want someone that will come in and through community input will define what the community wants to accomplish and will give the community ideas on how to accomplish these wants," Weisner added.

Commission already spends over $400,000 for this winter

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Winter weather conditions have resulted in treacherous Charlevoix roads and the county road commission has felt the impact.

"So far to date (Jan. 17) we have spent $417,950.92. This includes labor, equipment and materials for winter maintenance," Charlevoix County Road Commission Manager Pat Harmon said.

Harmon added that the total road maintenance expenditure for the 1999-2000 winter was $573,142.35.

However, according to Harmon the commission is still within its budget and he is not concerned about depleting their funds. He said that each year he plans ahead and allocates one third or $1 million of the road commission's budget to winter road maintenance.

"We'll be fine. I don't know what January, February and March will bring. If it is like a normal winter you will see the figure of $417,950.92 at least double," he said.

They may be able to financially sustain efficient maintenance, but at the rate plow drivers are moving there is a chance of burn-out.

Harmon said that since the first of January road commission workers are averaging 28 to 30 hours of overtime weekly. He added that the thaw last week gave them a much needed break.

Bellows found on Florida vacation, editor apologizes

Following the publication of last week's article on how to contact Charlevoix City Council members, the Charlevoix Courier discovered the whereabouts of Council Member Bill Bellows.

A neighbor of Bellows called to report he had been vacationing in Florida since early January and would be returning around Feb. 14. The Courier placed a telephone call to Bellows in Florida and confirmed this information.

Bellows said he is very accessible to the public and the best way for his constituents to contact him is simply by calling him. His home phone number is 547-6263.

He further stated he informed the administrative assistant to the Charlevoix City Manager, Linda Weller, that he would be in Florida and when he would return.

Charlevoix Courier Editor Jeremy McBain apologizes for calling him inaccessible in an editorial last week.

His whereabouts were listed as unknown by the Charlevoix Courier at press-time for last week's story based on conversations Staff Writer Julie Musilek had with a city council member.

Courier general manager finds Canada's Charlevoix

Ken Winter
General Manager

BAIE-SAINT-PAUL, Quebec — Sylvain Desmeules smiled as he looked at a recent issue of the Charlevoix Courier that had a color picture of the townspeople on the front page.

The Canadian journalist was laughing because the newspaper had a similar name as his weekly newspaper, the Charlevoisien, and the people came from a similar region called "Charlevoix."

Desmeules is one of two reporters who work at the L'Hebdo Charlevoisien, a weekly newspaper started in 1995 to serve the people living in Quebec's Charlevoix region, a 3,600-square-mile area located northeast of Quebec.

While the weekly newspaper is five times larger than our weekly Charlevoix Courier, it serves a very similar readership of resort and year-round residents. However, people in Michigan might have a difficult time reading the Charlevoisien, because it's written in French.

Both newspapers are tabloids using a lot of color on their front pages and with a lot of similar content. While the Courier circulates primarily in the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix County, the Charlevoisien covers some 14 towns and villages that comprise what is known as the Charlevoix region.

The weekly Canadian newspaper has offices in the region's two largest communities — Baie-Saint-Paul and La Malbaie. It has a combined staff of six, which handles news and advertising.

Charlevoix Courier publisher Kirk Schaller and I recently met with the staff of Quebec's Charlevoisien to exchange newspapers and ideas. We were curious about the region that shares the name of Charlevoix.

Jean-Francois Neron, a reporter and editor who works at the newspaper's main office in La Malbaie, said the newspaper serves several important functions of providing readers not only with what is happening in their communities, but what local government is doing to serve its residents. High taxes are the biggest concern.

Like the Charlevoix Courier, Neron finds himself particularly busy during the summer covering the many activities related to its large summer resort and tourism trade.

The Quebec region hosts many summer festivals, as well as attracts many painters and writers who operate studios and shops in many of the area's quaint villages and towns.

As in Michigan's Charlevoix County, Quebec's Charlevoix region offers many similar recreational activities, ranging from boating in the St. Lawrence River, golfing, camping and hiking, to winter downhill and cross-country skiing, snowmobiling and snowshoeing.

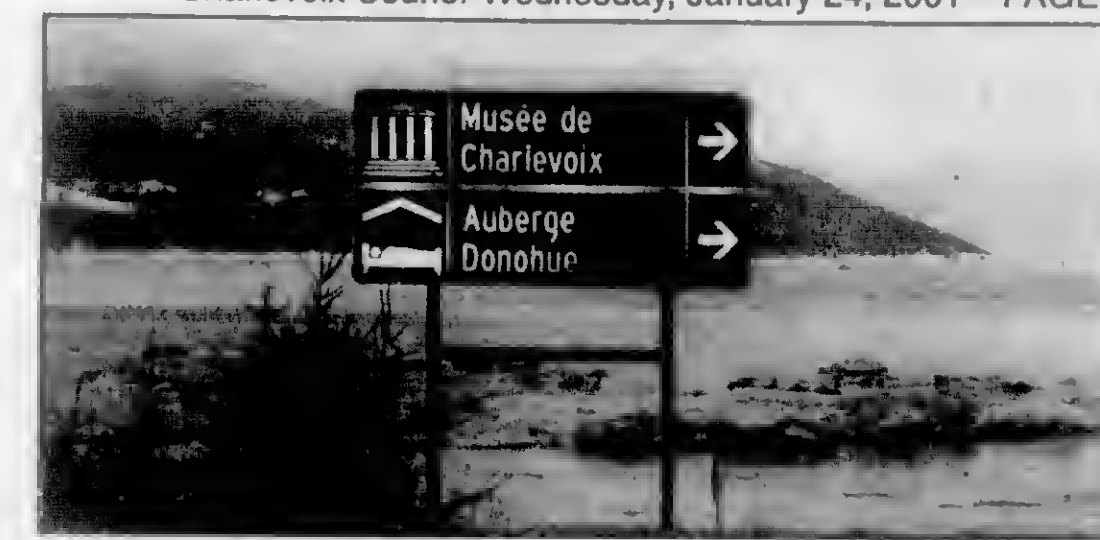

Just as there's ferry service to Beaver Island, there is boat service to a nearby island in the St. Lawrence called, Ile Aux Coudres, where there are both summer and year-round residents.

Both communities are also named after the same French Jesuit priest and historian, Father Pierre Francis Xavier De Charlevoix, born in 1682 during the reign of Louis XIV.

Charlevoix first left France at age 23 to teach grammar at a college in Quebec for four years. He then went back to Paris in 1709, where he continued to study history.

In 1721, he was sent back to Montreal to find a trade route to the Pacific. Traveling with a small group in two canoes, he travelled along the St. Lawrence River past Niagara and eventually to Detroit. From Detroit's Fort Ponchartrain, he traveled to Michilimackinac. Unsuccessful at finding a route, Charlevoix eventually went through the Great Lakes to the Mississippi and eventually back to France.

While there is no proof that he actually set foot in Charlevoix, he did travel past its shore.

Highway 138 winds along the St. Lawrence River north of Quebec and looks very similar to the drive on US-31 along Lake Michigan, except for the Laurentian Mountains in the heart of the Charlevoix region. (Photo by Ken Winter)

OPINIONS

Some drivers need to go back to school

Northern Michigan winters bring not only beautiful weather for outdoor sports activities, but they are also a time of caution for those traveling on the roads.

In addition to the roads being slippery in the winter, when the snow flies or even when the sun creates blinding glares, visibility worsens. Both of these can create dangerous conditions for drivers.

In a period of about three weeks, Charlevoix has mourned the loss of three people to traffic accidents on the road. Fortunately, these accidents were the results of poor road conditions and not poor driving ability.

But, they just as easily could have been.

Many people understand this danger and change their driving habits accordingly. They slow down, turn on their headlights and practice other good defensive driving skills.

However, there are still a few drivers out there who need some lessons on winter driving in northern Michigan.

While out pursuing stories in the past few weeks, Charlevoix Courier staff members have noted the following

Letters Policy

Readers are encouraged to write letters to the editor addressing pertinent topics of community interest.

The Courier editor reserves the right to edit letters for length, correct grammar and libelous statements. We do not publish letters we judge are a personal attack.

Letters to the editor must be signed by the author, and the name of the author will appear with published letters.

dangerous driving violations on roads in and around Charlevoix during times of dangerous winter weather: Passing on double-yellow lines (many times when an oncoming vehicle was within 100 yards), passing on the snow-covered shoulder of the road, tail-gating, speeding, driving without their headlights on in low visibility, failing to use a blinker when turning and talking on a cellular phone while driving.

These were not seen once or twice by staff members, but as regular events on the roads. It is plain and simple — people committing these acts are putting their lives and the lives of other drivers on the road in jeopardy.

Why do some people insist on putting others in danger with their driving? Is whatever they are hurrying to that important? How did these people get a license?

If you are a driver who commonly commits one of the acts listed above, ask yourself this, "What will you say to the family of the other driver you just killed?"

We do not publish unsigned letters. Letters should be typed, double-spaced, and not exceed 450 words.

An address and daytime phone number should accompany the letter for verification purposes.

Road to a picture-perfect wedding, pothole ridden

Julie Musilek
Staff writer

After being engaged for a couple of months I think I have gained a better understanding of why the tradition is for the individual delivering the proposal to be down on one knee — they are asking for the grace of God to be with the couple over the next couple months of planning.

Bare in mind my fiancé and I had originally planned to be married on a beach in Jamaica with a couple of friends and immediate family members.

This simple plan of attack has since ballooned into an outdoor, summer wedding with 200 guests and there is absolutely nothing simple about it.

Brides-to-be, and those battle scarred wives who have made it through, know that there are a sea of options out there and everybody has an opinion.

It's either the bridesmaid who says she doesn't like the way she looks in strapless dresses or another who is planning a trip to Japan arriving just a day before the wedding, banking on "Northwest's" reliability.

Then comes the ever-dreaded logistics, like choosing invitations.

All who receive an invitation open up a laundry list of paper products, from the reception card to the replies to the thank you cards. And bless the government for hiking up the postal rate, as each invitation sent requires postage to get to its destination and another stamp so the reply will find its way back.

Then you dive into the madness of American consumerist culture, that has given us so many choices that you are ready to be admitted to the loony bin — what would you like your cake to look like, hot or cold hors d'oeuvres, live music or a DJ, where does one rent tents and chairs and how does one gather all the addresses of everyone they know?

I'm still in the thick of it all and am enjoying myself and the time it has allowed me to spend with my mom, my sister and maid of honor, my grandmother and even my fiancé who has stepped up to the plate and helped make hard decisions.

But come August, I'll be the one racing down the aisle and grinning ear to ear as I pack my bags for the Caribbean.

I salute brave brides around the world who have entered into the abyss of wedding coordinating. You quickly learn that nothing pleases everyone and that your dream day doesn't come as easily as buying a pair of glass slippers and heading off in a pumpkin carriage.

You also begin to not sweat the little stuff because, after all, the significance of the day doesn't lie in the tangible aspects of the wedding itself but in celebrating the future that lies ahead with those you love.

Julie Musilek is the staff writer of the Charlevoix Courier. She can be contacted by calling 547-6558 or e-mailing charlevoix-courier@charlevoixcourier.com.

Letters to the editor

Rebuttal on editorials

Editor:

Sorry you regret not receiving letters opposing your positions on 1: the Wharfside building, 2: the quick appointment to fill a Council vacancy or 3: your failed attempt to convince us all to agree with your view of the timing of the start of the millennium. May I be of help on all but the latter?

Studies by the city (including its staff, council, mayor and the subsidiaries, such as the Downtown Development Authority) concluded that the concept of the removal of the Parkside and Wharfside buildings offered benefits that far outweighed the negatives, although both were given in-depth consideration. To pre-design details of the after-removal land use would have required public input years before any implementation would be possible. The proper time for such studies is when the resulting actions can be undertaken in the near future. That time is now.

The action of the mayor to nominate (and the council to consent to) a replacement on the same day a vacancy is created should be complimented, not criticized. Because of that action I, a first ward resident, had proper council representation without interruption. None were waiting in the wings to be called on — if they were they should have filed last May. None but incumbents did, neither for any council seat nor for other city office!

The analysis of availability of city officials leaves much to be desired. Our charter states that mayor is CEO of the city and president of the council. He, and the council, may be as strong as they care to be when it comes to guiding the city and setting its policies. Still, communications on all routine matters, gripes and comments should be directed to the office of the city manager (547-3270) and not to the mayor or members of council. The city staff is full time; it runs the day-to-day operations of the city and is paid appropriately. The mayor and council are part-time. They are compensated for meetings, planning, budget work and preparation time. They are definitely not on call!

Your sister publication (Petoskey News-Review) gives the impression that a Round Lake summer resident feels that that lake is losing some of its charm.

Could it be that some residents had the moored yachts banned and that he now misses that pleasing portion of the scenery?

Elbert Kaiser honored as Citizen of the Year

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Calling him a man who has "made a significant positive impact on our community," the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce honored Charlevoix resident Elbert W. Kaiser as its Outstanding Citizen of the Year on Jan. 18 at its annual meeting.

Kaiser said he was very surprised by the award.

"I didn't think I had done anything," he said. "It is a compliment. It is nice to be recognized for the things that I have done, but there are many people in Charlevoix just as deserving as I am."

In a speech at the meeting, new Chamber Chairman of the Board Roger Nesburg said Kaiser has a "quiet, friendly way of getting big jobs done with little or no fanfare, and possesses that quiet confidence that needs no personal recognition."

Kaiser, a Dearborn High School graduate and a 1950 graduate of the University of Michigan, has led a busy life in Charlevoix.

He is an active member of the American Legion Leslie T. Shapton Post 226 and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1153, a member of the Charlevoix Lions Club since 1930 and served on the board of directors of the Charlevoix United Way, Charlevoix Area Hospital, Northwest Industrial Association and

"It is nice to be recognized for the things that I have done, but there are many people in Charlevoix just as deserving as I am."

Elbert Kaiser,
Outstanding Citizen of the Year the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Kaiser was also instrumental in the Charlevoix Bicentennial Cherry Pie Project, which gained international publicity and a world record in the Guinness Book of Records, Nesburg said.

In the Lions Club, Kaiser was the first to bring a circus to town and for a period he was responsible for the club's Venetian Festival activities. He also served as "King Lion," the club's name for president.

Nesburg added Kaiser was very active in the chamber. He wrote the mission statement for the Industrial Development Committee and worked with the bylaws committee, fund-raising committee, membership committee, Venetian Festival committee and fishing committee.

Kaiser, who was the plant manager of Medusa cement company before it was called Southdown, used his connections with the company to bring the ship "Medusa Challenger" into Round Lake on Memorial Day weekend in 1980 to raise funds for the high school band and he convinced the company to enter one of its large quarry trucks in the Venetian Street Parade.

"I have heard it said that if you had an army that was going into battle, this is the man that you would want to be your general, your leader," Nesburg said.

Kaiser was not present at the Jan. 18 meeting, because he was spending the winter at his retirement home in Florida, a fact the chamber didn't realize until a few days before giving the award.

He said he was contacted the day before the chamber meeting by Chamber President Jacqueline Merta. Kaiser has been spending time at his home in Florida during winters for the last eight years, but is still a legal resident in Charlevoix and comes back every summer.

He and his wife, Bev, have three children, Linda, Bill and Paul.

Thank you

Editor:

The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project would like to thank churches, organizations, businesses and individuals who contributed food, gifts or money to make it possible for us to make Christmas 2000 brighter for many families.

The project furnished 109 families with groceries and Christmas dinner. 175 children received gifts of a toy, clothing, mittens, socks and a book.

Grateful thanks to the many volunteers who wrapped gifts, packed groceries and delivered them to shut-ins. Youth groups prepared double bags and later carried bags to the clients' cars on Dec. 23.

We hope it made Christmas better for you because you helped someone who needed and appreciated your kindness. Please know we are grateful to you.

Kern named chamber Ambassador of the Year

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix resident of 20 years, Bob Kern, was appointed the Eleventh Ambassador of the Year at the annual Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce meeting Jan. 18.

"The award (Ambassador of the Year) recognizes an individual who promotes the spirit of the Charlevoix community and the Chamber of Commerce and its programs," Roger Nesbitt, Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce board chairman said.

A speech delivered at the meeting by Chamber President Jacqueline Merta outlined the ways in which Kern exemplified "the spirit of Charlevoix."

Included in Kern's recognized accomplishments that promote the Charlevoix community were his seven years of service on the Charlevoix Board of Appeals, his three years of service on the Zoning Board of Appeals, his 13 year membership with the Industrial Development Committee and his work in the 1985 founding of the Charlevoix Rotary Club.

"He (Kern) has been instrumental in working with industries that are interested in relocating to our community, which has made a significant impact on the growth of Charlevoix's industrial base," Merta said.

ing the many ways in which Kern has also served the chamber. She said his service to the chamber included; four years as chamber director, one year as chamber second vice president, two years as chamber president and one year as past president.

She highlighted his integral role in the Downtown Action Agenda aimed at strengthening the economic health of Charlevoix's downtown business sector which was instituted during his tenure as chamber president.

"The plan is divided into a number of aims: To support and improve downtown stores; to improve the looks and comfort of the downtown shopping district; to provide ample, affordable parking; attract more customers; relieve traffic congestion; and develop organization and funding sources for downtown action," Merta said.

Kern and his wife Joyce have five children and three grandchildren. He has been in the real estate business for 30 years and is currently working at the Charlevoix branch of Real Estate One.

Kern said that the award recognizing his service to the community took him by surprise.

"I am ecstatic, I had no idea. It was very nice. Charlevoix is a great town and the Chamber of Commerce is a great organization," he said.

Writer argues: why worry?

By TOM WELSCOTT
Chaplin, Workplace Ministries

"Why Worry?" That's a silly question. Everyone knows that life is packed full of things to worry about. From the minute we get up until the minute we drop off to sleep they never end.

Even after we do finally doze off, our unconscious often works overtime. That's life in 2001, do we have any other options?

We have no control over how fast the world around us tries to live, but we can take charge of how we choose to live. Endless demands give us little time for reflection, but God reminds us that He is there in the midst of it all.

No we will never be able to arrange a luncheon rendezvous with God, but He repeatedly reminds us in the Bible that we don't need one. Psalms 46:1 says, "God is our refuge and strength, an ever-present help in trouble." Even though we can't see Him, he is always with us.

Beacons of Blessing

When do we seek refuge or shelter? If we are caught outside in a violent thunderstorm a long way from home. Then in desperation we seek refuge under anything that will provide a little shelter from the storm. We seek refuge if we are in an unbearable living arrangement. The place of shelter and refuge must be a place that will be free from those fears.

In a spiritual sense it's impossible to see that shelter or identify exactly where we would go to find it. All who have entered a relationship with God by welcoming His Son, Jesus, have the wonderful gift of His presence today and throughout all time. When that has happened we don't have to go looking for it anymore. That relationship offers a ready made shelter wherever we go.

Not only is God our refuge and strength, it also says in the Bible that we can "Throw all our worries and cares on Jesus for He cares about us." Of course, like any other aspect of relating to an invisible God we are not implying that is something we can see.

It happens within us, it is something that we sense, but can never pin down. If we try to write a formula or write a computer program to explain how it works we will never find it.

Faith is the essential ingredient. Faith that there is a God, and he does care about me. Then in some unexplainable way I can experience Jesus taking all my worries. When that faith is present, then and only then can I sense something of His presence. At that point He becomes a refuge from the endless barrage of things I am being induced to worry about.

Your God who cares says, "Throw all your worries and cares on Me for I care about you."

Boys' vacation turns into manatee rescue

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A January vacation in Florida turned into a rescue mission for three Charlevoix boys.

The boys, Ryan Amick, 10, Mitchell Crandall, 11, and Ray Jones were boating with their family on the Peace River — near Port Charlotte, Fla. — when an officer from the Florida Wildlife and Conservation Department approached them and asked for their help in saving a baby Manatee seen swimming nearby.

Unlike other baby animals, usually thought of as small and cuddly-looking, this one was 250 pounds and 4 feet long. According to the boys, the wildlife officer was concerned about a wound on the animal.

The animal had also become separated from its mother and was swimming in cold water, which could have killed it.

"I didn't even know what it was. It just looked like a big pile of something," Crandall said. "I've seen one on tv, but not in real life."

Amick said he thought the animal looked like "a seal, but much fatter."

The boys, along with three others, helped the officer lift the manatee from the water and onto a boat. It was later taken to a biology resource center where it was treated for a wound inflicted by a speed-boat's propeller.

Crandall said the wound looked like a huge cut and the animal seemed like it was in pain.

However, Amick added the animal still acted very gentle and calm.

"He was cool," Amick said. Manatees, also called "Sea Cows," are listed as an endangered species. They have been known to grow up to 13 feet long, weigh up to 1,000 pounds and live up to 50 years.

Staff Writer

The Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council is taking great strides to ensure the future health of one of Charlevoix's greatest features, Lake Charlevoix.

"We are working to develop a strategy to reduce existing pollution and to prevent future pollution," watershed council staff member Ann Baughman said.

Each year fishermen, boaters, swimmers and jet skiers head out on the lake and enjoy its 17,000 acres of water and fresh bounty but rarely ask how daily actions impact the lake's water quality and ecosystem.

Since June of 1999 the Tip of the Mitt staff has been conducting inventories and identifying sources of pollution threatening the lake's water quality.

They divided the Lake Charlevoix Watershed Project into two areas of focus, point source and nonpoint source pollution.

Baughman explained that point source pollution comes from a pipe, like a waste water treatment plant. She said that two point source pollution sites were included in their study, the Boyne City Waste Water Treatment Plant and the East Jordan Iron Works.

The Iron Works uses Lake Charlevoix water to cool machinery and then pumps the water, which after use has reached a warmer temperature, back into the lake.

Nonpoint source pollution includes all pollution that comes from the land. Nonpoint source examples are rain water carrying contaminated soil particles, bacteria from animal waste and toxic chemicals from the road.

Baughman said that the salt used on slick winter roads can be a problem but the council has not found any specific locations where this is currently a serious problem. She commended the road commission for their mixing of sand and salt to avoid water contamination.

The environmental group examined numerous road crossings from which other pollutants or toxins may have filtered into streams or rivers below that connect to the lake. They will then identify areas that need improvements and make recommendations as to how the site could be more environmentally sensitive.

They also looked closely at areas where agricultural activity is prevalent. Baughman said the group plans to work with individuals to help educate them in ways to safely use pesticides including the implementation of natural buffers.

The council advocates the use of natural buffers for lakefront home owners also.

Baughman cited instances where lakefront homeowners use fertilizers on their lawn which then wash into the lake. The environmental group encourages land owners to keep the natural landscape intact. Trees and shrubs have root systems that will filter the majority of the contaminants out before they reach the water.

The council met at the Charlevoix County Building on Jan. 9 to discuss the agricultural, forestry, recreation and shoreline assessments.

They prioritized the cases and decided to send a summary of shoreline inventory results to all shoreline residents. They also plan to follow up in areas where they found shoreline algae, to determine the cause and to help in reducing its presence.

They are looking for ways to help create better interaction between shoreline builders and the lake by possibly implementing development guidelines.

In terms of recreation they found areas of erosion from canoeists and anglers. The environmental group looks to restore these sites and to educate outdoor enthusiasts about water quality.

Thirdly, they went over the impact of agriculture on the lake. The group plans to work with farms that are close to major tributaries in an effort to install "best management practices."

Lastly, they looked at forestry study results which revealed a need for information among large property owners. Baughman said if grant money allows, they may be able to do some cost sharing with the property owner in the future.

The Jan. 30 meeting will take place in the county building and the group will discuss the remaining inventories, including: zoning, road crossings, sensitive area land protection and storm water. The meeting will be followed by a land-use assessment.

With the inventory in final stages of completion the council has already applied for grants from the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Environmental Quality which will help implement their key recommendations.

Baughman added correcting the issues they discovered, will be challenging.

ROADS

The county is equipped with 25 trucks that "run every day across the county." Two trucks run the night shift sticking to state highways including: US-131, M-75, US-31, M-66 and M-32.

In non-evening hours, trucks are deployed to roads based on a priority road classification.

The state highway system is the road commission's number one priority followed by "primary roads." Primary roads include, but are not limited to: Boyne City/Charlevoix Road, Barnard Road, Ellsworth Road, Boyne City/East Jordan Road, Deer Lake Road and Thumb Lake Road.

Harmon explained that local road systems throughout the townships are always last.

"We have to have the main roads cleared and passable. The main roads connect businesses and cities throughout the county," he said.

With the road commission budget steadily rising and the uncertain path the weather will take in the remaining months of winter, Harmon said the impact the harsh 2000-2001 winter will have is hard to tell.

"If the rest of the winter is bad we will have to adjust. There may be things that might not be able to happen this summer, but it is too early to tell. We could have a spring like last year when the snow melted in February," he said.

Boys varsity basketball adds more wins to record

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Scott Parrish didn't touch the ball on offense for the first seven minutes of the game, and he didn't score until there were two seconds left in the first quarter. He made up for lost time, though, scoring 21 points and grabbing 10 rebounds, leading Charlevoix to a 91-59 home win over Boyne City last Friday night.

The Rayders and Ramblers traded baskets much of the first quarter, with each team leading by as many as three. For Charlevoix, Doug Rieck hit two three-pointers early and Rob Boss cleaned up inside, scoring five in the period. Parrish's put-back just before the buzzer sent the Rayders off with an 18-17 advantage.

Boyne scored the first second quarter basket but then Patrick Gowell and Parrish each scored four in an 8-0 run which gave Charlevoix a 26-19 lead. The Rayders never trailed again. Charlevoix's pressure defense and offensive firepower keyed the blitz that saw the lead expand to 43-27 at the half.

The second half provided more of the same as Parrish hit a short jumper only six seconds out of the locker room and followed it with a pretty driving layup to run the Rayder lead to twenty at 47-27. Parrish and Boss combined for the first 18 points of the third quarter, relentlessly pounding the ball inside against the over-matched Ramblers.

Boss and Parrish each ended up with 10 points in the frame. Charlevoix carried a 69-37 lead into the fourth quarter.

In the middle quarters, Charlevoix outscored Boyne 51-20 led by Parrish's 19 points and Boss's 14.

Charlevoix Coach Keith Haske emptied the bench early in the fourth and as a result, 11 of the 12 Rayder players scored and all got significant playing time.

The Rayder lead grew to as much as 37 at 80-43 midway through the fourth stanza.

For the game, in addition to Parrish's contributions, Boss — playing "one of his best games of the season," according to Haske — had 19 points and 10 boards. Rieck and Jim Shepherd each scored nine points. Keith Daly netted five points and grabbed eight rebounds. Dave Hall led Boyne City's scorers with 14.

Haske termed the game a "team effort" and praised his defense, especially Gowell (six points, four assists, four steals), Ryan Rafacz and Jeremiah Teuscher.

"I thought Boyne City played well early on but our pressure eventually wore them down. You could feel things start to shift when our defense got going," Haske said.

With the win, the Rayders ran their record to 7-3 overall and a perfect 4-0 in the conference. After traveling to take on fellow unbeaten conference rival Kalkaska on Tuesday, the Rayders play at Traverse City Saint Francis on Friday.

The Charlevoix junior varsity also was victorious, beating Boyne City, 69-50. Todd Carey led a balanced attack with 12 points while Nate Teuscher and Donovan each had 11.

Varsity volleyball team still searching for wins

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School Varsity Volleyball team dropped another meet Monday night when they faced Kalkaska.

Coach Carolyn Loper said the Rayders just were not in the game. "I had ten players that weren't there to play volleyball. They had no focus," she said.

Loper said there was a total breakdown in fundamental playing ability. She added the team will be having some hard practices this week to get their minds back in the game.

"They are a better team than they played (Monday)," Loper said. She did praise Kate Madison for her attempted rally in the second match with her serving.

Like the varsity team, the junior varsity team lost when it faced Kalkaska Monday night, dropping two out of three games.

Top servers for the game were Natasha Kleiber and Krystal Meredith. Top offensive players were Kleiber and Becca Kanine. Top defensive players were Kelly Zimmerman and Shayna Drost.

While the JV and varsity teams took losses, the freshman team did not follow. They beat Kalkaska in their face-off.

Top servers for the game were Erika Stone, Maggie Romig and Lauren Eldredge. Top offensive players were Andrea Ruhlman, Britany Pizzura and Erika Stone. Top defensive players were Amanda Boss, Jessica Pettis and Maggie Beemon.

Newspapers deliver the community!

Only a few hundred fans were at the game to witness Bill Jones' 55-yard winning touchdown, but thousands read about it in the hometown newspaper.

Sixty-four percent of local newspaper readers depend on their local paper as their primary news source. No single media reaches as many local homes with as much credibility as the hometown newspaper. For proven advertising response and a solid connection to the community, newspapers deliver the most value for the dollar.

WINTER QUEEN CONTEST FRIDAY NIGHT

THIRTEEN GIRLS TO COMPETE AT GYM FOR HONOR

Following completion of plans by various committees of the Charlevoix Polar Bear Winter Sports Club, Charlevoix's first winter sports activity will take place Friday evening, January 8.

The first event will be the winter queen contest, to be held at 8 o'clock at the school gymnasium. E.J. Edwards, chairman of the committee for selection of candidates, has announced that 13 girls have consented to enter the competition. The winner will represent this city in the regional contest for Michigan Winter Queen at Petoskey on January 19. Those competing are: Esther O'Neill, Helen Gallagher, Ernestine Chew, Alice Meyer, Marjorie Miller, Mildred LaBlanc, Esther Lou Fochtman, Luella Cunningham, Mildred Withers, Esther West, Beth Heise, Margaret McRae and Frances Withers.

At the queen's contest the group will appear in a tableau. The King of the Realm of Snow, Ice and the Tempests decides to abdicate his throne in favor of a member of the fair sex. The King believes that his subjects (members of the audience) should choose his successor by a majority vote. Two Heralds, the Duke of Ice and the Earl of Snow, aid the king as the Princesses of the Realm appear in two short skits, one an indoor scene, the second an outdoor scene. Harry Bingham is chairman of the committee in charge of this feature, and is being assisted by Freda McMillan and Helen Anthony.

The program will be very similar to that carried out a year ago.

Admission tickets for adults, to cost 15 cents, will be accompanied by two ballots. Following presentation of the candidates, the first ballot will be taken, eliminating all but three. The contestant receiving the highest vote among the three survivors on the second ballot will be honored as winter queen. The two runners-up will act as maids of honor. Selection will be by popular vote of the assemblage, based on personality and poise of the contestants.

Other features of the evening's program will include music by the city band and several winter sports and comic movie reels.

An active campaign to sell memberships in the Charlevoix Polar Bear Winter Sports Club is now under way, directed by William Fessenden, chairman of the membership committee. A white polar bear mounted on a green arm band is being given with each membership. Funds raised in the campaign will be used to defray expenses of various activities in connection with winter sports.

The coronation ceremony, also to be held in the gymnasium, will be conducted Friday evening, January 15. The crowning will be followed by the Winter Queen's Ball and for the coronation and entertainment, winter queens, their escorts and chaperones from several neighboring cities will be guests of the Charlevoix winter sports committee. Music for the evening will be furnished by the Wexstaff's orchestra. The throne committee is making preparations for a beautiful setting for the ceremony.

Marina to be included in shore-side hearings

MARINA

Before being hired, the perspective planner will need to be interviewed by a "review committee" made up of the mayor, a council member and a DDA member.

After the review committee makes its decision, Harsch said the planner will pinpoint meeting dates at which time he/she will come together with the community to discuss shore-side renovations.

Harsch added that he estimates the planner meeting with the community will be 60 to 90 days after being hired. The product of the meetings will materialize in the drafting of a preliminary plan.

Weisner said, "I think that with proper planning we can achieve what the community wants in that park. It will be a win-win for everybody. Everyone can be satisfied; so many times Charlevoix has argued with itself. People can still have art fairs, band performances and restrooms plus more."

Weisner said the marina services one thing and the park services many. Therefore, the park requires a lot of input from the community.

"From my standpoint, with the marina we are trying to lay out boat slips, but on the shore-side we are trying to accomplish a whole bunch of things from band performances, to art fairs, to fish ponds," Weisner said.

He added that for the shore-side renovations all the facts are in front of the community.

Before hearing community comments on the marina Weisner feels the city should be equipped to respond to community concerns. One such concern that many residents have voiced is that of increased traffic volumes.

The city and the highway department are currently conducting a study that will gauge the effect the preliminary plans for the marina expansion would have on the bridge.

Weisner also highlighted the fact that the city has yet to conduct a financial feasibility plan which will answer the question, "Is a marina expansion financially a good business decision?"

The city has already applied for grants which will generate project funds for the Wharfside acquisition and demolition. Weisner said that there is not yet a set project budget and the budget will be decided after the city finalizes plans for what it will entail.

He foresees after the shore-side analysis and preliminary shore-side plan are completed, and all the facts surrounding the marina expansion are gathered, there will be discussion of how far the docks will extend, what impact the expansion will have on the Venetian boat parade and the Venetian fireworks and whether or not high traffic volumes from increased bridge activity will be an issue.

we deal with:
our customers and our employees.

The past year has been particularly notable for our young bank, and we have a lot to be thankful for. We settled into new quarters, and soon after drew up plans to expand into the larger, adjoining building; people enthusiastically embraced our high quality, personalized banking services (as evidenced by significant increases in loans and deposits); we retained and hired more of the most competent, customer service-driven bankers in northern Michigan; we surpassed our aggressive growth objectives; and we celebrated (on January 18) our first birthday.

So, thanks again everyone. We couldn't have done it without you.

New truck purchased to water petunias

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Every morning for the past 19 years from May 25 until one week after Labor Day, Dale Boss climbs out of bed at 4:15 a.m. and fires up the petunia truck — he is on the road by 4:30 a.m. watering five miles of flowers that line Bridge Street in downtown Charlevoix.

Boss said he uses five tanks or 2,500 gallons of water every day.

"It takes a lot of attention you just don't let them go," he said. For the past 19 years he has watered for 100 days straight and has never missed a day.

Boss sees Operation Petunia as one way that he can give back to the community that has given him so much and he grinned from ear to ear as the garage door lifted revealing the souped up 2001 Chevy truck that will be Charlevoix's latest "toy."

However, Operation Petunia hasn't always been so high tech, Boss explained the bumpy road he traveled to get the program where it is today.

He started out in 1982 using his son's one ton flatbed truck with two open livestock tanks on the rear that he borrowed from the Kiwanis Club.

His wife Marilyn rode on the back too. He said that every time he started and stopped she would get drenched.

"I tried to be careful but those tanks were 12 feet long with open tops," he said.

The next year Charlevoix County State Bank (the forerunner to Citizens Bank) gave Boss an old gasoline truck that they used for four years.

He removed the door from the passenger side of the gasoline truck and Marilyn would sit with her feet on the running board out in the cold. She pushed a contraption to release the water.

City proposes budget for 2001-2002

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

According to a proposed 2001-2002 city budget recently released, almost half of the city of Charlevoix budget will be used for capital projects.

"Things are just coming together all at once," City Manager Mike Wiesner said of the reason for the large amount of capital projects slated for this coming year.

The city has a total budget of $14.25 million budget for 2001-2002 and about 49 percent of it will be used for long-term capital projects. These projects, and their costs, include: Wharfside property purchase for $1,240,000, an electric substation construction for

How your tax dollars are spent

- Police and fire — 26.64 percent
- Recreation and culture — 26.36 percent
- Infrastructure improvements — 17.47 percent
- General government — 12.84 percent
- Public works — 4.91 percent
- Health and welfare — 4.9 percent
- Local street/recreation subsidy — 3.25 percent
- Other — 2.14 percent
- Legislative functions — 1.49 percent

These figures do not include revenues that may be generated to city funds by some of these areas.

$1,200,000, a Belvedere Avenue infrastructure project for $436,100, Lake Michigan Beach improvements for $425,000 and a sewer on Marion Center to the new high school for $400,000.

Also included in the capital improvements section are renovations to city hall, with $1,431,971 budgeted. However, Wiesner said the cost of this project will probably be more than this and the city may be forced to have a bond sale. He said in the next two months the city will get an estimate on the project from an architect, but the city may still not know if it will need a bond sale until the project goes out for bids.

Revenue for the city, making up the $14 million budget, comes from a variety of sources. They, and their amounts in 2000-2001 are:

- Taxes — $1,833,600
- Licenses and permits — $800
- State grants — $2,005,400
- Charges for services — $6,875,632
- Fines and forfeits — $59,398

Two injured in US-31 rollover

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department investigated a Jan. 28 one vehicle rollover crash that injured two Charlevoix men.

The Sheriff's Department received a call at 9:33 a.m. Sunday morning from a motorist who had passed the crash site and had seen the vehicle off the roadside near US-31 at Boyne City Charlevoix Road.

Officers arrived at the scene and found no one in the vehicle. Further investigation determined that Cody L. Backus, 21, of Petoskey was traveling southbound on US-31 in a 1986 Honda at around 6 a.m. when she fell asleep. The vehicle drifted off the road, slid sideways and rolled down into the embankment.

Donald Bisesi, 22, of Charlevoix was treated for head and back injuries at Charlevoix Area Hospital. Brent Bixby, 22, also of Charlevoix sought treatment for a head injury and a hand laceration.

The Honda was totaled and Backus has been cited for careless driving and failure to report a personal injury traffic crash.

The Sheriff's Department was assisted at the scene by the Charlevoix City Police Department and the Michigan State Police.

Potholes create havoc for drivers this winter, spring

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

This winter, drivers commuting around Charlevoix are dodging quite a few potholes and some are claiming the holes in the road are worse than ever.

Ari Adler, communications manager for the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT), said that during both mild and harsh winters potholes are bound to occur but during heavy winters, like this year, potholes in roadways are more difficult to maintain, leading to the perception that the problem is "worse than ever."

"Our first priority is making sure that snow and ice on the roads is cleared. Once that has been achieved, we can concentrate on the potholes," Adler said.

Adler said that during heavy winters, those that maintain the roadways are forced to dump more salt on the roads. The salt then creates an artificial freeze/thaw cycle.

It is this freeze/thaw cycle that creates the ever-dreaded pothole. As moisture gets into the ground and freezes, the soil expands and is pushed to the surface of the roadway. When the ground thaws, the soil recedes but the pavement stays lifted. Then drivers come along and ride over the lifted pavement. The weight of a vehicle cracks the pavement, causing a pothole.

When asked whether concrete or asphalt is the better material to use in covering roadways as ammo against potholes, Adler responded that both have their weaknesses. "Both concrete and asphalt take a beating in the wintertime," Adler said.

In using concrete, he pointed out that street keepers see problems where the joints are sealed. Dirt and soil tends to accumulate in these joints and then moisture joins the mix. The mixture freezes in the joints and so begins the freeze/thaw cycle.

Asphalt on the other hand has no specific joint, it is one solid surface. However, this surface can crack and again the soil inside the crack will get wet from moisture seeping through these surface cracks freezing and buckling the asphalt, then thawing and eventually becoming a pothole.

One way that MDOT tries to alleviate potholes is by sealing these cracks. You will often see lines in the road that look like tar, this is where a crack has been sealed.

"Cracks are sealed to keep moisture out from underneath the roadway," Adler said.

Adler added that older roads and those in worse condition are more likely to be cracked and consequently marked by potholes.

Adler said that MDOT's pothole filling efforts are sometimes in vain during the winter months. Filling potholes when it is cold and snowing or raining will allow moisture to enter the hole and the patch will not last as long.

He said that patching efforts are more effective in the spring. Charlevoix County Road Commission manager Pat Harmon has observed the same pattern, citing a recent incident that revealed the inefficiency of filling potholes in the winter.

"The other day our guys patched some holes and two days later they were blown back out. That gets pretty discouraging," Harmon said.

In the meantime drivers are bending tire rims and popping tires to the tune of a hefty repair bill.

AAA released information highlighting the most common damage incurred from potholes. This inventory includes tire replacement which runs between $50 and $450 depending on the tire, wheel alignment at a cost of $50 to $150, tie rod replacement also at a cost of $50 to $150 and ball joint repair costs between $75 and $150.

So how do drivers avoid the cost? Many don't want to turn the wheel to veer away from the menacing hole in fear that slick road conditions will cause them to lose control.

Bob Williams, owner of Lakeshore Tire in Charlevoix, said drivers should slow down to avoid car damage as a result of potholes.

Traverse City AAA Community Relations Administrator Fred Doelker added, "The faster you are going when you hit these things (potholes), the more stress it puts on your vehicle."

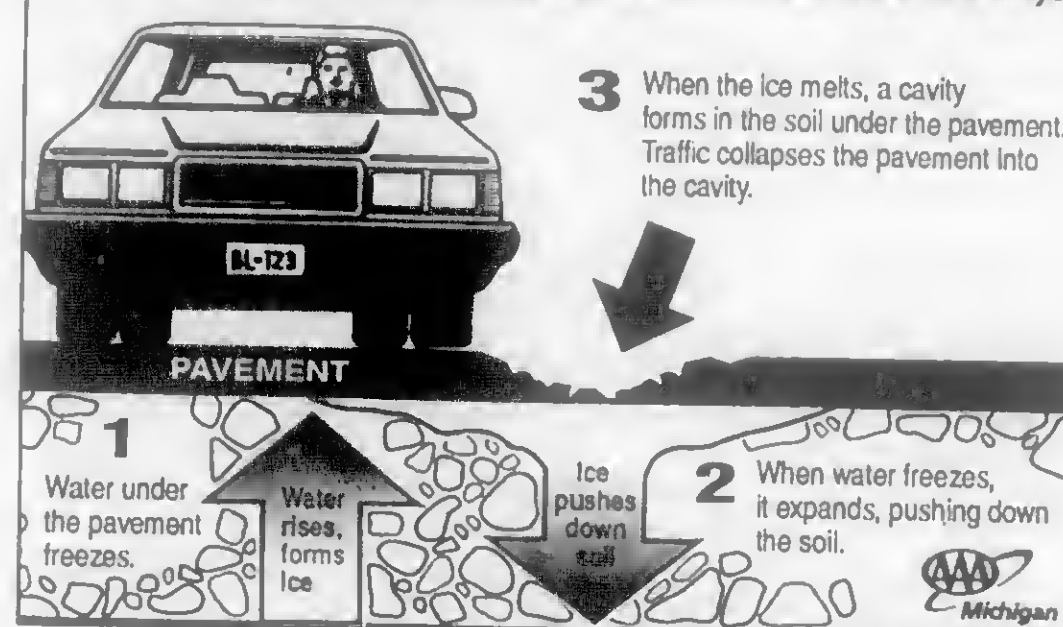

Williams added that the service station gets at least 100 customers per year as a result of potholes. He said that in the spring when the ground thaws is when the potholes are out in force.

OPINIONS

Voice your opinion on the new budget

Want to know where your city tax dollars are being spent? Well, here is your chance.

The Charlevoix City Council will soon be discussing the 2001-2002 proposed budget that was finished recently by city officials.

In this budget are the details of how every dollar that comes into the city is spent. It tells how many tax dollars are coming in, how much in bonds and grants the city has and how much each city department uses and what it is being used for.

According to City Manager Mike Wiesner, since October each figure was painstakingly prepared by City Treasurer Rick Brandt and then nicely packaged for the public and council by Wiesner's assistant, Linda Weller.

And according to these figures, the city's finances are looking pretty good. It is projected that the city will have over $300,000 of available cash in just the general fund in the 2001-2002 budget. That is not too shabby for a city with general fund revenues of $2,532,600.

With all the work that has gone into this budget, wouldn't it be great if the public was given a chance to comment on it?

Well, here is your chance. City Council will be inviting the public to comment on this budget at 7 p.m., Feb. 19 in the City Hall Council Chambers at 210 State Street.

EDITORIAL

This gives you plenty of time to head on over to City Hall, pick up a copy of the budget and prepare some questions on it. Especially since the proposed property tax millage rate that will be levied to support this budget will be the subject of this hearing.

This is your money that is being used and your opinion on it is being sought.

Too often the public remains silent or apathetic on local government issues — and even national government issues. They seem to not care what is being done by their elected officials and do not want to get involved.

How many other countries give its citizens chances like this? How many other countries allow its citizens to question how their tax dollars are being spent or how to spend those tax dollars?

We urge residents of Charlevoix to take a little time to look over the 2001-2002 city budget and take this opportunity to voice their concerns and questions to their elected officials on Feb. 19.

Writer's plants signal winter may be ending

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

I keep a small greenhouse, or more truthfully, it keeps me.

It keeps me occupied, it keeps me interested and during the winter when the life of a botanist is awfully bleak, it keeps me happy. Winter is a difficult time for plants in our above the 45th parallel environment, but it has been interesting to see how they manage. With just a little care, they wind up informing me more abundantly than the weather channel.

This is not a production greenhouse. I don't grow plants for food, although there is a small rosemary plant there to supply a few fresh leaves when I need them for the potatoes or the chicken.

I don't grow plants for sale, although with a limited amount of space, it is necessary to either give away or throw away parts of plants that keep growing and get to a size too large for their home.

There are currently more than 50 different kinds of plants growing in that small space — approximately one kind of plant for each square foot of space. Most of them have tropical ancestry and many of them cannot survive temperatures below about 50 degrees. Some are beautiful, but most are there because they are interesting rather than because they are attractive.

More than a few have genuinely ugly flowers and many of those smell bad enough to be attractive to carrion flies.

Beginning in late November or early December, nearly every plant has stopped whatever it was doing and ceased growing. Fertilizer doesn't help, even a little extra light doesn't make much difference. Time lapse films of my greenhouse over the past two months would be remarkably boring.

Plants mostly accustomed to the benign conditions of the tropics seem not to know what to do when the sun goes away.

Just last week as I was looking for signs of continuing life among those sleeping plants, most remarkably, 15 or more kinds suddenly had new leaves, new growth and I'm pretty sure new roots as well.

It is as though someone had turned on a switch and that whole group of unrelated plants responded. I don't know if it is the length of days — they are longer now — or the angle of the sun or what, but life is perking up in my greenhouse.

Sometimes it seems that up here in the great white north winter goes on almost forever, but now I know better. Plants from Africa, plants from South America and plants from Asia have recognized that things are improving.

If they can manage to see the bright future from the third week in January, so can I. I can't see spring yet, but it isn't as bleak as it looked a couple of weeks ago.

Editorial rebuttal

Editor:

In response to your Jan. 10 editorial concerning the opening on council in the First Ward, I would like to point out that it is the council's job to fill such openings until such time as there is another election.

Bernie DeVries was elected to council from the Third Ward originally and had to resign from that position when he moved into the First Ward. He was, and is, an excellent councilman and seemed to be an obvious choice with his experience.

As far as waiting to see who else might be interested in the seat, there have been 21 seats up for election in the past seven years, and only two were contested. That is a disgrace, in my opinion.

Every seat should be contested. That is the only way we can have good government.

Commence investigations of DOC

Editor:

For more than three years the Coalition for Corrections Reform, along with Michigan Department employees, Michigan citizens, and employee groups, has attempted to expose and correct the Michigan Department of Correction's (MDOC) historically unjust treatment of its department employees. These employees have been subjected to harassment, discipline, and even dismissal for reporting corruption, rule violations, and administrative malfeasance within the MDOC.

The coalition mailed thousands of pages of documentation of administrative wrongdoings to countless state and federal agencies. In spite of potential political reprisals, several state legislators acknowledged the coalition's incontrovertible evidence, calling upon the Office of the Auditor General to investigate these allegations.

When personnel from the Auditor's office initially approached the MDOC administration in early 1998, the department appeared willing to cooperate. In concurrence with federal guidelines, the Office of the Attorney General agreed that the audit objectives would focus on the MDOC's employee discipline and grievance programs. Sexual harassment and harassment issues would not be included.

A direct quote from the audit, available at the State of Michigan web page, sums up the auditor's frustration with the MDOC officials "...we began asking questions regarding possible inconsistencies in applying employee discipline among members of DOC management. It was at this time that the DOC denied access to records and employees necessary to complete the audit."

The evidence is incontrovertible. When the Office of the Auditor General began to get too close to the truth regarding the inequitable treatment of MDOC staff, the department put the brakes on the audit.

According to the Auditor's report, "...OAG staff encountered increasing confrontation and uncooperativeness in meetings with certain members of DOC's management staff."

Because of the obstruction of the audit by the highest MDOC officials, the Office of the Auditor General was compelled to suspend the audit "...when DOC denied us access to records and personnel..." In the audit's closing pages, Michigan taxpayers are warned, "In denying the OAG access to records and employees necessary to complete the audit, DOC has challenged the clear and unambiguous words of the Michigan Constitution..."

The Coalition for Corrections Reform's official opinion in this matter is that the Michigan Department of Corrections is in violation of state and federal laws in denying the Office of the Auditor General access to its records and personnel.

I agree with the coalition's formal petition of our state and federal officials to immediately commence civil and criminal investigations of the Michigan Department of Corrections administration.

Inaugural trip was a success

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A group of 14 physically and emotionally exhausted Charlevoix High School students returned home Jan. 22 after attending the inauguration of the 43rd president of the United States, George W. Bush, in Washington D.C.

"Being in Washington for that event was an amazing experience. In the past I have heard about it (the inauguration) and watched it on C-Span but we saw the president's cabinet members, governors, senators and people protesting — it was cool to be around that. Our history was right there," Charlevoix High School senior Hal Evans Jr. said.

The students' government teacher and trip coordinator, Ann Marie Conway, said that the outing was a wonderful cultural and political experience for everyone involved.

The students witnessed, firsthand a moment in our government's history. Conway said that Bush's speech was wonderful and that the ceremony overall was beautiful. She said that everywhere they went places were filled with Democrats and Republicans. "Going down escalators we saw stickers printed with 'Hail to the Thief' and buttons with Gore 2000 printed on them. People were talking about it (the inauguration) all the time," Conway said.

Students said that they were mystified by the number of people who attended the inauguration and were also surprised by the amount of security personnel stationed around the area ensuring the safety of the president.

Katie Romig said she found the size of the crowd to be one of the most interesting features of the gathering and even in the madness of the masses found common ground with those at the event.

"I thought the coolest thing about the inauguration was the first prayer. There were thousands of people there and there was complete silence. It felt uniting," Romig said.

In fact there were so many people packed into the outdoor area the Charlevoix crew watched from, the exits were blocked. The students said that when it came time to go they locked arms and wove their way to a nearby wall that they had seen others climbing over and they took that escape route too.

As for protests highlighted by both print and broadcast media, they said that they saw very few that were combative.

"It was good to see people were using their right to speak freely and to express their opinions," Charlevoix High School senior Lisa Miller said.

Students spoke of one negative crowd encounter they did experience. They said that when Hillary Clinton and Al Gore were introduced some people in attendance booed. They added that the reaction from members of the crowd was rude and unacceptable.

Aside from attending events associated with the swearing in of Bush, the group also attended two performances at the Kennedy Center, took part in a three hour tour of the Holocaust Museum, cruised Georgetown's campus, had breakfast with Bart Stupak and "mastered" Washington's mass transit, the metro.

The kids thanked their chaperones and their host families "because without them we wouldn't have been able to go" and also thanked the school district for their support and Congressman Bart Stupak for tickets to the inauguration and the breakfast that he provided.

'Stepping out'

Lately I've found myself wondering, "Are people in Charlevoix tired of winter weather limiting the realm of possible activities to movie watching and cocoa sipping. And are readers looking for something different to do?"

Those who are thinking to themselves "Yes, I would like to expand my horizons beyond renting Mission Impossible 2 for the fifth time," can start by trying out some local options.

Guys, keep in mind I am a female and my idea of fun may be your worst nightmare.

My first find this winter was Cottage Pottery. This pottery spot is tucked away at 104 Michigan Avenue in the Edgewater parking lot just waiting to be discovered.

Cottage Pottery is a crafty, do-it-yourselfer's dream come true. Pottery is pricey, but at Cottage you choose a pre-made piece of pottery, the artist's blank canvas, and decorate it. You transform the piece into an ornate switch plate, vase or platter for half the price of pottery you find in stores.

Not only are the pieces fully usable, but after you are finished they reflect your personal flare and act as a tangible memory of the fun you had at the shop.

My mom planned an outing to the pottery store after the tree lighting in December. She, my sister, our friend Jen and I split a bottle of wine, laughed a lot and came away with a half finished product we later returned to finish.

My mom, who considers herself to be void of artistic inspiration, in the end walked out with a pine tree shaped serving platter and three Christmas ornaments ready for the kiln. So, Picasso skills aren't required, any age and skill level can excel.

In fact, I was in the process of trimming up a "Santa's cookie plate" when I noticed a family at the work station next to me crafting away.

The young girl, no more than 12 years old, was engrossed with her piece — applying white puffy paint in the shape of clouds onto her sky blue switch plate. Not only had she decorated the switch plate, but she had also decorated matching drawer pulls.

Her brother, who looked about eight years old, was sitting next to her quietly working on art for his room — a family evening on the town.

With three people at their table it appeared to be an expensive way to spend time together, but it was Friday.

Cottage Pottery understands that not everyone can afford to buy a piece and pay for their studio time too so, the business does not charge a studio fee from 4 to 8 p.m. on Fridays.

Cottage Pottery is open from noon to 6 p.m. Thursday, noon to 8 p.m. Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

If your idea of entertainment isn't painting clay shaped like a skate, but you enjoy being outside and lacing them up, why not take advantage of Charlevoix's outdoor rink over by the high school.

The public rink is open from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. and again from 6 to 9 p.m. weekdays. Weekend hours of operation are from noon to 5:30 p.m. and again from 6 to 9 p.m.

These are two fun ways to spend time with someone or to just relax and enjoy yourself in Charlevoix.

No, fun is not at your fingertips like in big cities, but that is part of what puts Charlevoix in a class all its own. While we may not be a hub of cultural possibilities, we are blessed by open land to play on and are surrounded by others with a vested interest in community quality.

I have never been anywhere else equipped with winter public ice skating, a community pool for indoor swimming, a ski hill, snowmobile trails and cross-country skiing trails.

After researching what to do when you've got the winter blues, I am confident that there are a plethora of things to do out there, you just have to look a little harder and be willing to brave the chilly temperatures.

AAA offers some tips for keeping safe on the ice

The best conditions in at least four winters is more reason than ever to keep safety in the forefront of planning for your next ice fishing trip, says AAA Michigan.

"The cold may have created early ice on most of Michigan's lakes and Great Lake bays, but the heavy snowfall has also contributed to potentially dangerous ice conditions on many of those lakes," states Richard Miller, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager. "Anglers need to prepare for a safe, enjoyable trip."

Snowfall on top of ice is an excellent insulator, Miller warns. It often causes rapid melting or uneven thickness underneath. Water can also be pushed up on top of ice by its weight, causing further weakening.

"That is why an experienced ice fisherman approaches a frozen lake heavily laden with snow with extreme caution," he says.

A safety tool that should be part of any ice fisherman's tackle is an ice spud to test thickness. Also handy is a set of ice picks attached to a rope through the sleeves used to help pull yourself to safety after falling in.

Ice creepers strapped over boots not only help on slick ice, they also may help get you out if you fall in. Ski goggles protect against snow-blindness and guard against frostbite.

"Dressing properly for conditions is the first key for a successful fishing trip," he said. Be sure everyone in your group dresses in layers of protective clothing for the best protection against the cold. Well-insulated boots, battery-heated socks, water-proof mittens, plus masks and fleece or wool balaclavas that pull down to cover the face, all help prevent frostbite.

"Also becoming more popular among anglers is a life jacket, or Personal Flotation Device (PFD)," Miller said. "PFDs will help keep you afloat in an emergency despite your bulky clothing, and act as an insulator against cold." Types include those normally used in summer, inflatable PFDs or PFDs built into ice fishing jackets.

Two other pieces of equipment that supplement the simple compass for die-hard ice anglers are a cell phone and a hand-held GPS unit that uses satellites to pinpoint location and the shortest way to shore in fog or storms. Other items to bring include a flashlight, rope and flares.

When on the ice, AAA suggests these rules:

Stay safe on the ice this winter with these tips

- Treat all ice as potentially unsafe. Current on lakes, especially around points, and snow buildup can quickly weaken ice. Be especially wary when ice is weak near shore or is slushy. Use your spud to check thickness even on familiar waters. Check with local bait shops and media fishing reports for ice conditions.

- Always fish with a buddy. Tell someone where you'll be and when you'll return. Avoid alcohol, which impairs judgment, lowers body temperature and increases the risk of hypothermia.

- Be especially wary on ice-covered rivers, where currents can undermine ice, particularly near river mouths.

- Follow safe paths used by others. Be aware of frozen-over fishing holes that could break. Avoid soft or discolored ice.

- Watch the weather. Storms causing dangerous wind chills or white out conditions, winds that create pressure cracks and ice floes, and late-winter fog cause emergency rescues each winter.

- At your fishing site, your group should spread out to distribute weight. If ice starts cracking, lie down and crawl to the thickest ice, usually in the direction you came.

- If you fall in, call for help. Turn toward the direction you came and after kicking, use ice picks and ice creepers to pull yourself out. Sometimes kicking while on your back works best. Then roll across the ice to safety and seek warmth immediately.

- To help someone else, toss a rope or use a pole, ladder, tree limb or other item to pull them to safety.

- Never drive your vehicle onto the ice. Each season, snowmobiles and vehicles fall through. Insurance may cover damage but you may be ticketed, and most importantly, lives can be lost.

- Fish shanties must be removed daily after Feb. 20, March 1, March 15 or March 31, depending on the region, or when conditions warrant. Check the State Department of Natural Resources fishing rule-book. Owners of sunken shanties can be prosecuted.

Council discusses budget for this year

BUDGET

Total expenses by the city from all funds is $14,253,076, leaving about $17,000 left over to add to the city's cash on hand. In just the general fund, the city has $351,222 available cash in the 2001-2002 proposed budget.

Wiesner said this year's budget shows the city is not only in good financial shape, but is also expected to improve its financial condition in the future.

The reason is the city is planning eight years into the future with each budget. Each department in the city has estimated its needs for the next eight years in the budget, and that has been factored in with estimated revenues being brought in by the city. This gives officials an idea of what the budget will look like in eight years.

"It is like running several little businesses," Wiesner said.

Also by doing this, the city can estimate that the total capital needs of the city for the next eight years will be $23,601,457.

The Charlevoix City Council met in a work session Monday to discuss this proposed budget. A public hearing is being planned for 7 p.m. Feb. 19 in the City Hall Council Chambers at 210 State Street.

Charlevoix's leaning tower

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

At a recent Charlevoix City Council Meeting, Council Member Norman "Boogie" Carlson questioned the stability of an electric pole leaning to the side in front of Charlevoix Cinema on Antrim Street.

According to City Manager Mike Wiesner, the stability of the pole has been looked into by City Electrical Superintendent

Ed Whitley and has been determined to be safe. The pole houses utility lines for cable and telephone service.

Wiesner added, since the pole is safe, it would be more cost effective for the city to wait until the companies, whose lines are using the pole, are ready to place all of their lines on Antrim Street underground.

While no official time has been set for this, Wiesner said it could be within the next year to two years.

According to Bill Supernaw, owner of the Charlevoix Cinema, he has heard all these promises before.

He said he originally brought up this pole in 1995 and was told it would be taken care of within a year. He was told the same thing the following year and has been told before that the pole is safe.

"It probably is safe, but it just looks like hell," Supernaw said.

Concerns have been raised as to the safety of a leaning electrical pole located in close proximity to the Charlevoix Cinema on Antrim Street. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Ski team proves it is not to be dismissed

By LAURIE LOUNSBURY
Skiing writer

By claiming two key victories last week, the Charlevoix Boys' High School Ski Team proved it will be dealing from a position of strength as it heads toward the regional meet in two weeks.

The first victory for the team came at a conference meet at Nub's Nob Thursday, Jan. 25. Charlevoix finished first with 69 points, followed by Traverse City-St. Francis, 72; Harbor Springs, 76; East Jordan, 83; Boyne City, 152; and Elk Rapids, 195.

The win was particularly important since it was a conference meet, one of four meets which will be used to determine the conference champion.

Roscoe Serrels had a third place finish in both slalom and GS, followed by York Smith, who finished fourth in GS and 24th in slalom; Chad Johnson, seventh in GS and fifth in slalom; Lexi Wilson, 17th in both GS and slalom; Taylor Fisher, 13th slalom, 18th GS; Anna Kate Trubilowicz, 26th slalom; and Class Oberbech, 28th GS.

Going into the conference meet, Charlevoix was ranked fifth in the state by the state coaches' association. Other area schools ranked in the class B-C-D were: Iron Mountain, 1; Petoskey, 2; Sutton's Bay, 3; and Boyne City, 4. East Jordan wasn't ranked, but probably will show up in the next vote of rankings as a top area contender.

"After the two wins we've just had, I think Charlevoix will move up in the rankings," said coach Sue Miller. "We've shown that we can beat Boyne City and East Jordan."

top once again at the Boyne City Invitational meet, hosted at Boyne Mountain Jan. 27. Charlevoix took the meet with 53 points, followed by East Jordan, 55; Boyne City, 99; Grayling, 111; Detroit Country Day, 161; and Cranbrook, 168.

Serrels turned in the best performance of the day with first place finishes in both slalom and GS. Freshman Chad Johnson had a good day as well, finishing second in slalom and seventh in GS. Smith rounded out the top three places in slalom for Charlevoix with a third place finish, and finished eighth in GS. Wilson proved she is capable of holding her own on the boys' field with a 14th place finish in GS and a 19th place finish in slalom. Taylor Fisher finished 18th in GS and 17th in slalom. Charlevoix newcomer Mike DuPuis captured a 16th place finish in GS and a 27th finish in slalom.

"They're skiing really well together as a team," Miller said. "It's good for us to have these six-team meets, because it shows how much depth we have. I think we'll be in really good shape for the regionals."

For Serrels, it was the first time in a long time that he has completed four races in a row without running into difficulty.

"Roscoe has figured out what he has to do, and he's doing just that," Miller said. "He's skiing very consistently and fast."

The Charlevoix B team also had successes at the two meets. At the conference meet, the B team finished second behind Harbor Springs. Skiing for Charlevoix, Dupuis took third place in slalom, followed by Cheng Fei, eighth; Class Oberbech, 19th, and Dan Jadwin, 19th. In GS, the team finished third, with finishes by DuPuis, first; Anna Kate Trubilowicz, seventh; Dan Jadwin, 15th; and Cheng Fei, 19th.

The Charlevoix team will ski in another conference meet at 3:30 p.m. today at Schuss Mountain.

Wrestling team showing some skills on the mat

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix varsity wrestling team may not be putting a lot of wins on its record, but the individual wrestlers are showing some great moves on the mat.

The team faced Cheboygan Jan. 18. While the Rayders lost 24-60, Coach Gary Probert said they did excellent considering the team was out several players due to illnesses.

Individual results for the day were: At 103 pounds, Danny Hedrick was pinned by Cheboygan's Aaron Grote in 50 seconds.

At 112 pounds, Heather Probert won by forfeit. At 130 pounds, Tim Daining pinned Cheboygan's Travis Chase in 3 minutes, 28 seconds. At 145 pounds, Peter Gorkiewicz pinned Cheboygan's Mike Mankin in 2 minutes, 41 seconds. At 160 pounds, Ryan Novotny pinned Cheboygan's Erin Evans in 2 minutes, 31 seconds.

Charlevoix came back from this loss as a team in their next meet against Frankfort Jan. 22 in Frankfort and won 36-24. Several members of the team also had nice individual wins.

Individual results were: At 103 pounds, Hedrick was pinned by Frankfort's Harry Redburn in 1 minute, 8 seconds. At 112 pounds, Heather Probert pinned Frankfort's Harold Love in 5 minutes, 18 seconds. At 140 pounds, Brett Probert won by forfeit. At 145 pounds, Peter Gorkiewicz won by forfeit. At 160 pounds, Ryan Novotny won by forfeit. At 171 pounds, Chris Lahr won by forfeit. At 215 pounds, Chris Loper won by forfeit.

Results in exhibition matches at the meet were: At 140 pounds, Gorkiewicz lost to Frankfort's J.J. McMahon, 8-11, with seconds left in the match. At 160 pounds, Lahr beat Frankfort's Jeremy Campbell, 15-0.

Charlevoix was also on the mat Jan. 20 in an invitational tournament in Clare.

"Overall, this was a good tournament. The team did very well," Coach Probert said. Individual results for that tournament were: At 103 pounds, Hedrick was 1-3 for the day. At 112 pounds, Heather Probert was 0-4 for the day. At 130 pounds, Daining was 2-2 for the day. At 140 pounds, Brett Probert was 1-3 for the day. At 152 pounds, Bo Moore was 1-2 for the day. At 160 pounds, Novotny was 4-0 for the day. At 171 pounds, Lahr was 1-3 for the day. At 215 pounds, Loper was 2-1 for the day.

Tobacco funds come to northern Michigan

Some of that big tobacco settlement awarded each state a couple years ago has now found its way to our area of northern Michigan, where it's being used to help support a variety of projects.

Almost $22,000 was recently granted to Emmet and Charlevoix county programs working to promote healthy lifestyles.

Under an agreement with the State of Michigan, a portion of the tobacco settlement revenue was distributed late last year to the state's 66 community foundations to help fund health-related projects — particularly those which target young people and the elderly.

Our two local foundations, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Petoskey-Harbor Springs area Community Foundation, together received $73,000 for the year, representing an annual share of the interest earned on tobacco settlement funds. Half that amount has been placed in permanent endowment by each foundation, and the other half earmarked for grant making.

An advisory committee made up of representatives of the region's community health agency, the tobacco reduction coalition, the Commission on Aging, the Friendship Center, the Women's Resource Center, area substance abuse services and both community foundations' youth committees will help oversee distributions from the local tobacco funds.

In this first round of grant making the Charlevoix County Community Foundation awarded $3,500 to the WRC for the MERIT program; $1,725 to provide stop-smoking classes to Charlevoix County's two alternative schools; $2,433 for the Alveloli Adventure smoking-prevention program; $2,600 to the East Jordan Family Health Center to expand dental services and $480 to the Beaver Island Rural Health Center for a senior supportive housing initiative.

More information about the tobacco funds, program eligibility, and the next grant deadlines, is available by contacting either of the two area community foundations.

Call the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at (231) 536-2440.

Equalization Ratios as shown are the percentages of assessed valuations to true cash value as determined by a survey of individual assessments. The Multipliers are those necessary to bring the Ratios to the required 50% of estimated true cash value.

The Multipliers as shown are tentative and subject to change as the result of possible adjustments by individual assessing officers. Assuming that no adjustments are made, the Multiplier may be applied to each individual valuation.

Note: THESE MULTIPLIERS REPLACE THOSE OF 2000 AND ARE NOT AN ADDITION TO OR SUBTRACTION FROM THEM.

Resident accepted Sitting Bull's surrender in 1881

By DAVID L. MILES
Charlevoix Historical Society

Walter Clifford was, by all accounts, a remarkable man — Army officer, gentleman farmer, expert marksman, urban landowner, businessman, builder and inventor.

Clifford was a ramrod military presence, enormously respected by ranks both high and low, he was also the life of the party in his civilian role, an irascible joker yet a solid civic-minded citizen who wanted only the best for his adopted town, Charlevoix.

History will remember him as a leading participant in bringing to a close an important chapter in the American story when he accepted the surrender of Sitting Bull, the Indian chief who defeated Custer at Little Big Horn.

Born Edward Walter Clifford Newman in Troy, N. Y., he was a brother to the Newmans who settled here in the late 1950s. When he enlisted as a private in the regular army in 1860, for some reason he signed up using his two middle names, and later had it legalized at the Charlevoix County Probate Court.

His natural abilities quickly brought him up the ranks, although his feisty headstrong practicality sometimes put him at loggerheads with the West Point officer mentality. The Civil War found him captured at the Battle of Chickamauga in Georgia, and in Libby Prison for almost a year, from which he escaped by tunnel after several attempts. He returned to duty until war's end.

Clifford married Harriet (Hattie) Cowell at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., in April of 1865, then after the war participated in Indian campaigns throughout the west.

His first contact with Charlevoix is not known, most likely a visit to his far-flung siblings. But in 1869 he was well enough recognized here. The propeller passenger steamer Fontaine City made its annual arrival that spring. Someone remarked that "Lieutenant" Clifford was aboard, only to be corrected. "Clifford is a captain now."

Apparently not needed or "unassigned" by the military for the time being, he began a nearly three-year sojourn here, interrupted in 1871 when duty called.

In 1870, he built a mercantile store with a brother on the south shore of Round Lake, and lived in a house on the terrace above.

In July of 1871 for the final six months of his stay he invited townspeople, who found his company delightful, out to his thriving 30-acre farm in Marion Township. (His brother John was the first Marion Township settler.) His large collection of significant Indian artifacts showed a discerning eye.

At some point he purchased a parcel of land known as Clifford's Addition, hugging the Garfield-Alice-Upright streets area, abutting Morris J. Stockman's property that would become the future Belvedere resort.

Off again in 1872, he returned in October of 1873 with his family to spend the winter, leasing a home on Mason Street. In April of 1874, Clifford presented a reading of the Irish author Shamus O'Brien for the Charlevoix Social Literary Debating Society.

Back to duty in Montana, where Hattie followed in April of 1875, traveling over 1,000 miles by steamboat up the Missouri River.

Then came the fateful year, 1876, and Little Big Horn.

Clifford commanded a seventh infantry company under General Gibbon, who relieved the siege of General Reno, trapped in the hills after Custer's forces had been decimated. Next came an assignment to Fort Buford, the Dakota Territories, in time as a respected Indian agent where, five years later, he received word that Sitting Bull, who had retreated to Canada, had capitulated and was leading his starving people back to surrender.

In July, 1881, Clifford received his orders to go out to meet him and bring him in. It was ironic that two of the most important white men Sitting Bull was ever to encounter should both be Michiganders — George Armstrong Custer of Monroe and Walter Clifford, a citizen of Charlevoix.

The letter describing the event he wrote to Willard Smith of the Charlevoix Sentinel on July 28 is factual yet deeply moving.

His own humanity allowed him to recognize the horrific conditions that had brought these people to the brink of existence, mainly the eradication of game animals, their physical and spiritual sustenance, that had once teemed in the west. Beneath the recital of events burns a hardly contained fury and pity over what his own kind had reduced these people to. But he was a soldier, he had done what he'd been told to do, and it was now over.

By November of 1882, Clifford was back home, which Charlevoix had long been for the wandering military man, excited over the prospect of his invention — an improved camp stove. The government liked it and tried out 50, which meant possible service-wide use and he also sought patents in England, Germany, Turkey and Russia.

His future could have made him a very rich man. But it was not to be.

He left Charlevoix on Feb. 1, 1883 to rejoin his family in Chicago and from there went to Fort Bridger, Wyo. He no sooner reached his post than he went out on a campaign in bitter weather and nearly froze to death, which affected his health.

Walter Clifford died on Feb. 23, 1883. Hattie and her two children returned to Charlevoix on May 23 to oversee her city and country property interests, staying with her in-laws until she could erect a house on one of her lots. The following February, a state legislature appropriation of $300 "to remove the remains and monument of the late Captain Walter Clifford from Fort Bridger to Charlevoix, passed the house by unanimous consent on the ninth. The remains will be brought by a detail of the late Captain's company."

However, the Charlevoix City Hall and cemetery sexton's offices have no record this was ever done, no evidence of a Clifford monument alone or in the Newman plot in Brookside Cemetery.

But since the records only date from the early 1900s, he may well be there, and further investigation might prove his remains reside here after all.

His widow later moved to Washington D.C. when her son began work at the U.S. Senate.

The last record we have of her dates from that time, 1892. It had been quite a life with her intrepid husband, traveling all over the young country, an opportunity for hearing of and seeing things granted only to a few. But they always came back here, like so many still do, and The Traverse Region history of 1884 said of Walter Clifford, "He considered Charlevoix his home, and his death occasioned general sorrow in this place."

Clifford's orders and his full account of Sitting Bull's surrender may be read at the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum, 103 State Street, Tues., Wed. and Fri. from 1 to 4 p.m. and Thurs. from 1 to 7 p.m. Call 547-0373 for more information.

"What Doctors do when They Feel Rotten..."

Dear friend,

I bet you have wondered this yourself. "What do doctors do..." Do they just take a 'magic' drug that they never told us about? Let's face it, as a society we are 'hooked' on drugs, both the illegal and the legal ones. But, most people don't know that it's actually the legal ones that kill many times more people than the illegal ones.

Let me tell you a little story.

There was a time, when I was a teenager, that it seems I was always developing a terrible case of strep throat. In my case it would render me unable to drink or eat anything without eye tearing pain. I would end up missing work or school and I would suffer with it for 2 weeks or more. Each time I would go to the M.D.'s office, waiting 1-3 hours to see him, only to get antibiotics again. Then it would reoccur in 3-6 months and I would go through the same process again. During this time I was going to our family friend, who was a chiropractor, for occasional back soreness when I noticed that if I received his care while I was sick, I would get better in less than a week, without any drugs. When he explained to me how chiropractic care can improve your immune system things started to make sense to me. That's when I decided to go to chiropractic college. Oh, by the way, it has been over 14 years since my last bout with strep throat.

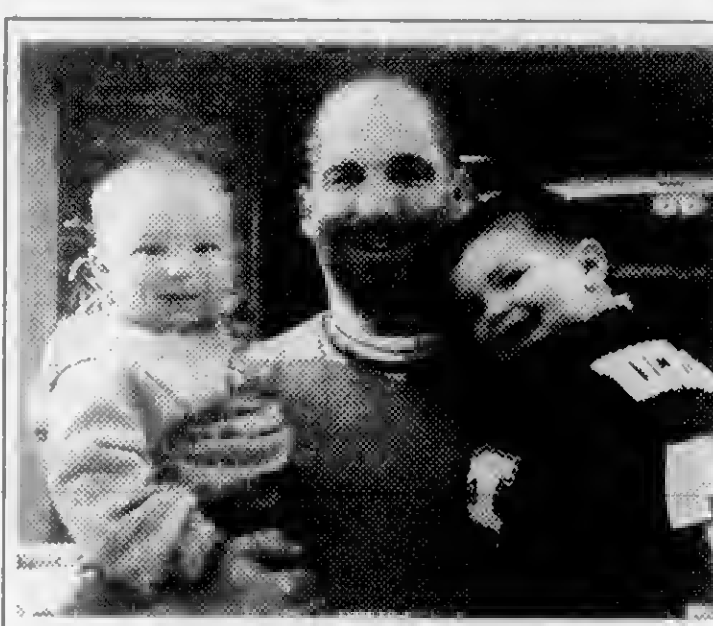

The 'quick fix' mentality of 'just take a pill' (not a true fix at all) is still common, but the good news is that things are changing. People are getting smarter. I recently read in USA Today that the pharmaceutical industry is now rethinking their strategy, because the medical profession and prescription drugs usually only deal with symptoms, and not the cause of sickness. Chiropractors have dealt with a cause for 104 years now, and have never wavered. And guess what! Now there are more visits to 'alternative' health care providers than 'traditional' ones.

Years ago chiropractic saved me from strep throat agony, and now I do my best to help others with the same problem, as well as headaches, migraines, chronic pain, neck pain, shoulder/arm pain, whiplash from car accidents, backaches, ear infections, asthma, allergies, numbness in limbs, athletic injuries, just to name a few.

Now, about the photo. Casey, who is the older of my boys, is now 2 1/2 years old and has been one healthy individual. As a matter of fact, he has never had an ear infection or taken an antibiotic of any kind.

Calen, who is now 7 months old, was born with a bacterial infection and since getting out of the hospital, has yet to suffer from a cold, flu or any health issues. I strongly believe the reason why is my continuous effort to help strengthen their immune systems with regular adjustments. Casey is pretty funny because when he comes into daddy's office, he heads straight for the adjusting room and climbs up on the table and says, "ready dad".

So, what is it that I, and doctors that I know do when they feel rotten. We get a chiropractic adjustment. The body responds by healing itself, and the results are wonderful. It's as simple as that!

Here's what some of my patients had to say:

"I was always sick with sinus infections, colds and flus...I feel that chiropractic has really made a difference in my life and saved me thousands of dollars in medical bills."

-Vicki Modrzyński

"I was going to my family doctor and the emergency room for relief of my migraine headaches at least once a week. Since starting treatment, my headaches are gone".

-Larry Schneiderwendt

Forty-five million Americans no longer have health insurance, and those who do have found that their benefits are reduced. That's where chiropractic comes in. Many people find that they actually save money on their health care expenses by seeing a chiropractor. Another way to save...studies show that chiropractic can double your immune capacity, naturally and without drugs. The immune system fights colds, flues, and other sicknesses. So you may not be running off to the doctor as much. This is especially important if you are self-employed. And, an entire week of care in my office may cost what you could pay for one visit elsewhere.

You can benefit from an amazing offer-

It shouldn't cost you an arm and a leg to correct your health. Look, you are going to write a check to someone for your health care. Why not write one for a lesser amount for chiropractic? When you bring in this article to my office you will receive my new patient exam for just $37. That's with x-rays and a computerized spinal exam...the whole ball of wax. Also, further care is very affordable and you'll be happy to know that I have family care plans. You see, I'm not trying to seduce you to come see me with this low start up fee, then to only make it up with high fees after that. Further care is very important to consider when making your choice of doctor. Higher fees add up quickly.

Great care at a great fee...

Please, I hope that there's no misunderstanding about quality of care just because I have a lower exam fee. You'll get great care at a great fee. My qualifications...I am a 1991 graduate of Life College who has been in private practice since 1991. I've been entrusted to take care of tiny babies, our young athletes and some of the most respected members of our community. The reason I have this low fee is just to help people who need care.

My office staff consists of Dr. Brian Oliver. He is a 1993 graduate of Palmer Chiropractic College where he also was an instructor after graduation. Dr. Nick Czyzewski, who joined my staff recently, is a 1999 graduate of Logan Chiropractic college and has been in private practice in Pennsylvania before moving to Gaylord.. My office assistants are Jessica, Marcia and Lori in our Gaylord office and Glenda in Charlevoix. Our office is both friendly and warm and we try our best to make you feel at home. We offer a wonderful service, at an exceptional fee, and we pride ourselves on making sure you will have little or no wait while visiting us. Please call us for an appointment so we can help you. We are Gilling Chiropractic Center, P.C. and we have 2 locations to serve you. Our Gaylord office is located at 1001 Gornick Ave. and the phone # is 517-732-1533. The Charlevoix office is located at 119 Antrim St. and that phone # is 231-547-3483

Thank you- Dr. Craig Gilling

P.S. When accompanied by the first, the second family member will receive this same exam for only $10.

Second homes may hurt city

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Because of its high number of second-homes, Charlevoix has not grown at the same rate as the rest of the state of Michigan and will thus face possible losses in state funding.

City Treasurer Rick Brandi said that population statistics rose six percent across the state of Michigan over the past year. Which means that any township or city that did not meet this same increase will receive decreased state funding.

"(In Charlevoix) The population numbers stayed pretty much the same, there is not a whole lot of space for new housing especially within the city limits. We lost some population because people are buying homes here and making them second homes rather than homesteads, so they don't get counted here as part of the population," Brandi said.

As a tourist destination Charlevoix does benefit financially from second home owners in some ways. Charlevoix schools receive funding from seasonal residents, as do utilities.

"We typically charge a monthly fee for water if a homeowner is living here or not. That is fair because everybody should contribute. In the summer, we see huge peaks in water use," Brandi explained.

However this still leaves the city with the issue of high numbers of second home owners purchasing property within city limits, consequently lowering the population statistics of the city and state funding levels.

Castle sold for fifth time in its history

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After seven months on the market, the local historic site Castle Farms has changed hands for the fifth time in its history.

On Jan. 4 Linda Mueller of Long Beach, Miss., closed on the property that for the past 32 years was owned by the Reibel family.

"It was hard to let go of, I was very emotional. My dad bought the castle in 1968 and it was a big part of my and my family's lives," Kim Reibel, representing the Reibel Family Trust, said. "It's going to get some needed repairs by the people who bought it who have the money to make it look nice. I'm ready to retire now."

Mueller was the same individual who purchased equitable title to the property for $300,000 at the Oct. 5, 2000 foreclosure sale that took place at the Charlevoix County Courthouse. However, the 38-acre parcel located off of M-66 was not legally owned by Mueller at that time.

Following the foreclosure sale, the Reibel Family Trust had six months to redeem the property or the title would vest and the castle would go to Mueller.

During the six month redemption period, which would have expired April 5, the castle remained on the market, listed with Vacation Properties Network realtor John Murray.

Murray said that he had negotiated with the Mueller family prior to the foreclosure sale and that they had put in an offer at that time. Their offer was declined, but their interest in the castle continued.

Charlevoix Sheriff's office warns about thin ice on lake

Sheriff George T. Lasater would like to caution ice fishermen and snowmobiles to be absolutely certain the ice is safe enough and thick enough before venturing out onto it.

The sheriff's office was recently informed that Lake Charlevoix has numerous soft spots and open areas. Most smaller lakes are starting to become completely iced over. Please take every precaution before going out onto the ice.

Lasater recommends that those going out on the ice do the following: Wear a personal flotation device, carry a flashlight or some other type of signaling device and always notify family or friends of the time you are going out onto ice, the time you will be returning and the exact location of where you could be located in the event of an emergency.

Former Charlevoix woman takes on African mountain

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Kristen Lignell, 37, of Lake Tahoe, Calif. grew up in Charlevoix and learned to ski on area slopes, but her adventuresome spirit carried her away from Michigan and most recently landed her on top of a glacier in Kenya, Africa.

"It was the worst and best skiing I have ever done. The snow conditions were rotten, you couldn't go fast because of ice chunks and holes," Lignell said. "You can't hurt yourself up there; you have to walk out, there is no ski patrol. But it was exciting, that is what makes it an adventure."

Charlevoix residents who tuned in at 9 p.m. Jan. 24 to OLN, the Outdoor Life Network, caught Lignell in action in the program titled, "Warren Miller's Global Adventures, Destination: Kenya." The Kenya trip is the fifth Warren Miller film that Lignell has been featured in.

Her descent down the receding African glacier marked a moment in history — Lignell and her partner Justine VanHoute, 32, of Telluride, Colo., are the first skiers to have conquered Mount Kenya.

Lignell and VanHoute were not only skiing uncharted territory, but were also interacting with a new culture.

In the program, VanHoute showed photos of ski life in the United States to porters, natives who helped carry provisions and lead the way up the mountain. They immediately pointed to the chair lift and asked what it was used for. She responded that it transports skiers to the top of the hill. They then asked why the girls hadn't brought the chair lift to Africa.

Lignell said that this was a scenario that depicted the cultural differences that she saw and experienced.

"The chair lift is an everyday part of our lives but they had never seen it before. It's a cultural thing, not just a language barrier," Lignell explained.

She said that communication wasn't always easy between the skiers, cameramen and the indigenous people who did speak some English. She added that it was fun to learn to communicate with them in other ways, like using hand signals.

The porters did have an interesting point — a chair lift would have been the preferred path to the top. It took the group eight days, hiking eight to 10 hours each day to get to the peak of the mountain.

"We went a non-descript route; they took us bushwhacking up through elephant tracks," Lignell said.

At one point in the mountaineering excursion, they could see the peak of Mount Kenya far off in the distance. Lignell said that their backs were killing them, they were tired and sore.

OPINIONS

Some freedoms are not politically correct

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

There is a war on the First Amendment.

Some people do not want you to be able to say what you want, write what you want or protest your government. They want to take away some of those rights; they think you and I have too many.

This was the main focus of a discussion I was a part of at the First Amendment Center at the Newseum in Arlington, Va. last week. The Newseum is basically a museum dedicated to the history journalism in the United States and of the First Amendment.

Walking into the Newseum, I was in awe. Laid out before me were the actual front pages of some of the most famous newspapers in history. After getting choked up when I realized just how much history my profession has, I found myself in a trance staring at an exhibit on Pulitzer Prize winning photographs.

Each one had an intense amount of emotion, some good and some bad.

After viewing these exhibits, I was taken to a discussion on the First Amendment with over 30 weekly newspaper editors from across the United States. Even after being awed by what I saw when I entered the building, I left the Newseum that day with a sense of fear for the state of the First Amendment.

For those of you who do not know, the First Amendment is the strongest amendment in the Bill of Rights. That is why the framers of the constitution put it there.

It gives Americans the right to say what they want, it gives the country a press that is free from government intrusion, it does not allow the government to favor one religion over another, it allows people to assemble and it gives us the right to petition the government when we think we have been wronged.

It states, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

But, there are some people who think this is too much freedom and many agree with them, especially politicians.

According to a survey conducted by the First Amendment Center last year, 51 percent of Americans think the press has too much freedom; 38 percent believe people should not be allowed to say things in public that might be offensive to religious groups; 28 percent believe musicians should not be allowed to sing songs that others might find offensive and 67 percent believe people should not be allowed to burn the American flag as a political statement.

This survey went on-and-on, each figure giving a sorrowing picture of what Americans think of their First Amendment rights. And the attacks on these rights have begun.

Currently on the floor of the United States House of Representatives and the United States Senate is an amendment to the Bill of Rights that would make it illegal to burn an American flag as an act of protest. Forty-nine state governments have said they would ratify this amendment if it passed.

Think about this: if it passes, there will actually be an amendment in the Bill of Rights that takes away a right. The last time this was done was the prohibition amendment and that worked so well, it was followed by an amendment that revoked it.

Yes, it is offensive to me and many other Americans when someone burns an American flag. But, it is more offensive to take away that right of expression. The flag is a representation of the freedoms that Americans have. To protect the flag at the expense of our freedoms is wrong.

The bottom line is Americans should realize how important the First Amendment is. It is what makes America what it is; without it we have no freedom.

Men and women throughout our country's history have died protecting these freedoms outlined in the First Amendment. To take away some of those freedoms would be a dishonor to them and a dishonor to the country.

Therefore, in the spirit of supporting the First Amendment, the Charlevoix Courier will be including this powerful portion of the Bill of Rights on the upper right corner of the Opinion page. Please read these words and take them to heart.

They are freedoms worth fighting for, not fighting against.

But those of us who live here like to think of it as home.

I would like city council to consider a special use permit for the Snowmobile Club when they want to have their ride-in, rather than an ordinance giving blanket permission to use designated city streets. That way the folks who follow the rules and are considerate of other people and, possibly want to shop downtown, can still have that opportunity. Yet the others who don't care about designated streets or shopping downtown will not be able to terrorize neighborhoods.

I don't think snowmobiles belong on city streets, designated or not, and the ordinance as it stands now is impossible to enforce. The weekenders are evidently bringing their snowmobiles up on a trailer, so they can just trailer them right out of town to the real snowmobile trails and not use city streets as their trails, which is what they have been doing.

Keep natural park

Editor:
What if you have something that has taken hundreds of years to become what it is? What if you have a place that is home to hundreds of species of plant and animal life, with unique ravines and small, meandering, swift-flowing creeks? And what if there is a possibility this place could be sold for a boat storage building site?

The city of Charlevoix owns a nine acre piece of land on M-66 at the edge of the business district. Many of you know this property because the old Medusa railroad spur goes through it, so it is enjoyed by snowmobilers, cross-country team runners, joggers and even people walking their dogs.

There are wonderful old hemlocks, cedar, beech and birch trees along the ravines which have not been disturbed because of the steep banks. The foliage in the fall is breathtaking as are the flowers in the spring and summer. One of the little creeks does an interesting thing. It goes underground for about six feet creating a kind of "earth bridge." You can also see many "mother logs," old trees that have fallen over and now are homes to new trees that grow from the rich nutrients of the old tree.

On a higher portion of the property, you can tell that someone logged there about 40 years ago, because that is the age of the aspen trees growing there. However, underneath these trees are young maples and beech, which if allowed to grow, will demonstrate the process of succession and a new forest will emerge.

While walking through these woods with our local botanist, Professor Roger Knutson, I was surprised by a tree that almost looked like a joke! Its trunk is only a couple inches around, but its beautiful yellow leaves are about five inches wide. Its common name is "striped maple" and has beautiful little green veins running up the trunk.

I am reminded of a poem by Robert Frost, which is particularly appropriate here. "Two roads diverged in a yellow wood...and I took the one less traveled...and that has made all the difference."

The more traveled way would be for the city to sell the property, let it be bulldozed, and make some money...for what? The less traveled way, that could make all the difference, would be to preserve this beautiful "natural park," to appreciate it for what it is and save it for future generations. The city already owns it, so nothing really needs to be done.

Future possibilities include a roadside park with picnic tables, a walking trail with community and school groups maintaining portions of it, and a trail guide to describe the variety of plants and ecological wonders. There is also the possibility of a trail between this "park" and the site of the new high school.

If you like this idea of keeping a unique "natural park" in the midst of a developing area, please let the city manager and council know.

Thank you.

Venetian Parade entry was offensive

Editor:
I am writing this letter at a time full of winter activities when not much thought of summer events occupy our minds. I have been waiting to write this letter for a long time, so I guess, now is that time.

Last summer my family and I attended the annual Venetian Parade, as we do each year. We enjoy it very much and look forward to it as one of our fun summer traditions. It is usually very nice, full of wonderful music and creative floats. I must say though, that at this last one both my family and I were very disappointed at one of the entries allowed in the parade. It was entitled, "The Cocktail Party."

Though, I must admit, I know nothing about what this "Cocktail Party" represents, but I can say it was a horrible thing to have been entered into such a family-oriented event. This float had people holding signs promoting alcohol and one woman in particular was dressed as The Virgin Mary singing a song entitled "Everyone Must Get Stoned."

What a disgrace to those of us of faith to see such an act. We had friends visiting from out of town who were disgusted by this also. I also heard many people around us with similar reactions. Many thought it was tasteless to include it in such a usually family-oriented parade.

I just want to make those who put this parade together aware of those who object to such entries.

I am not saying that I have never been exposed to such things, but some would think that taking children to a parade would be a safe thing to do and not have them exposed to such nonsense. We will definitely think long and hard before attending next year.

An open letter to the community: Do any of you remember a gentleman who used to sit on the lawn chair, smoking a cigar, while he patiently waited for his wife to shop at Kmart, the Dollar Store or Glen's grocery store?

Although he had many challenges with cancer these past two years, I am happy to say that through the loving care and assistance we received from hospice, he was able — as he desired — to remain at home, where he died peacefully in his sleep on Dec. 14, 2000.

To the many of you who stopped and chatted with him, you made his day and I want to thank you for the joy you gave him.

Future of Coast Guard ship in city's harbor is uncertain

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer*"I thought we were first on the list, but any list is tentative."*Mike Wiesner, Charlevoix city manager

Due to upgrades to the fleet, the Coast Guard cutter Acacia may be replaced by a new buoy tender in the near future or the government may even take the ship out of Charlevoix's harbor.

"The Coast Guard is in the process of updating and replacing the old systems with newer systems that rely more on technology than people to run them," Joe McGuinness, Coast Guard Lieutenant Commander stationed in Cleveland said.

McGuinness said that the Acacia was built during World War II and that maintaining the vessel now is a pricey undertaking.

The first new ships were deployed to New England and will be followed by ships being sent to the South Atlantic, the Gulf Coast, the West Coast and Alaska. Ships bound for the Great Lakes have not yet been built.

Once the ships are completed their destinations will be determined.

mined.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner said, "I thought we were first on the list, but any list is tentative. If it isn't located here it would be a big loss to the community in terms of jobs, vendors that make sales and the tourism attraction. I think the community really values it. We feel it should be here because of the close proximity to the buoys they are servicing and the ability to respond with a major size vessel for major emergencies."

Replacing the buoy tenders is a project the Coast Guard has been working on for about 20 years. The new ships are being built in Marionette Marine, Wis.

In the 1990s when the city was planning renovations for Bridge Park, they included plans to accommodate a Coast Guard buoy tender that is 45 feet longer than the 180 Class Acacia currently docked in front of the park.

According to Wiesner marina renovation plans include accommodations for a larger Coast Guard vessel.

"The drawing kept a clear zone to the north of the proposed marina area. We factored that (the new vessel) in and talked with the Coast Guard to the determine area," Wiesner said.

McGuinness described the new vessels as longer, wider and deeper, but "she performs the same mission."

Missions that the 180 class performs which will soon be the responsibility of the 225 include: platforms, ice-breaking and maintaining aids to navigation.

While the Acacia is only expected to remain in Charlevoix a short time, the Coast Guard's future in the city remains a question. (File photo)

City council discusses projects in budget

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Members of city council are excited to see several capital projects outlined in this year's city budget unfold.

They include: renovations to Michigan Beach, city hall and East Park and completion of the water-main loop.

Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell sees a bright future for the changes planned for East Park. He said that the acquisition and demolition of the Wharfside and plans for renovating the park will still allow the park to be used for many things and will also improve it cosmetically.

Second ward council member Gabe Campbell said that he is looking forward to seeing Michigan Beach renovations materialize, he considers beach improvements to be a necessary measure that will benefit the city by bringing in more beach-goers.

"Michigan Beach is a big draw

"Michigan Beach is a big draw to the city. The project will start this fall — there is just so much going on."

Gabe Campbell,
Charlevoix city council member to the city. The project will start this fall — there is just so much going on. Hopefully for the next season (summer 2002) it will be beautiful," Campbell said.

Aside from park renovations the city budget also encompassed capital improvements, like city hall renovations that are currently in the planning phase.

Norman "Boogie" Carlson, first ward; Bernie DeVries, first ward; A.J. Witthoef, third ward, and Campbell all said that city hall upgrades are "definitely needed."

"We have been working on that (renovation plans) for three years. That has to be done, it's (city hall) the main hub of the city. Renovations will make city hall more user friendly, the elevator will make the building handicapped accessible and new offices will be nicer for city employees to work out of," DeVries said.

YOUR HEALTH

Stay healthy after flying with these tips

Dennis Joy, M.D.
'Your health'

This is the time of the year that many are making plans to leave this area for vacation in distant parts of the United States or elsewhere in the world. Air travel is the mode most often used for long distances. In recent years with an ever greater usage of long distance air travel for all age groups several health issues have become apparent.

Deep venous thrombosis, a phenomenon known as "economy class syndrome," consists of blood clots which form primarily in the legs as a result of crowding passengers in narrow seating spaces which do not permit movement.

Prolonged dependent positioning of the legs, pressure from narrow seats, and relative dehydration due to dry cabin atmosphere leads to the formation of blood clots. These may not become apparent for hours or days after the flight and may result in life threatening pulmonary embolus.

Passengers and especially the travel industry itself should demand of the major airline carriers a substantial change in the current "charge 'em a few dollars less and crowd in a lot more seats" philosophy.

One carrier, Midwest Express, has been a notable exception with 100 percent first class seating at a competitive price.

In the meantime, passengers can minimize risk by moving about the cabin at least every hour, doing isometric exercises, consuming larger amounts of liquids, wearing support hose and perhaps taking aspirin and vitamin E before travel for their blood thinning effect.

Baro-trauma is a frequent complaint of air travelers.

The change in atmospheric pressure especially in descent can result in painful pressure changes in the sinuses, ears and occasionally teeth. This problem is especially problematic for those who have allergy problems or a recent cold or ear infection.

Symptoms can be prevented by attempting to equalize pressure by swallowing frequently and chewing gum during flight or taking a decongestant prior to travel. Generally, one who has had recent ear surgery should not fly.

Jet lag, a condition characterized by fatigue, insomnia, irritability, nausea and difficulty concentrating usually occurs when traveling across four to five time zones. This condition can be minimized by getting adequate sleep during the 24 hours before travel, getting moderate exercise at the destination and adapting quickly to the new time zone schedule.

Minimizing alcohol and hypnotic drugs is also advised.

Melatonin, three to five milligrams taken on the day of travel at the expected destination bedtime when traveling east and at bedtime for three nights has been shown to be helpful. However the long-term safety of this substance has not been studied and purity of the product may vary.

Motion sickness affects some air travelers. Symptoms can be frequently prevented by using medications before travel such as scopolamine (Transderm-Scop), diphenhydramine (Benadryl) or ginger (at a dose of 1,000 milligrams every four to six hours).

Because airplane cabin pressure maintains a relative altitude of approximately 5,000 to 8,000 feet, the oxygen concentration is lower than that on the ground. This poses problems for persons with severe anemia, cardiovascular, pulmonary and circulatory conditions. They should consult with their personal physician before flying.

Air travel is considered safe in normal pregnancy until approximately week 36.

Pregnant women are however at special risk of deep venous thrombosis. Persons who have had laparoscopic surgery should wait at least seven to 10 days before flying.

Persons who have had recent abdominal, central nervous system, ophthalmologic or thoracic surgery where expansion of trapped gas at reduced cabin pressure could cause injury should consult with their physician before travel.

Finally, air travelers should be sure to bring enough of their usual medications to last the entire trip plus allowance for some delays.

It is wise to pack necessary medications in carry-on luggage and to bring along a list of all medications with their generic names as trade names vary in foreign countries.

Find the best example of love this Feb. 14 in Paul's writings

By FR. JIM GUNN
Rector, Christ Episcopal Church

Just about one week after you read this we will celebrate Valentine's Day.

For a while now the stores have been filled with many gifts in red and white and many cards, both funny and sentimental. There are lots of hearts and numerous teddy bears. And, of course, there are many little Cupids flying around with their bow and arrow.

The whole idea seems to be that if you get hit with one of those arrows, then you will be head-over-heels in love and will have no control of yourself — you will just plain act goofy and fawn over the person you love.

Unfortunately, even though this has been the kind of attention this day has gotten for as long as any of us can remember, it tends to make a mockery of the depth and reality of true love. Cupid brings only a pale caricature of the dedication and devotion that is real love.

I know of nothing that has outdone the description found in the thirteenth chapter of Paul's First Letter to the Corinthians.

Those 13 verses have come down through the centuries as the premier picture of what constitutes love.

"If I speak in the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I am a noisy gong or a clanging cymbal. And if I have prophetic powers, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and if I have all faith, so as to remove mountains, but have not love, I am nothing. If I give away all I have, and if I deliver my body to be burned, but have not love, I gain nothing. Love is patient and kind; love is not jealous or boastful; it is not arrogant or rude. Love does not insist on its own way; it is not irritable or resentful; it does not rejoice at wrong, but rejoices in the right. Love bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things. Love never ends; as for prophecies, they will pass away; as for tongues, they will cease; as for knowledge, it will pass away. For our knowledge is imperfect; but when the perfect comes, the imperfect will pass away. When I was a child, I spoke like a child, I thought like a child, I reasoned like a child; when I became a man, I gave up childish ways. For now we see in a mirror dimly, but then face to face. Now I know in part; then I shall understand fully, even as I have been fully understood. So faith, hope, love abide, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

Beacons of Blessing

The first part says to us that our actions, however good they may appear, are all just useless show if they are not motivated by the selfless desire for the good and well-being of another. Then comes the list of all characteristics of love — those things that it is and those things that it isn't.

It is patient, kind, rejoicing in right, believing, hoping and enduring; it is not jealous, boastful, arrogant, rude, irritable or resentful. As the saying goes, love just keeps keeping on and is even greater than faith and hope. What's more, it all finds its source in God. Just look at 1 John 4:19 — "We love, because He first loved us."

All of that sounds to me as being much stronger and more permanent than all the hearts and candies and teddy bears. I will close with a suggestion that I heard a number of years ago.

If you want to gauge how well you are doing in showing love to others, then read aloud the passage from First Corinthians but place your name wherever the word love appears (or the word "it", referring to love).

If it doesn't sound like a good description of you then you better go back to the "love drawing board!"

Lignell talks about skiing trip in Africa

On top of the soreness, the non-natives in the group experienced altitude effects and insomnia.

"A lot of it was mind over matter. I can see why people do mountaineering — a lot of it is miserable, but your reward is so great; like the places it takes you and the amazing things that you can see," she explained.

Lignell admitted that it did get discouraging, hiking with the skis strapped to her back through the jungle. "It looked like there was never going to be snow." She worried that they would hike all that way just to ski a 20 foot patch of snow.

"We didn't see any snow until the last 15 minutes of the hike. We came around the back side of the mountain and there was snow. We were elated," she said.

To prepare for the trip, Lignell did a lot of hiking, back country skiing and Nordic skiing.

"My philosophy is: The more things you can be in control of the better off you will be. Feeling like I am prepared physically will make it easier psychologically," she explained.

The porters had not only never seen a chair lift they had also never seen anyone ski before. Lignell said she couldn't wait to see their reaction after they had made the run.

"They (the porters) were so scared for us, like we were doing a stunt," she said.

But this was not a stunt; Lignell has skied for 32 years and VanHoute is hoping to be part of the Olympic ski team competing in the World Cup freestyle event.

Lignell's next mission is climbing Alaska's Mount Denali in May.

"When I do a trip like that (Kenya) it makes me a better person. It makes some things in our lives seem unimportant. Our ears are as big as what they live in. It makes me appreciate what I have," Lignell said.

Was Charlie Brown in town?

While winter weather is still in the area, apparently someone still wanted to go fly a kite in downtown Charlevoix. However, the kite got stuck in a tree, where it will probably spend the winter. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Several projects highlight Charlevoix's city budget

Campbell added that the start date for the city hall project will not be determined until plans are finalized and the project has been put out for bids by contractors. City hall renovation funding is the greatest budgeted project with an estimated cost of $1.4 million.

Carlson also noted the importance of street improvements like those planned for Belvedere Avenue where water and sewer lines will be redone as will the street itself.

He added completion plans for the water-main loop which is referred to as, "the Garfield Avenue utility extension" in the capital plan portion of the 2001-2002 budget proposal.

"Completion of the watermain loop will help the systems water pressure and efficiency," he said.

While all of these capital projects will benefit the public, they come at an estimated cost of $6.9 million.

Third ward council member Sherm Chamberlain sees the utility of the capital projects, yet he is hesitant about the money going out. Chamberlain said that City Manager Mike Wiesner hopes to bid out multiple projects to the same contractor in an effort to save money.

"The Garfield water extension is not that big of a project, if we can bid that out with another public works project we may get a more favorable price. The contractor can move his equipment from one site to the next without much difficulty," Chamberlain said.

A public hearing on the budget is set for Feb. 19.

Charlevoix native returns home to start new business

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Steve Michael has come home and in the process is helping area residents get their homes.

Michael, a Charlevoix graduate from 1976, has been trying for the last 10 years to come back to the area. During that time, he had been living in the southern portion of the United States, working in the office supply business.

But, he needed a change in his job — which would eventually give him a chance to move back to his beloved northern Michigan.

Working off his experience in college with economics, Michael got into the mortgage business and joined Independent Mortgage Company.

"It is a good time to get into the mortgage business. There are so many different types of mortgages to do and we are probably going to be getting into a strong refinancing market," Michael said. Refinancing helps people pay off any high debts they accumulated during our robust economy, such as credit cards, he said.

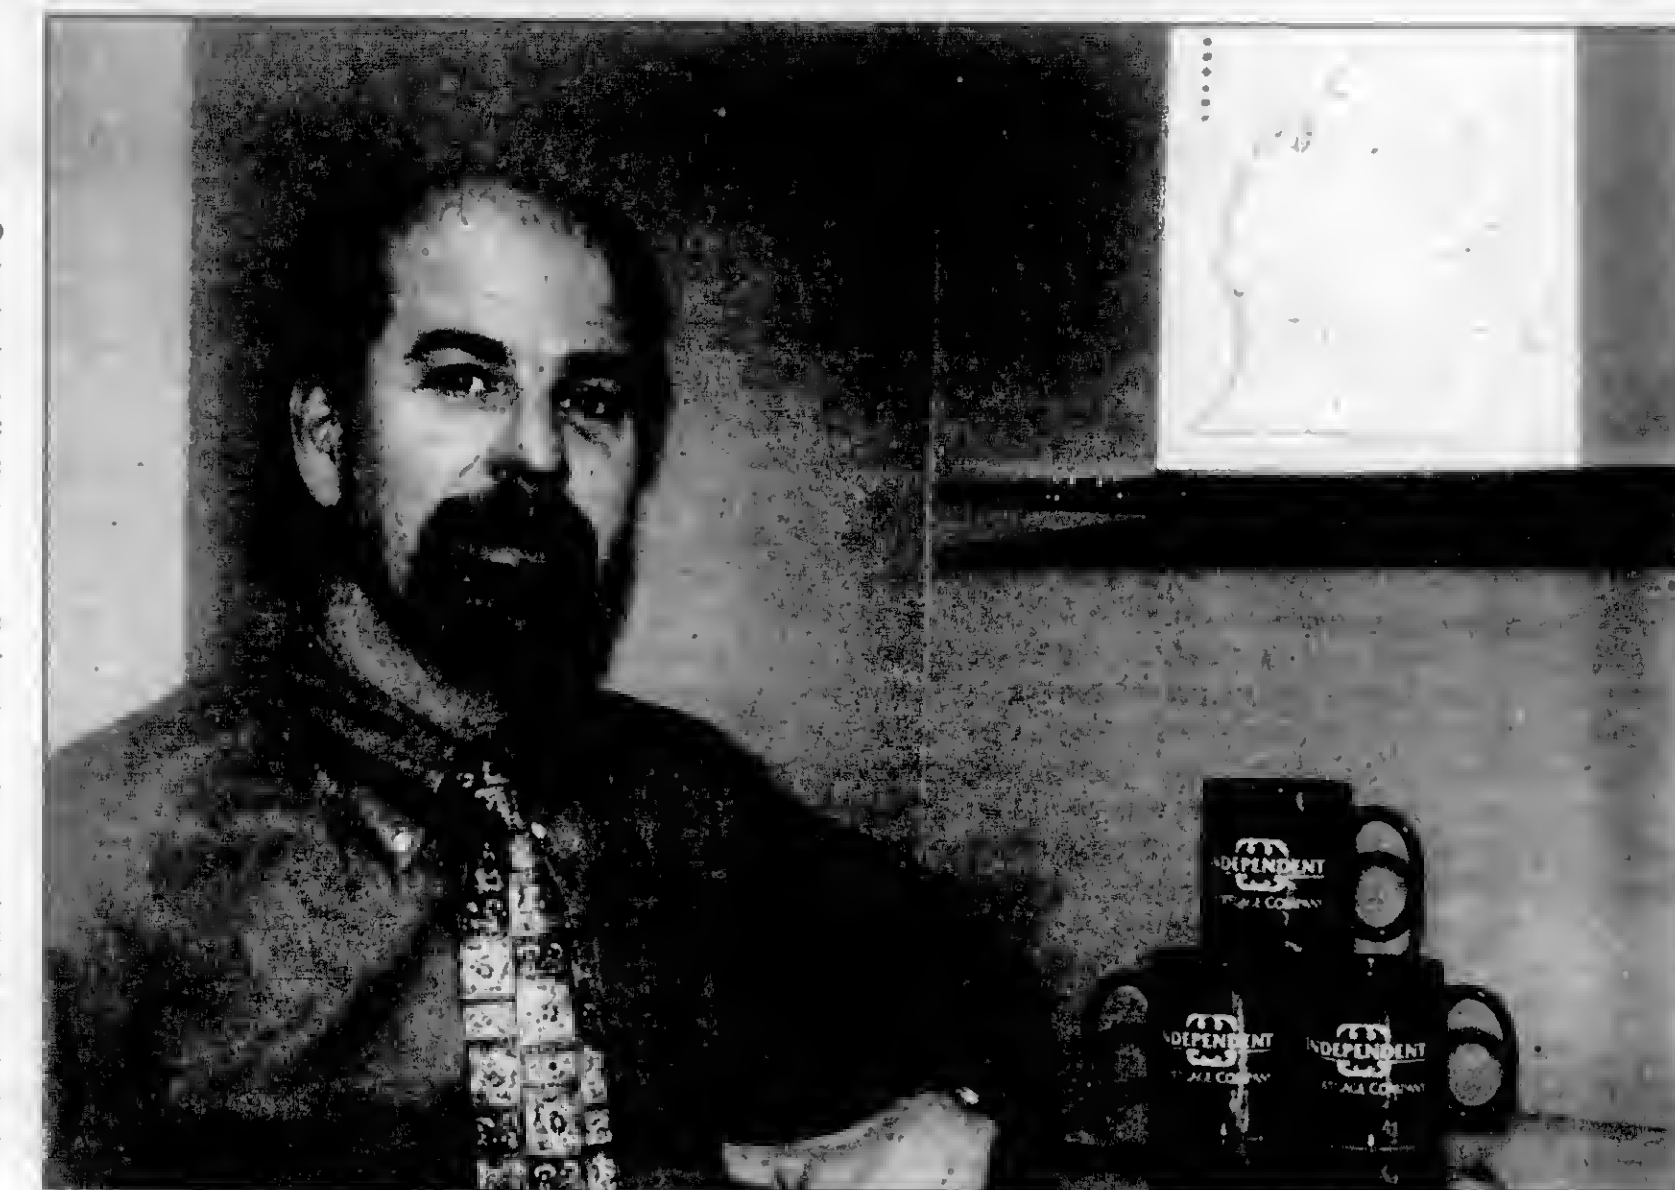

Added to his ability to help people overcome the debt they created, Michael said his business is able to finance the purchase of a variety of properties, including second homes. Since Charlevoix has such a diverse property market, he felt his services would be perfect.

So he has started an Independent Mortgage Company office in downtown Charlevoix, near the intersection of Bridge Street and Park Avenue.

Independent Mortgage is open throughout the year from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Through this business, customers can get first and second mortgages, vacation home mortgages, vacant land loans, refinances and debt consolidation loans, bridges and all government loans, construction loans and even loans for people "who don't have perfect credit."

Michael said he gets satisfaction out of helping people who do not have perfect credit and are trying to get a new home or trying to decrease their debt.

"Most people have gotten into some type of circumstances. I do those kinds of loans that I don't think many others do," he said. "On some (loans), I have to make a case for them to get bought. But, I like doing those. They can be the most rewarding type of loans to do."

Michael opened for business last August. He lives in Charlevoix with his wife, Sue. For more information on Independent Mortgage Company call 547-2672.

Charlevoix Rayders continue to roll

Team beats Benzie Central 74-64 in away game

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports stringer

A lot of things can happen to a basketball team when they play away from home. They can suffer from poor shooting, a hostile crowd or even foul trouble due to unfamiliar referees.

The Charlevoix Rayders fought off all three of these en route to a hard-fought 74-64 non-conference win at Benzie Central last Friday night.

"It was pretty exciting," said Coach Keith Haske. "It was a team oriented win. Some kids who hadn't stepped up really stepped up and gave us some big minutes in crunch time."

The Huskies raced out to an 8-0 lead to start the game.

Jim Shepherd countered with two three-pointers for Charlevoix to cut the lead to 8-6 and get the Rayders right back into the game. Charlevoix pulled even at 8-8, 10-10 and 13-13 before scoring the last four points of the first quarter to gain a 17-13 advantage.

The Rayders bumped the advantage to seven on a Patrick Gowell three-pointer, but Benzie roared back with a 9-1 run to take a 22-21 lead. Scott Parrish answered for Charlevoix, scoring four straight points, two coming on his second dunk of the season, to give the Rayders a lead they would never relinquish.

The Rayders left the court for half-time with a 32-28 lead.

Foul trouble became a major concern early in the third quarter as Keith Daly picked up his third personal foul just over a minute into the quarter. Just 30 seconds later, Jeremiah Teuscher did the same.

As the Rayder lead fluctuated between two and five, Parrish picked up his third foul with 4:44 to go in the quarter. When Gowell was whistled for his third with 1:48 left in the stanza, it seemed like the fouls might finally take their toll.

The fouls were seven for Charlevoix and only one for Benzie at that point as the Rayders clung to a 42-38 advantage.

Just over a minute later, Gowell went to the bench with his fourth foul and the Rayders held to a narrow 44-40 margin.

In what could have been the turning point in the game, Daly was whistled for a Charlevoix intentional foul, his fourth personal, at 1:27 in the third. Benzie made only one of the two free throws but scored a field goal to cut the Rayder lead to 46-43.

Rob Boss came through for Charlevoix, though, scoring on a putback for a 48-43 lead and then again on a shot at the buzzer to give the Rayders a 50-46 lead at the end of the third quarter. For the quarter, Charlevoix was called for 10 fouls while Benzie had only three.

Teuscher followed that up with a three-point play to put the lead back up to nine.

Benzie's last gasp was yet another 5-0 run which again cut the Rayder lead to four at 63-59. Gowell and Teuscher answered with back-to-back jumpers to push the margin to a somewhat comfortable 67-59 with just two minutes to go.

The Huskies were then forced to foul and the Rayders hit enough free throws down the stretch to hold on for a 74-64 victory.

Shepherd led the Rayders with 18 points, including four trifectas behind the three-point stripe. Gowell had 13 points, five assists and five steals. Teuscher also scored 13. Parrish, suffering his worst shooting night of the year, finished with eight points but pulled down eight boards and blocked five shots.

Boss also tallied eight points to round out a balanced Charlevoix attack.

After hosting Harbor Springs on Tuesday, the 10-3 Rayders travel to East Jordan on Friday to take on the Red Devils.

Power lifter

Watch out for dangerous sickness in babies

It's that time of year again. Time for babies, toddlers and children to come down with their usual winter sniffles and sneezes, and for parents to be ready with tissues, cough syrup and hot soup. But it's also time for parents and doctors to be vigilant for a virus whose symptoms look like a simple cold at first, but in fact can send little ones to the hospital.

It's called RSV, for respiratory syncytial virus. And Marie Lozon, head of pediatric emergency services at the University of Michigan Health System, warns that it can take a heavy, even deadly, toll on many children — especially the very young or those with certain health conditions.

"RSV is the most common cause of serious respiratory disease in younger children, especially infants and very young toddlers," says Lozon, who sees a large number of RSV cases in the UMHS Emergency Department each year. "It's most dangerous in younger children or those with risk factors involving their lungs or their hearts. But even the average healthy child could get RSV and could get quite ill from it, even requiring hospitalization, oxygen and other treatments."

RSV infections can progress to bronchiolitis — not to be confused with bronchitis — or pneumonia, and even death. In newborns and very small infants, it can occasionally cause temporary interruptions in breathing, Lozon adds, leading some physicians to speculate that RSV may be associated with Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, or SIDS.

The American Lung Association estimates that 90,000 hospitalizations and 4,500 deaths a year result from RSV infections in babies, toddlers and children.

RSV is around us all the time and can live on surfaces or hands, making transmission easy. Its high season starts in late fall and peaks in January and February, often with local outbreaks. During that time, those most at risk include infants under six months; children born prematurely; those with asthma, cystic fibrosis, weak immune systems or heart conditions and the elderly.

So, what can worried parents do? Lozon recommends two, key steps: hand washing and other practices to cut down on transmission of the virus within a family, day care group or class, and special attention by parents to a child's symptoms, so they can get medical attention if needed.

RSV often enters the body through the nose, mouth or eyes, or through inhalation of droplets from a cough or sneeze. If you touch an object that has been touched by a person with RSV, and then touch your face with that hand, you can be infected. It takes about four days for symptoms to develop, and some older children and adults never show signs but can still spread the virus.

Most kids get infected with RSV by the time they are two or three years old. But even though it's pretty hard to avoid contact "(Respiratory Syncytial Virus) is the most common cause of serious respiratory disease in younger children, especially infants and very young toddlers."

Marie Lozon,
Pediatric medicine with RSV-carrying things and people, especially in winter, Lozon urges everyone to take a few common-sense measures that can protect the most vulnerable.

First, make a habit of washing your hands often, with soap and water, especially after you have been near someone who's coughing or touched objects they have used. It's a good idea year-round, but becomes especially important now for many reasons.

Keeping children away from cold-like symptoms away from babies is another good idea, Lozon says, as is keeping infants and at-risk children away from crowded places during peak RSV season. And parents and caregivers, like day-care providers should take extra care to clean surfaces and faces often, especially when dealing with one child who has symptoms and others in the same house, classroom or day-care center who don't.

Still there is no foolproof way to avoid RSV completely, no vaccine at this point to prevent it and no guarantee of immunity this year if you've had it before. Some high-risk kids may be able to get injections of immune-boosting medication, but most children aren't candidates for it. So, Lozon advises that parents and others learn how to tell RSV from a common cold.

One of RSV's hallmarks, she says, is the area of the body it affects.

"A normal cold or cough generally is confined to the upper respiratory tract, above the collarbone," Lozon explains. "But if an RSV infection progresses, it can go into the lower respiratory tract, below the collarbone, inflaming the small airways and causing a wheeze and a difficulty in breathing."

Even in otherwise healthy children, an aggressive case of RSV can still cause serious breathing difficulties. Still, Lozon says, most children who get RSV have a mild to moderate case. Only about two percent of patients need hospitalization for their first RSV infection.

Besides the breathing problems and running nose, infants may have other symptoms, Lozon says, such as poor feeding and listlessness or lethargy.

"Unfortunately, they also may have periods of apnea, meaning they will actually stop breathing for a short period of time," she adds.

If a child has breathing pauses, is working hard just to breathe, makes a high-pitched sound when breathing, or if their chest or belly sucks in and out when they breathe, Lozon says adults should seek medical attention immediately.

Other danger signs are if the child can't eat or drink well, is listless, has a color change or can't pursue normal activity despite their symptoms.

Anyone who suspects RSV in a baby, child or adult should treat the early symptoms just like they would treat a cold, using tactics approved for the patient's age group. For example, give over-the-counter medicines to reduce fever and cough, clear out nose and mouth secretions, increase water and feeding, and use a humidifier. Don't give infants cold medicines though.

If you think you need to call a doctor, Lozon advises trying the child's primary physician first and getting his or her opinion about whether to seek further help. Describe the child's symptoms in detail to help the doctor's decision.

But don't refrain from going to the emergency room if you see RSV-like symptoms, she urges. Doctors there can test for the presence of RSV, support a child's breathing with oxygen, or even give anti-virus drugs or immune treatments in serious cases.

UofM offers some tips for healthy eating this year

Sticking to your resolution to lose weight this new year by eating a well-balanced diet may just be a matter of what you put in your cart at the grocery store.

To get started, throw out your list and get ready to make a few changes to your grocery shopping routine to eat healthier in 2001.

Gradually break away from your normal shopping routine by beginning to look for products you don't always purchase instead of shooing your family with a completely new set of foods, says Holly Noble, registered dietitian, M-Fit Health Promotion Division at the University of Michigan Health System.

"Just open your eyes to the rest of the products that you don't normally buy," Noble said. "People get into a routine and they tend to buy the same products and they don't realize that there might be a healthier choice that is not only better for them, it might even taste better."

Start by rolling your cart down the fish, meats and poultry aisle. There are a variety of choices you can make in the meat and seafood departments that fit within healthy eating guidelines.

"When you are looking at the fish counter, any choice is going to be better than a high saturated fat meat," Noble said.

The American Heart Association recommends eating a fish meal at least two times every week to replace the red meats that are high in saturated fat. Fish provides Omega-3 fatty acids that have been shown to help prevent heart disease. Plus, fish is an easy dish to prepare because it only takes about 10 to 15 minutes to bake.

Two, three-ounce servings of lean red meat or fish should be included in a healthy diet every day. Lean red meat is very versatile and can be prepared as a healthy dish by baking, broiling, grilling, steaming and stir-frying.

To find the healthiest cuts of meat, Noble recommends looking for meats with the words "loin" or "round" on the label and to limit buying high-fat meats like sausage, prime rib and spare ribs.

If you're hunting for meats that are lower in fat, chicken and turkey are great choices. You also can lower your calorie intake from chicken and turkey by removing the skin after baking.

For a colorful assortment of foods that are full of vitamins, minerals and also are a good source of fiber, take a stroll down the fruits and vegetables aisle.

The deep purple color in blueberries has anthocyanin that may protect against heart disease, while the orange color caused by the beta-carotene in sweet potatoes can help prevent cancer.

When purchasing lettuce, color is a major nutritional determinate. The deeper the lettuce color, like in spinach and romaine, the more the nutritional benefit it has compared to a lighter colored lettuce such as iceberg.

Noble recommends eating at least five servings of fruits and vegetables every day by making them part of every meal and using them as a nutritious and filling snack between meals.

But don't forget to leave some room for carbohydrates like pasta, rice and grains in your diet. Carbohydrates should make up a large portion of a diet because they provide nutrients such as B vitamins, folate and fiber. However, it's important to remember to properly balance carbohydrates with other foods.

"The problem with carbohydrates some people have is they don't always know when to stop," Noble said. "Add vegetables to your pasta dishes to add a little more bulk. You can also choose whole wheat products that will fill you up, as well as giving you more nutrients."

Likewise, brown rice, which is a healthier choice than white rice because it contains more fiber, can also be mixed with vegetables to extend the recipe and make it more filling.

Fiber is also one of the key ingredients to look for when buying cereal. Cereal is a good option for breakfast because it provides essential vitamins and minerals, in addition to fiber.

To get the greatest nutritional benefit from cereal, there should be at least two and a half grams of fiber per serving.

"If your favorite cereal doesn't have two and a half grams of fiber, you can also try adding a small amount of bran cereal to your bowl," Noble suggested.

Just like cereal, everyone has a favorite snack. But there are a few things to consider when buying snacks to fit into a healthy diet.

"Everyone enjoys snacking from time to time and you don't have to eliminate that from your diet," Noble said. "There are lower fat alternatives like baked snacks, some crackers that are lower fat and some cookies that are lower in fat. But you do need to watch out because sometimes lower fat does not mean lower calorie."

The best way to eat any kind of snack is in moderation, of course. To do that, Noble says to moderate your portion size, putting some of the food onto a plate or in a bowl rather than eating right out of the bag or box.

Like snacks, there are a wide variety of choices down the bread aisle and it is not always easy finding the healthiest loaf. Not all brown breads for example, are packed with fiber and whole-wheat flour.

"You really need to look at the ingredient label and make sure that the first ingredient is either whole-wheat flour or oat flour because some of the brown breads are just enriched wheat flour with caramel coloring," Noble said.

Labels are also a shopper's best resource when buying dairy products. Dairy that is lower in fat or fat-free is also generally lower in calories, but the nutritional value remains the same. It's best to try a variety of lower fat products since many brands differ in taste and texture to find out which one you prefer. Low-fat cheese — a blend of several different cheeses has been greatly improved during the years to taste and melt better when cooking.

The only obstacle you may face down the dairy aisle is deciding between butter and margarine.

"The margarine and butter debate still goes on, but the bottom line is that butter is a very high source of saturated fat which is known to lead to heart disease if consumed in excess," Noble said. "You want to look for margarine that has two grams or less of saturated fat or you could also choose the margarine sprays which are calorie-free, fat-free but still give you some of that flavor."

But in the quest for a healthy diet in 2001, remember you do not have to eliminate any of your favorite foods from your grocery cart even if they may not be full of nutritional benefits. The easiest ways to maintain a healthy diet is to balance less-nutritional foods with foods that have a variety of health benefits.

Visitors from Chicago brought a lot to area

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

Charlevoix's history is rich in the stories of how our culture began.

When John Dixon, our first citizen, found the area in 1856, he claimed title to a lot of property on the north side of the river. Twenty-four years later, a group of wealthy Chicago parties, who were members of the large First Congregational Church of Chicago, came on a fishing trip through the north. They checked out Mackinaw, Petoskey and Charlevoix areas, looking for a place to establish a resort.

They ended up purchasing 40 acres from John S. Dixon, which was first named The Chicago Summer Resort Association, and was later changed to the Chicago Club.

Charlevoix had never been much of a lumbering town, and this was the second resort to be established, after the Belvedere, which was begun a couple years earlier. John Dixon first built a log cabin in the vicinity of what is now 200 Mercer. In 1873, he built a beautiful, big farmhouse with a windmill in the side yard, which is now the private residence of Dr. and Mrs. James Gels.

Due to the abundance of water, and the cool, breezy weather, the area was a Mecca from the start for the well to do. They came here to relax and play away from the heat of the city. These people and their offspring have always had a love in their heart for Charlevoix, and have generously given of their time, talent and resources to make this town a finer community for all of us.

It so happens that we live in a monkey see monkey do world, and down through the years, the example of the two resorts has rubbed off on the local citizens, and has influenced our ideas of making Charlevoix beautiful.

Michigan and Dixon Avenue have also been very much a part of our rich heritage.

Dale remembers as a boy, going with one of the drivers to deliver ice cream to the kitchen of the Chicago Club House. There was a very nice Swedish lady, named Tina, who talked in broken English. She would always give him a piece of cake or a cookie. He remembers that when a call would come in for a delivery of ice cream or butter, that the single guys would always say they would take it, as they had a lot of pretty girls working there.

Dale recalls many an early morning seeing Earl Babst, the owner of Domino Sugar, walking with his umbrella as a cane, wearing a full three piece suit, a top hat and his glasses hanging by a chain. He would be taking his morning walk, and presented very dapper, dignified personage.

According to my cousin, Cynthia Garland, who lived in the caretakers house as a child, with her parents, Frank and Ruth Ann Curtis, he would stop every morning on his walk, and would even talk with the Curtis family dog.

In 1944, he wrote a book entitled "Charlevoix Vacation Glimpses," and in 1962, he re-published the book. Mr. Babst was a very kind and gentle man. He owned a green 1939 Dodge four door sedan. He usually hired a local teenager to chauffeur him around the community. I believe the Dodge is still on the club grounds to this day.

Another thing that sticks out in Dale's mind is when his family took their nightly ride down to watch the train come in. There was always a fully uniformed policeman, complete with nightstick and revolver, standing on the sidewalk somewhere between the lower and upper terrace drive. When you would come around the curve to go down grade, he would be standing there, a very impressive figure indeed.

According to the Charlevoix Sentinel, during the winter of 1880 and 1881, the wealthy Chicago parties developed their plans for the association. They had brought a landscape gardener to Charlevoix in November (to lay out and arrange their grounds.) He had apparently done his work well, because on June 4, 1881, the Sentinel reported "workmen are engaged in clearing the grounds, and work on the large clubhouse will start on June 6. It will be a two story building in the form of an L, and will have fronts, 60 by 100 feet with broad verandas the entire length of both wings."

These verandas encircled the house and entire frontage, and the comfort the happy resorters derived from sitting in the huge armchairs on a cool summer evening must have been a most enjoyable respite from the heat of the day.

A tower on the crest of the clubhouse offered a breathtaking view down Pine Lake (now Lake Charlevoix,) a view of Round Lake and the town, and beyond Lake Michigan. At that time, the north side was pretty void of trees, and the views were excellent both from town and the club.

I understand that the club members still carry on a tradition that has been in place since the very beginning; having a hymn sing every Sunday night.

They used to have sailboat races on summer afternoons, with the whole fleet of six-meter yachts, about 15 sloops in all, participating.

Although the Chicago Club was founded by Chicagoans, its membership now lives all over the United States.

There have been new homes added through the years, and the club flourishes today.

It has been a good neighbor to Charlevoix, and we are grateful for the resort community we have become today, through the early influence of the two clubs.

State funding may be lower for city this year

FUNDING

In lieu of $6.9 million being allocated to capital projects, a loss of funding in the city's $14.25 million budget appears to be a harsh prospect. However, Brandi said that project funding has already been set aside or in many cases is provided for through grants.

Where the loss will be felt is in the general budget, or what Brandi referred to as the reserve. It is from this fund that services like police and fire are provided for. Because the general fund pays for these services, taxpayers do not.

Brandi added the general fund is the main fund the city works out of and a loss in state funding may make it difficult for the fund to break even.

One place where state funding and population statistics converge is in what amount the city gets back from the gas tax.

This gas tax revenue is used to power the street fund. So, along with the general fund, the street fund may also see a loss.

Brandi added that a loss affects how much the city has to subsidize.

He also noted the health of the economy over the past year. He said that state revenue sharing from the sales tax is up, so we will see an increase in return from the sales tax possibly offsetting the loss.

If the sales tax revenue were flat, Charlevoix would lose six percent.

Castle Farms sold for an undisclosed amount

Mueller bought the property at the foreclosure sale, so as not to lose it to someone else. Mortgage lender Fred Taylor had called for the foreclosure sale to collect on a debt allegedly owed to him by the late Art Reibel and he was the only other individual who entered a bid at the time of the foreclosure sale.

Taylor submitted the figure of $178,071 based on the amount he claimed was owed to him by the trust. According to Taylor's claim, Reibel owed his company, F.B.T. Enterprises, $85,000 for the mortgage and interest which has since accrued and other outstanding loans.

Ernest Essad of Grand Rapids who was representing the trust during litigation with Taylor said that the case Taylor submitted against the trust has since been settled, but that the terms of the settlement are confidential.

The Jan. 4 closing eliminates the six month redemption and has finalized Mueller's acquisition.

A statement submitted on behalf of Mueller states, "Mrs. Mueller plans to take a phased approach to rehabilitating the Castle Farms buildings. This year's work will likely be focused on evaluation, planning and some basic structural repairs. Mrs. Mueller's primary goal is to preserve the beauty of this unique property. Specific plans for the use of the property have not been made."

As the dust settles after a lengthy, uncertain battle, Reibel said she saw the final outcome as a "win-win" for the parties involved.

"I'll be in Charlevoix for a month or so this summer and I'll catch up and see what they are going to do. I feel really good, my family does too. I think we are all focused on moving forward and not looking back," Reibel said.

A little sweet talk for Valentine's Day.

Searchers find four alive in wreckage

By JEREMY MCBAIN

Fifteen hours... That is how long three children and their mother huddled together in the wreckage of their airplane's fuselage as freezing rain and snow pelted Beaver Island Thursday and Friday.

"I think all of us have really had a part in a miracle," said Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater of finding this family alive. "This family really should not have survived this accident."

Mirth Gault, 43, and her children, Adam, 13, Emma, 9, and Alec, 5, all of Chicago, were found around 10:30 a.m. last Friday by Island Airways Pilot Paul Welke — who was searching the area on a hunch — after the twin engine turboprop plane the family was on disappeared around 7:30 p.m. last Thursday on approach to Beaver Island Airport.

According to reports, Welke was flying over the heavily wooded area about two miles from the runway of the airport, when he saw Mirth waving a yellow life-vest. A United States Coast Guard helicopter later airlifted the mother and her three children to the Charlevoix Municipal Airport where they were then transported by ambulance to Charlevoix Area Hospital and treated for their injuries.

Most members of the family were just wet and cold with minor scrapes and bruises, but Emma had suffered a fractured pelvis in the accident. She was still in the hospital as of Monday night, but was expected to be discharged soon.

The pilot and co-pilot of the plane died in the accident. The pilot was Curtis Logan, 51, of Little Falls, Minn. and the co-pilot was Steve Erhart, 23, of Elgin, Ill.

Lasater added, "The family of the pilots can be satisfied that they delivered their passengers safely, even though they died in the process."

The mother and daughter, along with two of Mirth's sons, survived the crash of the airplane they were passengers on last Thursday night. They then spent 15 hours in the freezing rain on Beaver Island while waiting for rescue. Mother, son celebrate birthdays with a jump

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

As she stood calmly by the open plane door, jump master Mike Kindsvater called to Charlevoix resident Sally Bales. "One...rock forward."

"Two...rock back," he continued.

"Three...jump."

Bales felt the force of the wind against her cheeks and her stomach turn as she twirled through the sky over Perris, Calif. Jan. 29.

She saw the world from 12,500 feet up, the coveted birds-eye view. With her arms spread out like wings and her legs stretched out behind her she hung, suspended in the air and awed at the immensity of the ocean to her left, the beauty of two lakes surrounded by mountains and the fluid hills of the valley below.

She was entranced.

At 5,000 feet the instructor pointed to the altimeter on Sally's wrist — it was time to pull the rip cord. The parachute ballooned out behind them and the pair floated slowly to the ground.

"It was just like my dream where I was standing on a mountain looking down and I flew. It felt wonderful to soar," Sally said.

Sally completed the eight minute descent she had been waiting to experience for over 30 years.

She and her son, Geoff Nelson of Studio City, Calif., are celebrating big birthdays this year; Sally is 70 today and Geoff will be 40. The duo thought a mother/son skydiving excursion would be the perfect way to celebrate life.

Geoff, a 1979 graduate of Charlevoix High School, is a director in California who worked on the creative end of things in the opening credits for the television program Home Improvement. He also directed approximately six episodes of the show.

Sally graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1949, and retired from DME Company in 1995.

She is currently living in Charlevoix with her husband Mike who retired from Southdown in the summer of 2000.

"I wasn't afraid. When I visited the Grand Canyon I walked to the edge but I was always cautious. I'm not a daredevil. When I first drove a jet ski I only went 10 miles per hour until I got comfortable," Sally said.

"I'm not sure why I wasn't afraid."

OPINIONS

It's time to relook at snowmobiles in city

Maybe it is time to ban snowmobiles outright from the city of Charlevoix, unless they are on a trailer.

The current ordinance restricting snowmobiles to certain areas of the city, is too confusing, too hard to enforce and is being abused by some. This has forced an upset group of residents to go before the Charlevoix City Council and demand something be done.

Snowmobilers are trespassing on their land, riding through town at all times of the day and night, riding through town recklessly and failing to stay on the designated routes.

And the whole purpose of this ordinance — to bring money to the downtown area during the slow winter — seems to have failed. In the last few weeks, plenty of snowmobiles could be seen and heard riding through various parts of town during various times of the day, but none of these machines were seen parked downtown, with their riders spending their money in local shops.

However, council seems to want to give the ordinance more time. One of their suggestions when faced with these demands from residents was, "Have the local newspaper rerun the snowmobile map."

The map has already been published once this winter in the Charlevoix Courier and is running again this week with a story. But, this will probably not help the problem. We can publish this map over and over again — taking up valuable news space in the process — and the problems outlined by the residents will not go away.

Now to be fair, not all snowmobilers are bad. Some are very cautious when in town and pay attention to the law, especially those who take part in the yearly Charlevoix Snowmobile Club's Snowmobile Ride-In.

These people should still be allowed to have their ride-in. The way to do that is by giving them a special use permit for the day of the event.

The law has been abused or broken far too many times this year by the bad apples.

Residents have a right to be upset. They have to deal with loud annoying machines speeding by their homes late at night, trespassing riders who tear up their front lawns and the possibility they could get hit by a speeding snowmobile while outside.

And for what, so the merchants can make a little money off the snowmobilers? From the looks of things lately, it seems this is not happening. It only looks like the residents are being used by snowmobilers looking for an easy route to the trails around Charlevoix.

A wise man once said, "When something is broken, the best thing to do is fix it right away. If you leave it alone, it could only cause more problems down the road."

That goes for broken ordinances too.

Think about the changes separate from the progress

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

A book titled "The Gardener's Year" seems to have drifted away from my library, but I remember enough of it for it to be useful. The book contained a month by month set of prescriptions for what a gardener must do each year.

Note that it was not titled "The Gardener's 2000" or "The Gardener's 2001." What the book celebrated was the notion of circular or cyclic time: the notion that what has been, will be again, and that progress, as we usually define it, is something of an illusion.

For most of human history and prehistory, cyclic time was the only idea about time that anyone had. But then somewhere along the way we pretty much adopted the idea that "Time Marches On," to quote the old newsreel introduction from the 1940s and 50s.

Some historians suggest that when we adopted a calendar with each year having a different number, we began to look at time differently. Certainly in the United States we have wholeheartedly taken up the notion that progress is inevitable and that we will not pass this way again. In our country's history we have moved from east to west, coast to coast, with the assurance that if we despoiled the place we were, there was another untouched place just over the horizon, and progress demanded that we leave where we were and go to the next new place.

Many of us still hold firmly to the idea that what is past is past and that we must move on into a mostly unknowable future. We should be aware that the idea of progressive time, linear time, is very new in human history and that it is potentially destructive of where and when we are.

It is still possible to look at time's passage as a set of cycles; yearly change; life, death and renewal; the great turning mill of the heavens. We are reminded each year by the arrival of the seed and plant catalogs that the garden has to be tended as it was last year if it is to come to anything.

Back in the 1960s when people were trying out all sorts of old and new ideas to see how they worked, Sonny and Cher sang a song about progress every week on our television. The line I remember best went, "They've paved paradise and put up a parking lot."

"They" is of course us, not someone else in some other place.

Everyone in the modern world is pretty much surrounded by example. Change with time is of course necessary; last year's garden is not exactly like this year's. Change and progress are however two different things; different in kind, not just in amount. The seed catalogs and pointers about how the garden must be managed can serve to remind us that for almost all of human history, the notion of linear, irreversible progress was unthinkable and that paradise was wherever we lived.

Paradise is still where we live and we should think long and hard about what changes are necessary and which ones are merely progress that may leave us outside the gates.

Letters to the editor

Letter response

Editor:

I am a member of the disgraceful Cocktail Party. I am amazed that the lady from East Jordan singled out last year's float as the disgusting one. I feel our Mermaid Float was much more tasteless or our Venetian Blondes Float, where I was Madonna Pregnant, and many others were just as tacky, but no letters from the East Jordan quality control were written then.

My best guess is that this lady from East Jordan may not be a member of our target audience. We are not trying to offend children or send them a bad message, just the opposite. We are trying to make them laugh along with the rest of the parade-goers, to get into the spirit of the biggest and the most entertaining festival in Charlevoix of the year. I see a lot more people laughing as we go by than turning away in disgust.

I would estimate 6,000 smiles and six people who didn't get it.

I have been out of school for a while, but I'm pretty sure there is still something in the Constitution that grants us the right to freedom of speech and self-expression. Nothing upsets me quite as much as people trying to force their opinions on everyone else. I feel every year we lose a little more ground to the close-minded who try to make everyone act the way they want to.

Our float was just a spoof on politics. It was clearly written on the sides of the float as the Third Political Party (The Cocktail Party.)

It takes a lot of effort to create our float and we have a blast doing it.

I guess we may have to make up some basic flyers explaining our creations for our confused viewers in the future.

We love second home owners

Editor:

We are responding to your headline on the front page, "Second homes may hurt city," written by Julie Musilek. Being new to Charlevoix, you don't understand the workings of our town, and we would like to clarify some of the ideas which were put forth in the article.

First of all, we heartily welcome every second home owner who has chosen to live here. Each one is important to the well-being of our town, and we are very grateful that they have decided to invest their money and hearts in Charlevoix.

They are great neighbors, are very interested in the quality, not quantity of life here, and have always been ready to help us in improving every facet of this town. A good example would be the C and O Club, which used to be an abandoned railroad track, with weeds neck-high growing on every inch. Now, we have many lovely homes with values in excess of one million dollars each. If just one of them were on the tax role, for $300,000 at the current rate of 12.15 mills, that one house alone would pay tax to the city of Charlevoix in the amount of $3,645 per year. Also they would pay 18 mills additional to the Charlevoix Public Schools, or $5,400, which a local homesteader would not have to pay. To top it all, it is a private street, which the city doesn't have to plow or maintain. Remember, this is not the total of the tax on their house, it is only a portion of what they pay. Now, if this isn't a windfall for the community, we would like to know what is.

We do not have to consider government money based on population figures, as we have been losing population within the city for the last 40 years! In 1960, the city peaked out at approximately 3,700 people, and in 1990, we were down to just over 3,200. There is not even any sense in bringing up this matter for the pocket change we would get from a head count. The valley in Charlevoix has been, and is, being bought up for second homes. These people don't just buy them, but most of them spend thousands fixing them up, thus increasing the tax role. What other town could be so lucky?

During the middle sixties, there was no change on the north side, where many local townies were able to purchase some of the big summer homes on Michigan and Dixon Avenues. Now, history is repeating itself, and the locals are selling out, and the second home buyers are taking over again, and are fixing up the homes, which are beautiful. This has made the economics of Charlevoix and the taxable base great for the city. Who would ever dream that a little place like Charlevoix could have a budget in excess of $14 million this year to make things more beautiful yet.

We all owe our gratitude to our new friends and neighbors who have chosen to invest their expertise in contributing what they have learned in their life endeavors, to our clubs, churches, hospital and every other part of our town as they have become an important part of our community. If we all stop and look around us, and see what a beautiful place we have become over the last 20 years, without gaining any population, we are grateful for you. We still have room for more! Thank you second home owners!

Editor:

I wish to express my heartfelt congratulations and compliments to the Charlevoix area blood donors and Red Cross volunteers for the great success of the recent bloodmobile. Our community American Red Cross blood drive was held on January 18 at the Reformed Church in Charlevoix.

Oh, my! What a turnout! My deepest gratitude to the 153 men and women who dedicated a portion of their day to wait for their turn to give the gift of life. The Red Cross left Charlevoix that night with 125 transfusable units of blood for the sick and injured! Magnificent!

Thank you to everyone who supported this blood drive throughout our town. What a marvelous difference each and every one of you made!

Please mark your calendars for the next Charlevoix community blood drive to be held on May 31, 2001 at the Reformed Church. Another opportunity to save lives! Thank you.

Don't tear down middle school

Editor:

I am a Charlevoix Middle School student and I'm in the sixth grade. I am writing you this letter to persuade the people of Charlevoix not to tear down the middle school. I think the middle school should be reused and not torn down.

My first reason is that the school is historical. For example our parents and grandparents went to this school. Also, we've gotten our education here. My second reason is we've had great memories here. For instance we've hung out with our friends. Another thing is we've had or gone to basketball games. Also, we've had great teachers!

My third and most important reason is we could turn the school into something else. Such as a new and bigger public library. Another thing we could turn it into is a child daycare center. Also, you could turn it into a senior center. So that's why I think we shouldn't tear down the middle school and we should reuse it.

Amherst, Mass.

She was married for 46 years to the late Woodbury Ransom of Kalamazoo.

Mrs. Ransom was a trustee emeritus of Warren Wilson College in Swannanoa, N.C. and Eckerd College in St. Petersburg, Fla.

She co-founded, with her husband, the CHIP Counseling Center in Charlevoix to memorialize their late son, Charles Allen "Chip" Ransom.

A life-long conservationist, she and her husband donated the 80 acres in Charlevoix County that is now known as the Charles Allen Ransom Nature Preserve. She was the President of the Board of the Woodbury Foundation, a private charitable organization funding educational and social services.

Survivors include her children Woodbury Seelye Ransom of Lansing, Iowa, Priscilla Ransom MacDougall of Stillwater, Minn., Myron P. Boon of Swannanoa, N.C., eight grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the CHIP Counseling Center at 6777 US Highway 31, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Girl Scout fashions

Mother, children survive against all odds

CRASH

Also on the plane were the family's pet parrot and dog. The parrot was found alive in the wreckage of the plane, but the dog died in the accident.

The Gaults plane took off from Midway Airport in Chicago around 5 p.m. Thursday, destined for Beaver Island. According to Mirth — who said she has always been nervous about flying — the weather was very foggy and turbulent throughout the flight.

They are seasonal residents of the island. When the plane arrived in Beaver Island airspace, Mirth's husband, Bob Gault, watched from the airport as the plane passed over around 7:30 p.m. However, it did not return.

The authorities were notified and a Coast Guard helicopter from Traverse City and the Coast Guard boat Acacia from Charlevoix were on scene searching for the plane in the water.

According to Emma Gault, the accident happened suddenly. She said the plane was bouncing around, its lights went out and then it flipped.

Once the plane was on the ground, Mirth said her son Adam used a pocket knife — that she had told him earlier that he could not bring — to cut Emma out of her seat. He then threw her over his back and the family got out of the wreckage.

Soon after, Mirth said she heard a helicopter fly overhead.

"It was just surreal," she said. Emma added, "It was cold and scary. We did not know if we would die or survive."

Mirth attributes her family's survival to her children. Because Emma did not have a coat, Mirth gave her daughter her coat. Her son, Alec, laid next to his mother throughout the night, keeping the both of them warm.

All the while, the oldest son, Adam, kept assuring his mother that help would be coming soon. "They (her children) did not cry. I am the proudest mother," Mirth said.

The search was discontinued that night due to weather, but was started the next day as soon as it was light out. The search party included a sheriff's deputy on Beaver Island, the Beaver Island fire department, the island emergency medical service and many Beaver Island residents on snowmobiles, along with three Coast Guard ships who were searching the water surrounding the island.

Also in on the search were three Coast Guard helicopters from Traverse City and a C-130 Canadian plane out of Trenton, Ontario. However, rescuers from the mainland were forced to wait due to the poor weather that day, leaving the Beaver Island volunteers to themselves, Lasater said.

"We had no way of getting resources to them. They just reacted and in a very professional manner. They saddled up and just did it on their own. The Islanders deserve a tremendous amount of credit," Lasater said.

Mirth said, "Beaver Island is an amazing place. They are delightful people."

She further thanked all the volunteers that searched for her and her children and the many people who have offered their help.

"I am just amazed that people would pray for us and care," she said.

Mirth was especially grateful to Welke.

"I don't think the Coast Guard was able to go out and Paul (Welke) went out anyway," she said. "I think that is what they (Beaver Island people) are like."

Once the family was found, they were all airlifted onto a Coast Guard helicopter and taken to the mainland immediately. However, this left Bob Gault still on the island, forced to wait for a break in the weather that would enable him to fly to the mainland to see his family.

"Imagine what he went through and then he couldn't get off the island," Lasater said. The father was eventually reunited with his family about 20 hours after their disappearance.

Lasater added he visited the hospital on Saturday and saw the family together.

"You could not have wiped the smile off his (Bob Gault's) face. He was so happy," Lasater said. "They are such a close family that they just rose to the occasion and the Beaver Islanders rose to the occasion."

Lasater added, after the crash Mirth did everything that a person should do in that type of situation. "She did everything she should have done as if she attended a rescue course. I think most of it was mother's intuition," he said.

The investigation of the accident has been turned over to the National Transportation and Safety Board. According to Lasater, there have been two other airplane crashes on Beaver Island in the last 10 years. There were no survivors in those accidents.

Coast Guard gives tips on ice safety

The United States Coast Guard Station in Charlevoix is offering some tips on ice safety this winter.

Preparations before going onto the ice:

- Ensure that your clothing and footwear is appropriate for the weather conditions you are going out into. Always keep in mind the possibility of being stranded.
- Be sure to notify family, friends or neighbors of your destination and when you plan to return. If you are reported missing, this information will assist the Coast Guard in searching for you.

- Carry a cell phone, two-way radio or some other means of communication in the event you should run into trouble. Construct a survival kit to include flares and at least 30 feet of rope thick enough to support the weight of a person.

- If you plan to travel across the ice by foot, 4-wheeler or snowmobile, it is recommended that you wear a life vest and carry a pair of ice picks. The ice picks aid in pulling you back onto solid ice.

- It is a good idea to utilize the buddy system. Having someone else with you increases your chances of survival if you should get into trouble while out on the ice.

What to do if a companion falls through the ice:

- Don't panic. Keep a safe distance away and take whatever action you can, without leaving the person, to get professional help. Yell, or call 911 on your cell phone.

- Do not approach the hole and attempt to help the person. You may fall through and become a victim, as well. Instead use some item on shore to throw or extend to the victim (here's where the rope in a survival kit becomes handy) to pull them out of the water. If a rope is not readily available, you can use anything else that will allow the person to hold on as you assist them out of the water.

- Even if the victim seems fine after they are rescued, seek medical assistance immediately.

What if you fall in:

- Don't panic. Remain calm and turn toward the direction you fell in from. Then, try to push your body against the solid ice still in front of you by kicking your feet. If the ice in front of you breaks, repeat this method until you reach ice that will support your weight. Once you are lying on the ice, do not stand. It is imperative that you roll or crawl away from the hole. This approach distributes your weight over a larger area and decreases your chances of breaking through again.

- Once you are free from danger, try to get dry and warm and seek medical attention as soon as possible.

These are just some basic guidelines for ice safety. Before departing for a day of ice fishing, or other winter sport that would require you to go on the ice, check the local ice conditions.

Official Notice Notice of Public Information Meeting Charlevoix Township

Charlevoix Township will conduct a public information meeting to discuss the need for sanitary sewers in the Pine Point Subdivision and Raspberry Lane area. The meeting will be held at 1:00 p.m. on March 10, 2001 at the Charlevoix Township Hall, 12491 Waller Road, Charlevoix, Michigan 49720.

The purpose of the meeting will be to explore the need for sanitary sewer service in the Pine Point Subdivision and Raspberry Lane area. A preliminary engineering investigation was conducted by Charlevoix Township in the spring of 2000. The findings of this investigation, including cost estimates, will be presented and residents will be given the opportunity to ask questions and express their opinions.

This is an exploratory meeting to see if support exists to initiate the process of funding and building sewers in the Pine Point Subdivision and Raspberry Lane area of the Township. We need your input to help the Township Board decide about this important matter.

Rescue demonstration

The United States Coast Guard Charlevoix Lifestation gave a demonstration of ice-rescue techniques Monday on Lake Charlevoix. Above, the rescue team pulls a "victim" from the water. (Photos by Jeremy McBain)

After a person is pulled from the icy water, they are placed in a thermal body-bag, like this one being shown by Petty Officer Jimmy Greenlee of the Charlevoix station.

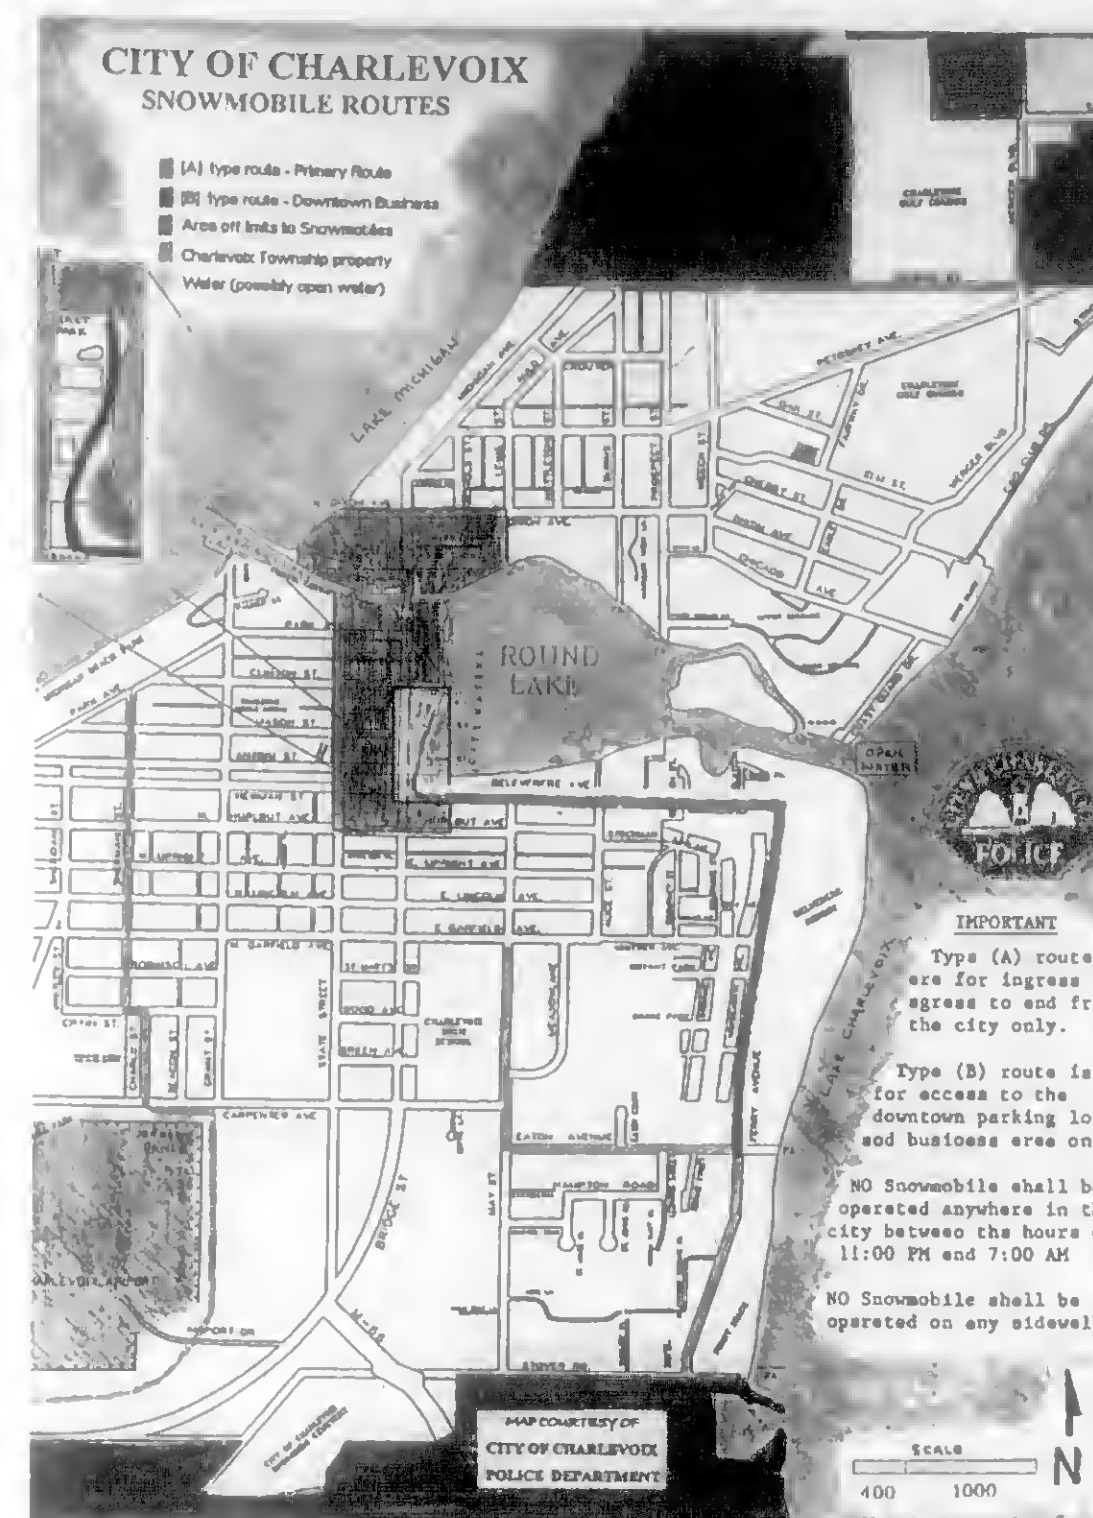

The rescuers travel by boat from the nearest launch to the scene. In this case, the nearest launch was at the station. But, to get to the person in the icy water, the rescuers must break a path for the boat.

(Right) The rescuers rush the "victim" to the shore using a sled. Once on shore, the victim will be placed in a thermal body-bag and warmed up after their icy swim. (Left) Petty Officer Jimmy Greenlee shows an ice pick he highly suggests everyone have before going on the ice. A person can use the ice pick to grip the ice as they pull themselves from the water if they fall in.

To get as close as they can to the victim, the rescuers from the Coast Guard sometime have to get out of the boat and pull it across the ice.

Snowmobiles in town criticized by residents

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix resident Shirley Gibson has been woken up repeatedly by the sound of snowmobiles racing up and down East Upright Street. She told city council that the machines are disturbing her peace and endangering residents.

State Street resident Don Seelye also came forward at the Jan. 5 council meeting and complained of city snowmobilers traveling at high rates of speed and trespassing on private property.

Complaints like those from Gibson and Seelye have led City of Charlevoix officials, residents and snowmobilers into a heated debate over the future of snowmobiles on city streets.

At the heart of the debate lies whether or not snowmobiles should be allowed to travel through town en route to a designated trail.

John Ferguson, member of the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club

Board of Directors is an advocate of allowing snow machines to be operated in city limits. He said that the club worked for seven years to get the ordinance passed and that it may be one way to generate revenue for the city during the slow winter months.

"Charlevoix is no longer a place where skiers come, so why not make it a snowmobile destination like Gaylord and Grayling," he said.

However, not everyone is enthusiastic about making Charlevoix a snowmobile destination. Many feel that city streets are not the place for snow machines.

City police chief Dennis Halverson said that the city has received between 35 and 40 complaints so far this season, not many more than in years past. However, the department has also not issued many tickets.

Low ticket volumes as compared to numerous complaints is a reflection of the difficulty the city police has in catching the violators who Halverson said, tend to flee.

Senior center not benefiting from millage

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, February 14, 2001 - PAGE 17

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A recent city budget session highlighted the fact that the Charlevoix Senior Center is not receiving funding from the recently passed senior millage, partly because the center wants to maintain its independence.

At the budget meeting, the Charlevoix city council questioned why the local senior center requested $7,000 in operational funding after county voters approved a .4 mill tax increase for senior citizens in November.

"The millage money goes toward services for the people, running the center is not considered a service. Someday, maybe we could look at that but until that time the money can't be used for that (operational funding)," Charlevoix county commissioner Shirley Roloff said.

Third ward city councilman Sherm Chamberlain said that he didn't understand when he voted in favor of the senior citizen millage that the local senior center would not reap the benefits.

"It kind of grinds me that most people who went to the polls thought the millage would help the seniors and the (Charlevoix) senior center," Chamberlain said. "You see something for the seniors and want to help out, but I learned my lesson, you have to read the fine print."

The "fine print" referred to by Chamberlain was included in the ballot language.

The ballot stated, "This proposal will permit the County of Charlevoix to levy .4 mill for the purpose of providing funds for the operation of existing programs and implementation of additional programs for the Commission on Aging in the years 2000-2003, inclusive."

The issue that both the Commission on Aging and the Charlevoix Senior Center are struggling with is how they can reach a mutually agreeable understanding.

Because the Charlevoix Senior Center is not directly affiliated with the Commission on Aging, unlike the centers in Boyne City and East Jordan, it doesn't receive funding from the senior citizen millage

"It kind of grinds me that most people who went to the polls thought the millage would help the seniors and the (Charlevoix) senior center."

Sherm Chamberlain,

City Council member upon learning the senior millage does not provide money for the senior center.

passed in November.

However, the commission has agreed to reimburse the center, $5 for every home delivered meal they distribute with a suggested donation of $2 from the recipient.

The center currently charges $3 per meal and each meal costs them $4 to prepare. Center board members said they recover the loss by sponsoring dinners and fundraisers.

However, this meal reimbursement subcontract requires an agreement between the center and the COA.

"She (Bergmann) will take over the program and reimburse us $5 per meal if we sign a piece of paper with strings attached," vice chairman of the Charlevoix Senior Center Board Richard Tunison said.

The center believes that once that in-home assessments of eligibility are required.

In the meantime, Bergmann said that because the center refuses to align itself with the COA they are not offering their meal clients other in-home services they are entitled to.

However, any Charlevoix County, eligible senior can contact Bergmann at 237-0103 to have their eligibility assessed and receive services accordingly. Programs offered include: in-home respite, homemaking service and personal care.

Bergmann said that the millage funds are being allocated properly and that eligible seniors across Charlevoix County are reaping the benefits of the programs.

Because the local center continues to depend on donations to fund their operational costs the Charlevoix city council voted Feb. 5 to continue providing $7,000 to the center.

The next Charlevoix County Commission on Aging board meeting is Feb. 26.

Space plans to be looked at by library

George Lawson, the library space needs specialist from Ames, Iowa, was back in town for the February board meeting to present his draft report to the board for last corrections.
His final report will be back shortly.

Overall, his findings state that the library presently needs to be twice the size that it is and to project 20 years down the road it needs to be three times the size that it is now.

The question of expansion or a new building will be next on the agenda.

Parking needs to be considered in Charlevoix, especially during the summer. There are city requirements regarding the amount of parking spaces required.

The next step will be to talk to the architects, Engberg-Anderson of Milwaukee, Wis. and to see how they want to fit space needs requirements to brick and mortar.

In this process the library will have design examples. The public will be invited to stop in and talk with the architects and tell them what they would like to see in an expanded or new building, and if a new building, then where they would like to see it located.

Further information regarding these meetings will be made widely available as the plans are firmed up.

Preschool programs start recruiting area children

Northwest Michigan Human Services Head Start, Char-Em Early Education Consortium Be Four programs, East Jordan Prep Program and the Women's Resource Center will be having joint recruitment activities for the Free Preschool Programs in the area.

Recruitment activities will be taking place during the months of March and April. Children ages three and four are eligible to apply, including children with special needs.

The basic goal of these programs is to encourage well-rounded development. This is accomplished through teaching health, language, self-help, socialization, large and small muscle and cognitive (thinking) skills.

Teachers, community professionals, family service staff and parents work together to meet this goal through center and home-based activities.

Those interested in applying for these preschool programs should call to make an appointment. Charlevoix and East Jordan should call 547-1602, Ellsworth and Central Lake call 544-3605 and all other areas call 347-

You will need to bring: Your child, his/her immunization record, social security numbers of all household members, medical/dental insurance or Medicaid card, your child's birth certificate and proof of income.

Some class lists will be determined in May for the fall start-up.
It is important that interested families make their appointments now.

Ordinance to be discussed in March 5 meeting at city hall

DEBATE

Park Avenue resident Linda Mason has experienced first hand the difficulty in catching ordinance violators.

"Before I can even get to the telephone they are gone. How can you keep them regulated?" she questioned.

In fact, the city has a no chase stipulation for its officers because of the risk involved in a squad car chasing a snowmobile.

Members of council discussed the possibility of the city police getting a snowmobile patrol unit, but Halverson doesn't see this as a viable option.

He cited manpower considerations — with one person on a snowmobile and one in a squad car the city police department may see some overtime and in some cases may have limited ability to enforce other laws. Halverson also looked at training and maintenance issues.

Deputy Donald Stead, snowmobile patrol with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, said that this year he has not written many tickets, but has given out about a dozen verbal warnings.

In terms of snowmobilers fleeing the scene, Stead said, "Everybody has stopped, no one has tried to run."

This reality begs the question, "Is the ordinance unenforceable?"

Halverson argues, "Enforcement with our current resources is difficult."

In response to this debate, members of city council said maybe more signs would create greater awareness among snowmobilers.

However, in Petoskey where snowmobiles are banned from city streets, signs don't even make a difference.

Petoskey city police chief and public safety director Michael Vargo said that regardless of the measures the city of Petoskey has taken to keep snowmobiles on designated trails they still venture into town.

"We've put up signs and tried to really cover the main streets with signs, but we find tracks traveling right around the signs. People use the excuse that they need gas," he said.

So, will reversing the ordinance really prove to stop snowmobilers who are abusing the ordinance and is it worth the possible revenue and recreation loss to the city?

A meeting to discuss these questions and the fate of the ordinance is scheduled to take place in city hall at 6 p.m. March 5.

Performing arts team does not make state

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After a stellar performance in regional competition at the John Glenn school in Bay City, the Charlevoix High School performing arts team returned home with high marks.

"The kids did a marvelous job but we didn't qualify for state," Charlevoix High School performing arts director, Connie Ford said.

At the regional competition the students presented a 45 minute segment of the Wizard of Oz based on the story written by L. Frank Baum. Judges awarded senior Ben Mack's a superior acting award in his role as the Scarecrow.

Seniors Kevin Evans, Keith Patrick and Melissa McDonough playing the Tinman, the Lion and Dorothy respectively, were all given excellent acting awards.

Jessie Murray was given an award for excellent puppet design and execution and Heather Kenyon was awarded excellent lobby display design.

Junior Bill Foster and sophomore Kyle Kramer were given excellent marks for their work with sound.

"We received a standing ovation at the end of our performance. As long as the audience enjoyed and appreciated what we did we are satisfied. That is what we are there for; we can't make it to state all the time," Ford said.

The team will now continue practicing and refining the specifics of the whole play which they will perform Feb. 24 and 25 at the Charlevoix High School.

Basketball team stays in first place

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports stringer

The Charlevoix Rayders extended their lead in the Lake Michigan Conference and ran their winning streak to eight by defeating conference foes Harbor Springs 88-60 and East Jordan 90-71.

Both games followed a pattern that has become familiar for the Rayders, starting slow but wearing down the opposition and finishing with a flurry.

"We played two good second halves (last week). Against Harbor in particular, I thought our intensity and focus really picked up (after halftime)," Charlevoix Coach Keith Haske noted.

The Rayders stumbled out of the blocks and trailed 19-15 at the end of the first quarter at home against Harbor Springs. The Rams extended their lead to 26-21 early in the second, but Patrick Gowell hit a jumper to cut the lead to one. Scott Parrish, the Rayders' 6 foot, 6 inch junior center, then took over scoring eight straight points giving Charlevoix the lead to stay.

The Rayders led 37-33 at the half, paced by Parrish's 17 points.

Parrish was quick out of the blocks scoring Charlevoix's first six points of the second half and at 4:35 of the third quarter, back-to-back three pointers by Jim Shepherd and Patrick Gowell bumped the lead to 51-34. The Rams got no closer than 15 the rest of the way.

Parrish had a career night with 31 points and 17 rebounds, including 11 on the offensive end. Shepherd scored 18 points, including four three-pointers and had five assists. Boss had a double-double with 10 points and 13 rebounds. Jeremiah Teuscher tallied nine points and pulled down 10 boards while point guard Gowell dished out 15 assists.

On Friday, Charlevoix traveled to East Jordan. It would prove to be largely a battle between East Jordan's big man Ken Slough and the Rayders' Twin Towers of Parrish and Boss.

Again the Rayders struggled at the start. East Jordan jumped out to a 14-6 lead with nine of their points scored by Slough. The Rayders rallied behind 10 first-quarter points by Boss, but left the floor at the first buzzer trailing 20-19. Slough had 13 in the stanza.

Slough continued to be a force for East Jordan, though, scoring their first ten points of the second quarter, as the lead seesawed back and forth. The Red Devils held a 34-32 lead before Boss grabbed an offensive board, scored on a putback and made an ensuing free throw for a three-point play to give the Rayders a 35-34 lead with 1:05 to go in the half.

Charlevoix would never trail again. There would be no quick run opening the second half to put East Jordan away as has been typical of the Rayders this year. In fact, the Red Devils closed to within two at 43-41 early in the third quarter.

Then the Rayders exploded. Parrish nailed a jumper. Teuscher hit a free throw. Shepherd buried a three-pointer. Teuscher stole a pass and fed Shepherd for a layup. Parrish made two free throws. Keith Daly grabbed an offensive rebound and scored on a putback. Following a Rafacz steal, Shepherd hit nothing but net on another three-pointer.

In that spurt, Charlevoix effectively buried East Jordan racing to a 58-41 lead with 3:30 to go in the period.

Slough didn't score again for the Red Devils until seven minutes had expired in the second half. The Rayders outscored East Jordan 33-17 during the time Slough was scoreless.

Haske said, "I was disappointed in our defense on (Slough). We did a terrible job in the first half. We talked about it at halftime and in the second half we did a better job and had a hand in his face whenever he touched the ball."

Charlevoix opened the final quarter with another spurt as its pressing defense led to five East Jordan turnovers in the first 54 seconds of play. The Rayders capitalized pulling out to a 72-49 lead, which would turn out to be their largest.

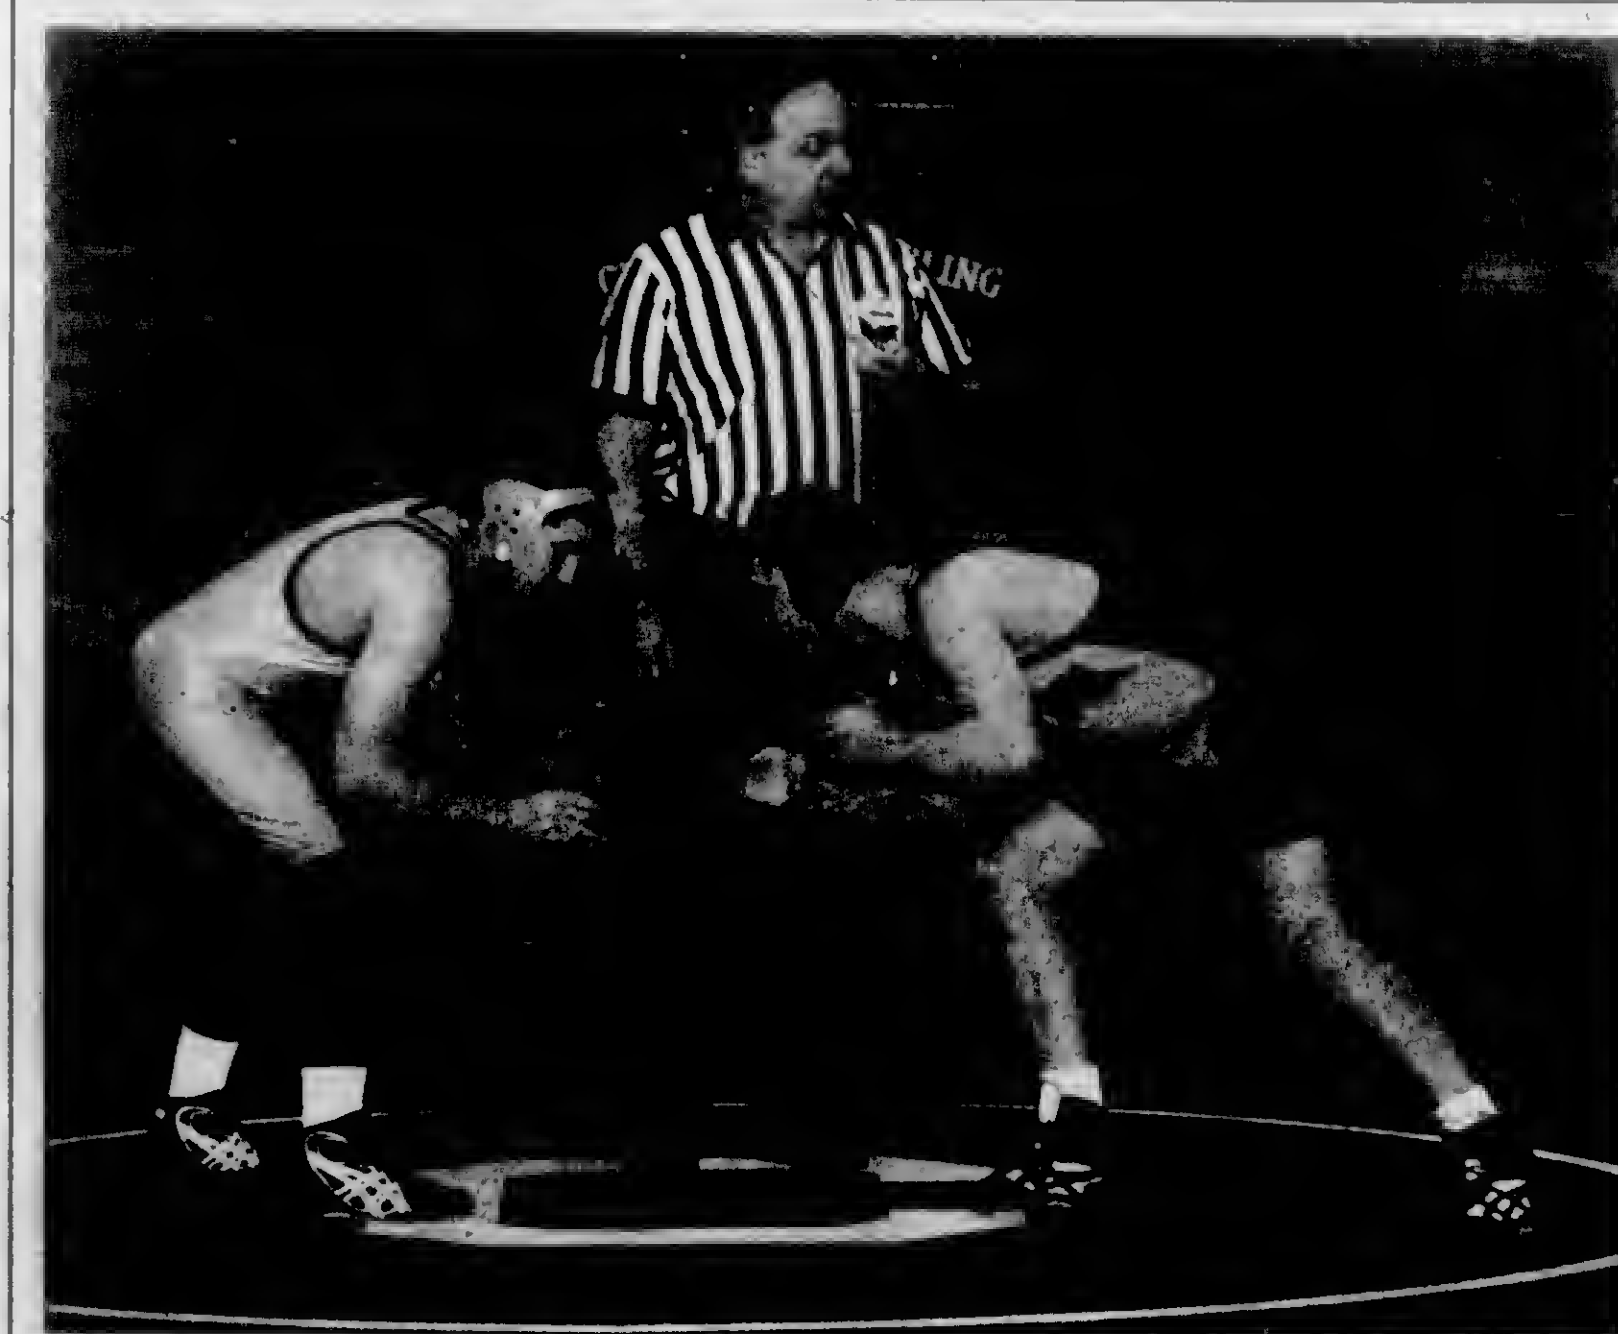

Parrish led Charlevoix scorers with 23. Boss dominated in the paint, scoring 18 points and pulling down 10 rebounds. Teuscher had 13 points while Shepherd and Daly each chipped in with 10 in a balanced Rayder effort. Slough led all scorers with 35 points. Fortunately, many were scored long after the outcome had been decided.

Despite the winning streak, Haske saw reason for concern.

"We need to come out early in the game with more focus. I don't think we're playing as hard as we should. As you come down to the end, you're concerned that it could cost you some place... In March (tournament time), you can come out flat for a half and end your season," he said.

The junior varsity also won both games in the week, beating Harbor Springs, 73-62 and East Jordan, 76-61. Todd Carey scored 14 against the Rams and 13 against the Red Devils. Brian May scored 13 against Harbor and 20 at East Jordan.

The Rayders (12-3 overall, 8-0 conference) will put their winning streak on the line Friday night as they host Elk Rapids. Charlevoix also received help in the conference race as second place Kalkaska lost to Harbor Springs giving the Rayders a two game lead in the standings with only four games to go.

Ski team finishes strong

By LAURIE LOUNSBURY
Skiing writer

The Charlevoix High School ski team delivered a one-two-three punch in their last three races, claiming two, and possibly three, first place finishes.

The team snagged a victory last Saturday at Boyne Mountain when the team finished first with 59 points, ahead of East Jordan, 72; Lake Orion, 82; Inland Lakes, 99; and Boyne City, 117.

Roscoe Serrels turned in a stellar performance, finishing first in Giant Slalom and second in slalom. Freshman York Smith also had an excellent day, finishing first in slalom and fifth in GS.

"I'm feeling very confident about our team as we head for the state regional ski meet Thursday," said coach Sue Miller. "The kids are all skiing very well, they're very focused on their goals and are working well together as a team."

Freshman Chad Johnson claimed a top 10 finish in both events, taking seventh in slalom and sixth in GS. He was followed by Lexi Wilson, who finished 18th in slalom and 19th in GS; Claas Oberbeck, who finished 21st in slalom and 26th, GS; and Mike DuPuis, who finished 20th in GS, DQ in slalom.

The team then claimed another victory at a conference meet Feb. 12, at Nub's Nob. Charlevoix finished first with room to spare, scoring 59 points, with the closest team, Traverse City-St. Francis, finishing second with 86 points. The other finishes were: Boyne City, third, with 96 points; East Jordan, fourth, with 98 points; Elk Rapids, fifth, with 138 points; and Harbor Springs, sixth, with 140 points.

Senior Troy Smith, who recently joined the high school squad, took a first place finish in slalom. Smith skied in the place of Roscoe Serrels, who incurred a minor injury in GS. Serrels is expected to be fully recovered and ready for action at the regional meet. Other finishes in the conference meet were: York Smith, third slalom, fourth GS; Chad Johnson, fourth slalom, third GS; Lexi Wilson, 17th slalom, 17th GS; Taylor Fisher, 30th slalom, 10th GS; and Anna Kate Trubilowicz, 27th GS.

After completing the conference meet, all teams then put in two more runs to complete a meet that was started last week at Schuss Mountain. The Schuss meet was canceled due to weather and poor visibility before the team skied the slalom event.

The slalom results weren't tallied by press time, but Charlevoix finished second in the GS event in the Schuss conference meet, and had strong finishes by Troy Smith, York Smith, Lexi Wilson and Taylor Fisher in slalom.

"We're really looking forward to the regional meet," Miller said. "The kids are skiing at their peak level of performance right now. It should be a very exciting race."

The team will be skiing against some of the best class B-C-D schools in the state at the regional meet at Blackjack Mountain in the Western Upper Peninsula Feb. 15. The top three schools in the region will move ahead to the state championships, which will be hosted at Boyne Mountain Feb. 26.

Volleyball team still can't put together a win

The Charlevoix lady Rayders lost a narrow 9-15, 15-6, 15-8 decision to East Jordan in conference play last week.

In the first game, East Jordan overcame an early Rayder lead and pulled ahead 8-4 before Jenny Miller served Charlevoix to six straight points and a 10-8 advantage. The Red Devils broke the streak momentarily with a sideout and point but the Rayders responded with five straight points with Michelle Martin serving to take the game 15-9.

The key points in the run were a dig by Kelly Dreyer followed by a Molly Arnold block to put Charlevoix up 11-9 and Kate Madison's shot which caught East Jordan off-guard to give the Rayders a 14-9 lead.

In game two, East Jordan came storming back, fighting off an early 1-0 Rayder lead to take an early 5-2 lead. Charlevoix didn't give up, though, as Libby Withrow's spike in support of Jenny Miller's service pulled Charlevoix to within 5-4. East Jordan reeled off eight straight points to take a 12-4 lead and it looked like it would be curtains for the Rayders in game two. Arnold had other ideas as she served Charlevoix to two straight points, highlighted by Madison's shot, cutting the lead to 12-6.

The Red Devils regrouped and scored the last three points of the game for a 15-6 win, forcing a rubber game. The Rayders jumped out to a 2-0 lead with Martin serving but East Jordan quickly recovered, scoring three straight. Arnold and Krista Swenor each had spikes with East Jordan serving to take the serve from the Red Devils but Charlevoix couldn't capitalize.

With the teams fighting for control of the game, the serve changed hands five times with the score at 4-2. Finally East Jordan broke through and reeled off six straight points for a commanding 10-2 lead. Again the Rayders refused to give up. Arnold served Charlevoix to within six at 10-4 and after a loss of serve to the Red Devils, key digs by Dreyer and Martin gave the Rayders the serve back.

Amber Parsons took advantage with a spike which was followed by an East Jordan miscue, slicing the lead to only 10-6. The Red Devils scored the next point and following two exchanges of serve, also scored three more to take a 14-6 lead.

Again the Rayders refused to quit as Dreyer responded with back-to-back service winners to trim the margin to 14-8, East Jordan. Again, a battle for control of the serve saw five sideouts, but in the end the Red Devils tacked on the clincher to take the game and match.

The Rayder junior varsity beat Harbor Springs 15-5, 15-7, 15-11. Charlevoix travels to Elk Rapids Thursday night to take on the Elks in a Lake Michigan Conference battle.

The extreme sport of ice fishing on Torch Lake

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

For many people in Charlevoix, winter does not mean an end to outdoor activities as they take up skiing, snowmobiling and many other outdoor sports.

According to Charlevoix resident Clayton Smith, this love for the outdoor in the winter has deep roots in the

Clayton Smith

Charlevoix area. Especially when it comes to ice fishing.

Smith said many of the local folks in the 1950s and 1960s loved to spend time on some of the area lakes, fishing for their dinner through the ice. One of the most notable lakes for this sport was Torch Lake.

Since the lake is so big and deep, Clayton said it would take a while for it to freeze. But, after it "smoked" at least two times — when fog is seen over the water — locals would know the winter fishing season was on.

Using chubs as bait, locals loved to go after the lake's whitefish, Smith said. And just like anglers in summertime have their favorite spots, ice fishermen were known to populate certain areas of the lake, known for their high number of fish.

Smith said some of those favorite spots included the north end of the lake at East Port, the east side of the lake and a place called the "pumphandle" near Clam River.

To stay warm on the ice, the fisherman used — and still do — ice shanties made out of cedar, covered with pace board. In the bottom of the shanty was a two foot hole providing plenty of vision into the water.

"We put the bait down and if you had fish kind of hanging around, it's like a bunch of chickens in among us," Smith said. "It was kind of fun to watch them."

Since the winds were pretty harsh on the lake, it was vital that the shanty was secured to the ice. If it wasn't, Smith said, a shanty could be blown to pieces.

Fishing hours were generally pretty late; they started at 5 p.m. and would stay out on the ice until 1 or even 2 a.m. To stay warm, the shanties had a coal or wood-burning stove in them.

However, the warmth of the stove caused a problem for Smith on one occasion.

He said in the 1960s a friend of his wanted to go fishing in March. So the two of them ventured out on the ice to a spot Smith had been fishing for about four or five weeks.

What they did not know was the heat from the stove in the shanty over the time Smith had been fishing that spot had melted all of the ice under it.

As the two men got into the shanty, it fell through the ice, Smith said. Luckily, it stopped sliding through the ice for a few moments, just long enough for Smith and his friend — who were both wet — to get out.

Knowing he would get in trouble with his wife, Smith did not tell her about the incident when he got home. However, his friend called to tell Smith he left his hat in the shanty, thereby blowing his cover.

But, shanties were not always used for ice fishing on Torch Lake, Smith added, neither was the idea of just sitting around waiting for the fish. Sometimes when the ice was just right and about one to two inches thick, the locals would grab their ice skates and wrangle the fish.

Smith said they would skate around on the ice, which was very clear, and look for schools of whitefish. Once a school was found, the skaters would chase them to open water, where another man was waiting with a spear.

He added, since the ice was so thin and would bow under a man's weight, it would feel like you were skating up hill all the time.

And, as you may have guessed, many fishermen came home very wet after this outing. But, Smith said, the group was ready when one of them would fall through the ice and would immediately throw ropes to them and pull them out.

These ice fishermen on Torch Lake were a determined bunch and would not even let a little thing like spring stop them from their sport. Smith said many times he fished up to April 15.

At this time of the year, the ice breaks up along the edge of the lake. However, Smith said it was easy to step over this open water to the ice and then walk out to your fishing spot.

Of course, this open water presented problems when the fishermen would want to get their shanty off the ice.

Smith said one time they had to cut a big block of ice, push it to the edge of the ice and into the open water. This gave them a temporary bridge to slide the shanty off the ice.

So, as you snowboard or ski down the mountains this winter thinking you are taking part in an extreme winter sport, remember, somewhere out there is an ice fisherman who may be more extreme than you.

Ski team going to state finals

By LAURIE LOUNSBURY

Thirteen schools battled it out at the class B-C-D regional ski meet in Ironwood, to see who would win a berth to the state championships. When the powder snow settled, it was Iron Mountain, Petoskey and Charlevoix boys' ski teams that earned the top three spots.

Iron Mountain was strong, fast and deep, taking first place with 65 points, followed by Petoskey, with 79 points, and Charlevoix, 150.

"It was a really challenging race, and our boys and Lexi had to stay right on top of their game to finish in the top three," said coach Sue Miller. "I'm really proud of the effort they put forth. Iron Mountain and Petoskey were incredibly strong, and both East Jordan and Kingsford were breathing down our necks, aiming for that third place spot."

In the slalom event, Troy Smith finished in third place, while his younger brother York Smith followed close behind with a fifth place finish. Chad Johnson finished 15th, Lexi Wilson finished 41st, and Taylor Fisher finished 49th. Both Wilson and Fisher had some trouble with the steep pitch on the lower section of the slalom course and had to hike. Roscoe Serrels lost a ski about one-third of the way through the slalom course and could not finish the race.

In giant slalom, York Smith had another top 10 finish, claiming ninth place. Other Charlevoix finishes in GS were: Chad Johnson, 17th; Roscoe Serrels, 19th; Taylor Fisher, 38th; and Lexi Wilson, 41st. Troy Smith had trouble on his first GS run and had to hike. He did not finish his second run after incurring a minor injury.

When the score was tallied on the conference meet hosted at Nub's Nob last week, Charlevoix boys' ski team again came out on top. The team claimed first place with a total of 71 points. Traverse City St. Francis was in second place with 91 points; East Jordan, third, 107 points; Boyne City, fourth, 109 points; Harbor Springs, fifth, 126 points; and Elk Rapids, sixth, 141 points.

The conference champion will be determined at the final conference meet which starts at 3 p.m. today at Nub's Nob.

The state class B-C-D final meet will be hosted by Charlevoix at Boyne Mountain Feb. 26.

City compromises on platform plan

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Good old fashioned compromise brought the battle between Park Avenue residents and city officials to a cease fire.

"Our staff had a meeting and looked at the situation and what happens over there (the city-owned land off of Park Avenue). We saw that a walkway area might better suit the area," city manager Mike Wiesner said. "After reviewing the neighbors' letter we found that they would also be better satisfied by that (walkway) too."

The two camps took a second hike around the site on Monday. At the meeting, city planner Gerry Harsch distributed the revised plan.

Michigan Beach renovations once included plans to build a viewing platform on the city-owned land which used to be the site of a water tower.

Residents voiced their concerns surrounding the platform idea including the possibility of kids drinking at the location, the platform itself splitting up the natural layout of the neighborhood and a possible breach in their privacy.

City officials came up with a revised plan that will allow all residents and visitors to utilize the property, and according to those that attended the meeting, would be agreeable to the parcel's surrounding neighbors.

The new plan will remove the parking that currently exists at the bottom of the slope of land on the Park Avenue side and will integrate a wood chipped trail system. The topography of the land itself is somewhat steep so the plans include wooden stairs where needed, a maximum of three at any location.

The city also plans to capitalize on this steep topography by using the hill face as a sledding destination.

Those not looking for an intense hike, but instead searching out a spot to soak in the surroundings will have that opportunity — benches will be placed along the route.

Many said that street lighting at the site of the proposed trail system would be too bright and would infiltrate homes. The new plan allows for bollard low level lighting around steps and seating areas.

Charlevoix's history will also be celebrated at the site.

Charlevoix High School Winterfest court named

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The 2001 Charlevoix High School Winterfest court is full of talented, accomplished seniors all gearing up for a bright future.

Kevin Adams, Troy Smith, Matt "Boots" Smith, Will Wright, John Kilkenny and Ethan Phillips are the 2001 perspective Winterfest kings.

Kevin Evans, 17, son of Ed and Marlene Evans likes to spend time "hanging with friends" and working with computers. In his time out of the classroom, Kevin is also busy with both the performing arts and track teams, the band and student council. Following graduation, Kevin plans to attend Michigan Technological University majoring in Computer Engineering.

Matt "Boots" Smith, 17, grandson of Gwen Monroe, enjoys "hanging with friends of Hawkeye Studios." Smith plans to attend North Central Michigan College in Petoskey following graduation.

Will Wright, 17, son of George and Michalene Wright is a busy student. Wright enjoys listening to music, "chilling with friends," snowboarding, playing bass guitar and skateboarding. After graduation, Will plans to attend college, go on to graduate school and eventually live in the south.

John Kilkenny, 18, is a member of both the Charlevoix High School football and baseball teams. When he is not busy on the field and the diamond, he enjoys snowboarding and "Jeepin'." After finishing up high school, Kilkenny plans to attend Ferris State University with a focus on automotive studies.

Ethan Phillips, 17, is a driven student who, like his fellow royalty, enjoys hanging out with his friends, traveling and listening to music. His travels recently met with his studies, landing him in a Swedish exchange student program. After graduation, Phillips can be found in Chicago, Ill. where he'll be attending Columbia College studying political science and the mass media.

These candidates have big plans, but what's a king without a queen? Emily Stoner, Shawna Flowers, Leslie Hoffman, Shannon Nystrom, Michelle Martin and Molly Arnold are the 2001 winter queen hopefuls.

Emily Stoner, 17, is involved in the high school's performing arts program, tutoring, student council and the National Honor Society. Stoner plans to continue her education at Central Michigan University where she will study elementary education.

Shawna Flowers, 17, daughter of Raymond and Vickie Flowers is captain of the varsity cheerleading squad and a member of the varsity softball team, the high school band and the National Honor Society. When she is not busy with all of the extracurricular activities, Flowers enjoys painting, drawing and hiking. After graduation, she plans to attend Kendall or Northern Michigan University in Marquette. She said that in the future she would like to be an interior designer but her, "true dream" is to sell her art council secretary/treasurer. Outside of the high school she is cultivating her dance talents at the Dance Arts Academy in Traverse City. After graduation, Shannon is headed south to Tennessee where she plans on attending either Belmont or Vanderbilt universities.

Michelle Martin, 17, daughter of C.T. and Francie Martin is a team player. Michelle is a member of both the volleyball and tennis teams. When she is not at practice or a match, she is busy hanging out with friends, snowboarding, boating or jet skiing.

Shannon Nystrom, 18, daughter of Jim and Diane Nystrom is a talented student who has studied the arts. Shannon is a drum major in the high school band, is a member of the National Honor Society and is student

OPINIONS

Cabin fever, our rights and island heroes

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

The winter blahs have found me kicking around a few thoughts. So, I thought I would share a few with the readers.

Cabin fever

The other day I was reminded just how long winter is in northern Michigan.

While watching the weather channel, hoping desperately for a change from snowy to tropical, I noticed the temperatures taking a sudden plunge downward. I was struck with the realization that winter in northern Michigan has a long and healthy life.

The problem is, I am already bouncing off the walls in my apartment and driving my wife nuts. I even started trying to stack little houses out of decks of cards as a hobby. I am also enjoying the many hours I spend working in the office of the Charlevoix Courier, rather than go outside.

I am in the midst of a full-blown case of cabin fever.

So, rather than let the mind altering condition make me do something silly — like putting on a bathing suit and sunglasses, going to the beach and trying to get a snowtan — I thought I would appeal to the readers. I am looking for a cure for cabin fever, send your suggestions to me at the Charlevoix Courier.

The best ones will be highlighted in my column on this page two weeks from now.

The Bill of Rights

I received a nice phone call from a reader the other day about a recent column I wrote on my love of the First Amendment — yes, I know there is a letter to the editor in this week arguing people should not be totally free to express themselves or speak out, specifically if it is offensive to others — as is burning a flag. But, the beautiful thing about the First Amendment is the letter writer has a right to voice their opinion and, since this is the free press, they have somewhere to have it published.

Back to the phone call: The reader wanted to let me know that they enjoyed the column and agreed that the government should stop trying to take away the freedoms given to all citizens of the United States in the Bill of Rights. Only, this person added he thought I should have pointed out the government was trying to take away a lot more rights than just those in the First Amendment. He specifically pointed out the attacks to the Second Amendment.

I agree. The Bill of Rights is a sacred document for this country. Without these freedoms, we would be living in a totalitarian society.

Imagine being imprisoned if you say something someone finds offensive, being forced to observe only one religion, having to submit to police searches for no reason, being imprisoned for wanting to protect your family by having a firearm or not having the ability to vote if you are a woman or minority.

Every amendment in it is vital to the freedoms we enjoy as Americans. It is not something that should be changed according to the political or social fashion of the day.

I am passionate about my love for the Bill of Rights and I will fight for every freedom given in it, even if it means someone is offended.

Beaver Island heroes

In this last thought, I wanted to commend a group of people living on Beaver Island for their efforts in saving the lives of the four survivors of a plane crash last week.

You may have heard all about the plane crash, it was pretty much the only thing the local television stations were reporting last week and was on the front pages of many northern Michigan newspapers, including this one. I even saw one television station using their coverage for their promotional spots.

The television news program proudly proclaimed, "We were the first on the scene...We were the first to bring you the news...Look how great we are!" Talk about vultures.

But, there was a story that many of them were missing: The effort being put forth by the residents of Beaver Island to find the downed plane and its occupants.

The weather the day of the search, Feb. 9, was so bad, the Coast Guard was forced to keep its helicopters on the ground and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office was stuck on the mainland, with just one deputy on the island, Mark Russell.

However, the islanders teamed up with this deputy, jumped on snowmobiles and started searching the island.

Additionally, Paul Welke, of Island Airways, hopped in his plane — remember, the weather was very bad at this time — and flew over a section of island he had a "hunch" about. His hunch was correct and he saw one of the survivors on the ground waving a lifejacket.

Eventually, rescuers found four survivors — a mother and her three children: Mirth Gault, 43, Alec, 5, Emma, 9, and Adam, 13.

I salute the hard work of the residents of Beaver Island. Also I would like to commend every other rescuer — from the Sheriff to the Coast Guard — who also worked tirelessly to try to find the plane.

You all are true heroes.

Keep Coast Guard in Charlevoix

Editor:

It was most disturbing to read recently of the possibility of losing the Acacia and even more disturbing at the prospect of not having any Coast Guard ship at all in Charlevoix's harbor.

I am a native of Charlevoix and for many years have felt prideful over the fact that Charlevoix was chosen to house a Coast Guard ship. The ship along with its families have been a real asset to this community. It has been a privilege to be able to learn first-hand about the tasks a ship of this nature performs and the ships of Charlevoix have many excellent performances to boast of. I can't imagine our harbor without it. It is a piece of Charlevoix's history I would really hate to see go. Charlevoix's location seems to be well thought out as a need for such a ship, with the emergencies and buoy tending it takes care of.

I hope that the Cleveland office will study this location long and hard before making a decision to remove the ship. I can see a real need for its physical presence here, as a vessel of great importance.

Charlevoix prepared for the Coast Guard presence in this community in its waterfront renovations allowing for a larger vessel, should that happen. This is a community that cares about the Coast Guard and what it stands for. I am very proud of the ships and all the men who have served here. It is my hope that the Coast Guard can always call this port their home.

Writers agree with past letter

Editor:

We would like to agree with Kali Crain's Feb. 14 letter to the editor regarding her interest in saving the middle school. Kali's forward thinking and suggestions are a fresh change to the tear down and start over mentality that destroys the architectural integrity of a community.

Too many people are all too eager to tear down and rebuild buildings that appear to be obsolete because of their age. Rehabilitation of old buildings require compromises and costs, which sometimes equal to the destruction and rebuild of a new facility, yet we must all recognize their architectural and significant historical value.

To "reuse" these buildings, as Kali recommends, would preserve the charm and atmosphere which Charlevoix residents and visitors have enjoyed for years. There are several successful models in which communities have rehabilitated old structures to meet stringent building codes and use requirements. It is the responsibility of city planners and community members to thoroughly investigate and exhaust every option to "reuse" this structure.

Kudos to Kali for caring about Charlevoix's future!

Control pollution

Editor:

I am a student at the Charlevoix Middle School. I think that pollution is getting out of hand. If we don't try to stop it, the human race could be demolished.

One thing we could do is clean up our town. First of all, we should pick up all the garbage that just lies on the ground. We should also plant more trees.

Another thing we could do is change our major power sources. For instance, we could use windmills instead of polluting fossil fuels. That would keep the air cleaner.

We should also consider the global warming. Because of it, average temperatures rise approximately one degree Fahrenheit per year. That might not seem like much, but think about what it's going to be like in the next 20 to 30 years. With that rising temperature, the polar ice caps could melt in the near future.

Think about it. Maybe you'll consider doing something, because this is a real problem!

Help the animals

Editor:

I am a sixth grader in Charlevoix Middle School. I have many problems as a kid such as homework, chores or even getting the book report done that is due tomorrow. But when I put that all behind me I think of animals. And how millions of them are killed each day by cars, starving and mostly by being homeless. So why can't we have an animal shelter in Charlevoix?

There is only one animal shelter in Boyne City. Some owners don't want to go to an out of town animal shelter just to drop off their pet. So they might put their pet on the street instead. If people leave their pet on the street, that would mean there would be more homeless, poor animals on the street.

The questions I have about this subject are: Where will you keep animals found? If people find the animals and let them go again they will probably end up dead. Also what does the city do with the bodies of dead animals? If you let that happen, what will tourists think of Charlevoix?

If you keep an animal shelter out of Charlevoix things could change like Charlevoix could have dead or injured animals on the streets. Now I am asking you do we want that to happen to our pets, or have them found and taken care of? Please consider my opinions.

Wedding

VanGuilder — Dik

Amy Noel VanGuilder, of Charlevoix, and Bryan Jay Dik, of Minneapolis, Minn., were married July 15, 2000 at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix in front of about 250 guests.

Amy is the daughter of Dennis and Dianne VanGuilder of Charlevoix. Bryan is the son of the Rev. Jack and Sandra Dik of Holland.

The Rev. Ross Winters of Charlevoix, and the bride's grandfather, and the Rev. Jack Dik, the groom's father, performed the double ring rites. The couple wrote their own vows.

The bride wore a pearl white gown, made of matte satin, with a lace cut-out back. The A-line dress was decorated with antique lace and miniature pearls on the bodice and along the edge of the bottom and train. The veil was made by the bride's mother.

The bride carried a bouquet of ivory and purple roses, lisianthus, sweet peas, mini calla lilies, delphinium, wild herbs and greens.

Music was provided by Marjorie Turner on organ, Ken Zylstra on trumpet, Lisa Nibbelink on French horn, Cory Hugen on piano, singing by the Hall family from Minneapolis, Minn. and even a song by the couple.

The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Jessica VanGuilder. Bridesmaids were: Kerrie and Rachel Dik, the groom's sisters; Kari Jo Boss, Tiffany (Karczmarski) Evans and Dana Stoel, friends of the bride. They wore two-piece gowns in orchid satin with embroidered flowers on the bodice.

The flower girl was Alyssa Danigelis, the bride's cousin. The ring bearer was Anders Danigelis, the bride's cousin.

The best man was Chris Kuipers, a friend of the groom. The groomsmen were: Ben VanGuilder, the bride's brother; Matt Schlimm, Craig Bierenga and Zach VanDenberg, friends of the groom; and Eric Westra, the groom's cousin.

Nate Martin and Eric Vandembosch, friends of the bride and groom, were ushers.

A reception for the couple was given at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Petoskey.

After the wedding the couple went to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico for a vacation.

The have made their home in Minneapolis, Minn.

Let your 'light box' be Christ this winter

By FR. JIM GUNN
Rector, Christ Episcopal Church

I'm sure that it would be belaboring the obvious to state that we have had quite a gray and dreary winter so far ... but I will state it anyway!

I personally find that weather like we've been having tends to make me depressed. I understand that it works somewhat that way for many people, but it seems to work particularly strongly with me.

I have not been formally diagnosed but I suspect that I suffer from some degree of the malady they call Seasonal Affective Disorder (I think they carefully chose that name since the first letters spell SAD).

That is why my wife just bought me a "light box."

It is a fairly flat rectangular metal box with two special light bulbs inside it and a special plastic light-diffusing sheet on one side. I do not understand the underlying principle — except for the obvious fact that it gives you bright light. You sit in front of it for a period of time while you're reading or relaxing or something. If you do that on a regular basis, it is supposed to elevate your mood and relieve the winter doldrums.

I have only used it for a couple of days so far, but I do believe that it is going to help.

As I was thinking about writing

Beacons of Blessing

this letter — just after I got my light box — it struck me that what I've been describing is a good analogy for our state in the world. Although it is God's creation, the world has been broken and twisted by sin and it is full of the darkness of disobedience and unbelief. It can be a very depressing place to be if we perceive that darkness and sense its effect on our life.

What we need is a "light box" and that is Jesus.

The life-giving nature of that light is pointed out to us by John in the first chapter of his Gospel (vs. 4-5, 9-13): "In him was life, and that life was the light of men. The light shines in the darkness, but the darkness has not understood it. The true light that gives light to every man was coming into the world. He was in the world, and though the world was made through him, the world did not recognize him. He came to that which was his own, but his own did not receive him. Yet to all who received him, to those who believed in his name, he gave the right to become children of God — children born not of natural descent, nor of human decision or a husband's will, but born of God."

Seven chapters later (Chapter 8, v. 12) Jesus speaks of himself in those same terms: "When Jesus spoke again to the people, he said, 'I am the light of the world. Whoever follows me will never walk in darkness, but will have the light of life.'"

We need to spend time in the presence of the one who shines forth the light of life. To my mind that indicates that we need to spend time in church and in fellowship with other Christians.

Jesus did promise us that, "Where two or three come together in my name, there am I with them."

I will close this article with one more small piece of Holy Scripture and the prayer that these words might urge you to spend time in the presence of the "light box" of the world, Jesus Christ, our Lord.

This quote from Chapter 4, Verses 4-6 of the Second Letter to the Corinthians is one way Paul describes that which God does through Jesus: "The god of this age has blinded the minds of unbelievers, so that they cannot see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God. For we do not preach ourselves, but Jesus Christ as Lord, and ourselves as your servants for Jesus' sake. For God, who said, 'Let light shine out of darkness,' made his light shine in our hearts to give us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Christ."

Ransom remembered for helping many youths

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix recently lost 87-year-old Belvedere resident Christiana Lutz Ransom, a citizen that embodied the essence of selflessness and left her mark of generosity on the lives of many.

"She was as much a good friend to people in Michigan, at Warren Wilson College and in Florida as you can imagine. She was special, generous and truly remarkable," said Rodney Lytle, Christiana's long-time friend and building supervisor at Warren Wilson College in Swannanoa, N.C.

Christiana was born Oct. 3, 1913 in Philadelphia, Pa. to Major Charles Lutz and Priscilla Seelye. Her father was a military aviator and a winner of the Curtiss Air Trophy.

Maybe it was the time Christiana spent in Haiti as a child that sparked her keen sense of cultural awareness beckoning her to travel, to discover and also to dedicate herself to making sure others had the opportunity to discover.

Christiana funded exchange students from Africa, Singapore and Malaysia to come to Charlevoix and to attend Warren Wilson College where she was a trustee. Lytle said that after graduation, she would organize a celebration for the exchange students, in some cases even housing their families.

Her adulthood was filled with student sponsorships in the United States as well as those abroad. In fact, Charlevoix resident Marvin Withoef, along with many others, attended Warren Wilson College with Christiana's financial support.

"She was very generous, I can't begin to tell you how many kids she put through college. Her door was always open; that's just kind of the way she was," Withoef said.

In Charlevoix she would host Sunday evening Bible study and on the Warren Wilson campus she would have teas at her on-campus home inviting all who wished to attend.

Christiana was not only an important public figure, but was also a loving mother of four and wife of the late Woodbury Ransom for 46 years.

Christiana's son Charles "Chip" Allen Ransom also preceded her in death. In memory of her son, she and her husband co-founded CHIP Counseling Center in Charlevoix and also put 80 acres of land in Hayes Township into a nature preserve called the Charles Allen Ransom Nature Preserve.

Christiana is survived by three of her children; Woodbury Seelye Ransom of Lansing, Iowa, Priscilla Ransom McDougall of Stillwater, Minn. and Myron P. Boon of Swannanoa, N.C., her eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Throughout her life she promoted spiritual and personal growth. She gave hope to students without the resources to go to college, promoted land preservation, ministered at prisons, supported animal adoption efforts and gave local teens battling substance abuse a safe place to go.

Although Christiana passed away Feb. 8 in Chicago, Ill. her legacy, accomplishments and memory will continue to thrive.

New petunia addition to light poles in downtown Charlevoix

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix's famous petunias may be seen hanging high over the city this spring thanks to a proposal by Keep Charlevoix Beautiful to the Downtown Development Authority (DDA) at the authority's Feb. 14 meeting.

The group proposed purchasing hanging baskets for all of the light poles in downtown Charlevoix and filling them with petunias in the spring. The baskets would be attached about 13 feet up to the light poles by strong metal brackets and would hang on the sidewalk side of the poles.

Keep Charlevoix Beautiful wants the DDA to pay for the brackets and the watering of the petunias in the spring and summer.

According to DDA member Dan

Barron, the authority has agreed to the concept of the hanging petunias, but has requested more information on the cost. He expects Keep Charlevoix Beautiful to be back before the authority very soon.

"They are hoping to try to implement this whole project by this spring," Barron said.

The initial cost of the brackets proposed by Keep Charlevoix Beautiful would come to as much as $12,000. However, Barron said, this cost could be greatly lowered if the group uses a local supplier, which they are looking into.

Estimated costs for watering the petunias in the baskets for seven days a week for a total of 18 weeks is $3,402, according to Charlevoix street superintendent John Martin.

The liability for the baskets will be with the city. Therefore, if something happens where a basket falls and causes any damage, the city would be responsible.

But, according to Mary Adams, of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, the brackets holding these baskets to the poles are very strong. She said she has had the same kind at her home for many years and high winds do nothing to them.

She added that a strong wind blew over a 100 year old oak tree in her yard a while back, but a flower basket that was hooked to the tree stayed firmly attached.

"I have had my hanging baskets for 15 years and haven't had to replace them," Adams said.

The city has had flower baskets hanging from its light poles in the past. They were taken down in the late 1970s, however neither Martin or City Manager Mike Wiesner could determine why.

A memorial service for Jean will be Feb. 24 at 1 p.m. at Independence Village in Petoskey. The Rev. David Behling will officiate.

Jean was born Oct. 23, 1920 in Detroit, the daughter of Lawrence and Ruth (Rowe) Montgomery. She grew up in Detroit and Fonda Lake and attended high school at Wester High School in Detroit.

YOUR HEALTH

Your dentist can be a teacher

John Merrill, DDS

'Your health'

My last article focused on the "evils" of dental amalgam — those mercury laced fillings that most of us over the age of 20 grew up with.

Most dental experts agree that their use should be declining, many would say that amalgam fillings no longer have a place in modern dentistry. I urge you to ask your dentist what his opinion is — most of us have very strong opinions on this subject, one way or the other.

In this day of technology, what are your choices to rebuild a broken or decayed tooth?

We often start with two categories of treatment options — short-term or long-term. Depending on the strength and support remaining in the tooth, a bonded tooth-colored composite filling may last anywhere from two to 10 years. This is considered a short-term restoration.

Long-term restorations should last from five years to 30 years or even longer. These materials are usually fabricated at a dental laboratory and then cemented or bonded as a precision fit to your teeth. They are generally composed of porcelain, high-strength composites, or gold.

Fees for these services have a wide range depending on your dentist's experience and expertise, the materials he selects, the time involved, the lab technician, even the levels of advanced training your dentist and his staff have attained.

With modern dentistry it can be a challenge to know what you really want and which treatment is in your best interest.

Today's dentist has so many options for you, it may take a consultation visit for you to properly make the best decision.

Many of us may want to keep it simple and make our decision based solely on cost. But the decision that is most critical is what treatment is the best choice for you.

It is important to spend no more than is necessary, but it is most important to receive the treatment that best fits your wants and needs, as well as your pocket-book.

A picture is worth a thousand words. The majority of dentists today offer some form of close-up photography or computer imaging for their patients. This technology allows you to actually see that they see and better assess what your best options may be.

The original meaning behind the word "doctor" is "teacher." The challenge for today's dentist is to stay abreast of rapidly advancing technologies. The greater challenge can often be to go back to our roots and consult and teach our patients many of the wonderful options available to them.

So, I urge you, take good care of yourself.

Get all of the information you need to make the best choices for you.

Everybody is different; no one is the same. That includes you and it also includes your capable and conscientious dentist.

John A. Merrill, DDS, can be contacted by calling 547-9141 or by visiting his office located at 06483 M-66 Highway North in Charlevoix.

It may be more than those winter blues bugging you

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix residents beware — the long, cold, gray winter months in northern Michigan can trigger a nasty case of the winter blues.

Feeling tired and unmotivated? Are bags of potato chips disappearing in your home?

What is making you sleep a lot and eat carbohydrates in mass may actually be a classified form of depression called seasonal affective disorder (SAD) or subsyndromal SAD.

Dr. Steve Young with Little Traverse Psychiatric Associates in Petoskey said recent studies show that between 1 and 2 percent of people in the United States suffer from the disorder.

"The more important thing is that a higher percentage of the population suffers to a lesser degree from seasonal affective disorder," Young said. "They (mild SAD sufferers) find that in the winter their energy levels are lower, they are less motivated and socially outgoing and they may experience weight gain."

However these mild sufferers are still able to function normally unlike people with SAD who suffer to the extreme.

The cause of SAD is unknown, however many doctors believe a lack of sunlight may be the culprit. A rule of thumb with SAD is the more it's gray, the more your mood will pay.

Theories look at the body's melatonin and serotonin levels and bodily rhythms as possibly being affected by decreased exposure to sunlight.

Dr. Young said that SAD is most prevalent in teens to those in their 50s and is two times more likely to surface in females than in males.

Fear not, freedom from these feelings may be just a stroll outdoors away. It is easy to hibernate in the winter in northern Michigan, but the mental cost outweighs the annoyance of cold fingertips and toes.

Some tips on relieving the symptoms of SAD

SAD

Some of you may work in poorly lit offices or because it is only light in the afternoon you may leave home for work in the dark and return to the dark. This dark work environment may be causing your dark mood.

Many shy away from synthetic remedies for depression. For those not interested in synthetic mood lifters, Dr. Young advises using light therapy.

Light therapy involves exposure to fluorescent bulbs installed in a box with a plastic diffusion screen. You set the box on a desk or table and basically sit in front of it for anywhere from 15 minutes to three hours once or twice a day depending on the severity of the condition.

There are also some herbal treatments out there that have been shown to lessen the symptoms.

Gloria Bucco, of Longmont, Colo. is an independent journalist and communications consultant who specializes in natural health issues. In an article published in the January 1998 edition of Herbs for Health Magazine Bucco highlighted a dozen herbal "blues-chasers."

Some of those included are valerian, lavender, hops and gotu kola.

So, if you are sleeping a lot, over eating, gaining weight and have noticed that these issues occur in accordance with the winter and autumn seasons, recognize that you made be a SAD sufferer and that there are treatments out there.

A few herbal remedies for the winter blues

Below are some herbs Gloria Bucco recommends that may help bring some normalcy back into the gray days of winter.

On her website, www.qualitycounts.com/fp/gloriabucco.html Bucco cautions that while some herbs are more gentle than pharmaceuticals, users must still be cautious and check with their health-care provider or a trained herbologist.

Statements of caution and recommended dosages are available at the site.

Four sedative and anti-anxiety herbs are listed below.

• Hops help reduce the smooth-muscle spasms that accompany feelings of tension and stress acting as an herbal anxiety treatment.

• Valerian, a popular sedative in Europe, has been hailed an herbal sleep aid.

• Lavender is used externally in massage and bath oil or in scented candles to have a calming effect.

• Passion flower has been used for centuries to treat nervous tension, anxiety and insomnia. Animal studies have shown passion-flower relieves spasms, eases anxiety and lowers blood pressure.

Below are four anti-fatigue herbs that may help fight off the winter blahs.

• Gotu kola has been shown to depress the central nervous system to help overcome stress and fatigue.

• Licorice has been traditionally recommended to stimulate adrenal glands and to treat fatigue.

• Schisandra is used to treat insomnia and physical exhaustion.

• Siberian ginseng reportedly improves feelings of well-being in depressed people.

Below are two herbal anti-depressants Bucco recommends.

• Ginkgo increases circulation to the brain.

• St. John's wort has been shown to relieve anxiety, depression and feelings of worthlessness.

Below are two tension relieving and anti-anxiety herbs.

• Kava-kava is popular in the Pacific Islands and has been used for centuries for relaxation, relief of stress and anxiety and to induce sleep.

• Lemon balm was used to drive away melancholy in colonial America. Many modern herbalists recommend lemon balm if you suffer from SAD because of its calming effect.

The plans highlight landscaping the hilltop offering visitors information on the history of the site, the signal tower and geological information.

There will also be a navigational compass identifying the compass points and the significance of the general area with regard to marine activities.

Many had also voiced concerns surrounding the preservation of the natural integrity of the site.

Harsch explained that the new plan limits tree and brush removal to dead or dying trees and to those under 4 inches in diameter at the base.

Wiesner said the city will present the new plan at a public hearing to be scheduled after the amendment to the DNR lease, excluding the hillside property from the DNR lease, has been completed. He was unable to estimate a meeting date.

Charlevoix High School to celebrate 'spirit week'

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

WARNING — if you see Charlevoix High School students dressed like cowboys and cowgirls on Feb. 26 don't be alarmed. Charlevoix is not reverting back to the days of the old west...it's just spirit week.

To gear up for weekend Winterfest activities, Charlevoix High School will have theme dress days from Feb. 26 through March 2.

On Feb. 27 students will dress in their class colors. Freshmen will cover themselves in yellow, sophomores in orange, juniors in winter's best friend — gray — and seniors in blue.

Then, on Feb. 28 kids will search their medicine cabinets and bathrooms for ACE bandages and band aids for "fake an injury day."

On March 1 arms in slings along with students' other faux wounds will be swapped for leis and tropical prints when high school students dream of warmer days and show their spirit Hawaiian style.

Spirit week will peak March 2 when students drag out all the maroon and white they can find in preparation for Friday's home basketball game, when the Rayders will face Traverse City St. Francis.

Students and staff have planned a pre-game rally for the team scheduled to take place at 1 p.m. in the high school gym. Alumni and community members are invited to join this Winterfest assembly.

Winterfest royalty will be crowned by 2000 king John Hughson and queen Winter Kyvik at halftime of the Charlevoix-Traverse City game.

March 3 marks the end of Winterfest fun — both students and alumni are invited to attend the dance from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. at the elementary school located at 13513 Division Street.

Seventeen students from the Northwest Academy music department attended the District II MSBOA Solo and Ensemble event Feb. 10 in Harbor Springs. Nine received excellent ratings and superior ratings. Students to create 'Oz' on Charlevoix school stage

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The soft, melodic sound of Judy Garland singing "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" in the enchanting classic, "The Wizard of Oz" is forever etched in the minds of many.

Now, the Charlevoix performing arts team has chosen to bring the classic, "The Wizard of Oz," to the Charlevoix stage.

Team director Connie Ford said the students picked the play because the characters, created by writer L. Frank Baum, stretch the acting mold.

"The kids chose it because they wanted to do something different and challenging — something other than straight forward characters," she said.

Ford added the performers have worked very hard to ready both the set and themselves to create an unforgettable show.

"This (The Wizard of Oz) is a good, clean, enjoyable show that will be entertaining for both adults and children," she said.

The team is made up of 65 thespians looking forward to entertaining audiences during two performances.

Performances are scheduled to take place at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 24 and at 2:30 p.m. Feb. 25 in the Charlevoix High School gym.

Performing arts publicity chair, Sue Bartlett said that she expects the performance to span about one and a half hours.

Tickets are available now in the front office at the high school — $5 for adults and $3 for students.

The Wicked Witch appears before Dorothy (in the foreground), proclaiming she will get her revenge for the death of her sister. The witch is played by Candice Boss. Dorothy is played by Melissa McDonough. The play will be at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 24 and 2:30 p.m. Feb. 25. (Courtesy photo)

Basketball team wins, ties for the championship title

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports stringer

The Charlevoix Rayders won their ninth straight last Friday night, upping their record to 13-3 overall and 9-0 in the league, by whipping Elk Rapids 83-44 before a cheering throng at Max Novak Fieldhouse.

Charlevoix had been starting slow in recent games, but raced out to a quick 7-0 lead against the Elks.

"We talked a lot about starting out fast and we came out focused," said Coach Keith Haske.

The lead was cut to 9-8 midway through the first quarter, but the Rayders closed the quarter with an 11-0 run, six of the points coming from Scott Parrish, to leave the court with a 20-8 advantage.

The second quarter was more of a Rayder clinic as Parrish's eight straight points midway through the quarter ran the Rayder lead to 36-12. The lead was extended to as much as 26, at 40-14, in the period and the Rayders led at the half, 48-24.

Parrish had 20 points at the break.

The game got a little physical in the third quarter as the frustrated Elks took their hacks, even picking up a technical foul.

Many times a technical will fire up the team whistled for it, but in this case, it seemed to have the opposite effect as Doug Rieck hit both free throws and Charlevoix scored another six straight to take a 67-30 lead.

Even before the end of the third quarter, Haske substituted liberally.

The Rayders took an 82-41 lead late in the game, which triggered the MHSAA required running clock, which sped up the game considerably.

With the clock not stopping on fouls and other whistles, Charlevoix managed only 14 fourth quarter points for an 83-44 final tally.

Despite another one-sided victory, Haske still saw room for improvement.

"We need to take better care of the ball. We had too many turnovers," he said.

"It's hard for us to get better

(in blowouts). When we get into games where we have to play four hard quarters, conditioning becomes a concern of mine."

Parrish, despite sitting for over eight minutes, led the Rayders with 22 points and seven rebounds. Rob Boss and Jim Shepherd each scored 13 points. Patrick Gowell broke out of his mini-slump in a big way with eight points, 13 assists, five rebounds and five steals.

All 12 Rayder players scored for the first time this year.

Shawn McDonough and Dale Williams kept their unusual streak intact as Charlevoix has won every game in which they have appeared.

The Rayder junior varsity fell to Elk Rapids, 69-56.

After hosting Roscommon in a non-conference tilt on Tuesday, the Rayders travel to Boyne City on Friday night.

And thanks to a victory by Traverse City St. Francis over Kalkaska Monday night, Charlevoix has clinched a share of the Lake Michigan Conference championship.

ISLAND NOTES

Island is put in the national spotlight due to plane crash

Phyllis Moore
'Island notes'

Editor's note: Due to the recent events bringing Beaver Island in the national spotlight, we have decided to bring our summer series "Island Notes" back a few months early. This section is generally written in column form and contributed by Beaver Island native Phyllis Moore who also runs a website at www.beaverislandtour.com.

DateLine NBC was on the island working on an upcoming segment which will focus on the miraculous survival (in the recent plane crash on Beaver Island) of the Gault family. I was lucky enough to meet with the people who are working on this report.

Jessica Gerstle, producer for DateLine; Mike Shamus, camera; and Tom Moore, sound, both freelancers from the Detroit area, have displayed themselves as compassionate, caring reporters of this accident.

Over coffee at Dalwhinnie recently they commented to me on the hospitality of the islanders. Although a youthful group, these three professionals have covered many tragedies and are well aware of tender feelings.

The putting together of such a program is a long process. Gathering all the information, interviewing all those involved from the survivors to the ground crews to Coast Guard and law officials. Hours and hours of film is taken (6 hours worth taken on the island alone) and then must be edited down to a 12 or 15 minute segment between commercials. Script has to be written and edited.

It's a tedious process at times, but the end result is, we hope, an accurate covering of this event.

I've debated submitting photos of the crash site, but after hard thinking, I've decided to give the public an idea just how amazing it was that anyone survived.

The area is heavily wooded and the smell of fuel permeates, wafting in and out through the trees. Although the sun is shining, the temperature is extremely cold.

Beaver Island resident Jim Wojan and his crew were there to begin the process of removing the plane and getting the engines.

It's a quiet place... silence except for hushed words among those working. A reverent atmosphere, the realization of both life and death.

The men who have been coming here since Friday's discovery are well aware of how fragile life is and shake their heads that anyone lived.

A hundred yards either way and the plane would have hit hardwood, most likely with an entirely different outcome.

Even those without a formal religion acknowledge that some sort of miracle occurred here...the only seats not damaged were those in which the members of the Gault family sat, and they hahg upside down giving silent testimony to a phenomenon that leaves the men shaking their heads.

Phyllis Moore is a Beaver Island resident who contributes island news to the Courier. She can be reached through her website at www.beaverislandtour.com.

Official Notice

CITY OF CHARLEVOIX

RESOLUTION ESTABLISHING POLICY FOR FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT REQUESTS Resolution No. 2001-2-2 of 2001

WHEREAS, the Michigan Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), being Act 442 of the Public Acts of 1976 as amended, established the public policy of the State of Michigan that all persons, except those persons incarcerated in state or local correctional facilities, are entitled to full and complete information regarding governmental decision-making consistent with the requirements of the Act; and

WHEREAS, the City of Charlevoix desires to establish this policy relating to requests for public records under the provisions of the FOIA so that those requests can be promptly and efficiently processed consistent with the requirements of the Act;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the City of Charlevoix establishes the following policy for FOIA requests, which shall read in its entirety as follows:

POLICY OF FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT REQUESTS

Section 1. Designation of FOIA Coordinator: Duties.

The City Clerk of the City of Charlevoix is hereby designated the City of Charlevoix FOIA Coordinator. If the City Clerk is not available, then the Manager's Administrative Assistant shall perform the duties of the FOIA Coordinator. The FOIA Coordinator shall be responsible for accepting and processing requests for public records under the FOIA and shall be responsible for approving denials under the FOIA. The FOIA Coordinator shall keep a copy of all written requests for public records on file for no less than one (1) year.

Section 1. Requests for Public Records.

- All requests for public records shall be in writing. Requests transmitted by facsimile, electronic mail, and other electronic means shall be considered written requests. If an individual makes an oral request for a public record, the FOIA Coordinator shall deliver or mail to the person making the request a written form on which the individual can submit his or her request.
- All requests for a public record shall describe the public record in sufficient detail to enable the FOIA Coordinator to find the public record.
- A person may subscribe to future issuances of public records that are created, issued, or disseminated on a regular basis. Such a subscription shall be valid for six (6) months, unless renewed. When a public record covered by a subscription is created, the FOIA Coordinator shall deliver or mail a copy of the public record to the person holding the subscription at the address provided for that purpose.

Section 3. Time Limitations in which to Respond to Request.

Unless the person making the request agrees in writing to a different time period, the FOIA Coordinator shall respond to the request for a public record within five (5) business days after receiving the request. For written requests made by facsimile, electronic mail, or other electronic transmission, the date of receipt of the request is the day after the electronic transmission is made. The FOIA Coordinator shall respond to the request for a public record by doing one (1) of the following:

- Granting the request.
- Issuing a written notice to the requesting person denying the request.
- Granting the request in part and issuing a written notice to the requesting person denying the request in part.
- Issuing a notice extending for not more than ten (10) business days the period during which he or she will respond to the request. The FOIA Coordinator shall not issue more than one (1) notice of extension for a particular request. Any such notice of extension shall specify the reasons for the extension and the date by which the FOIA Coordinator shall respond to the request in the manner provided in (a) - (c) above.

Section 4. Denial of Requests for Public Records.

Before denying, in whole or in part, a request for a public record, the FOIA Coordinator shall consult the City Attorney. The FOIA Coordinator shall provide the City Attorney with whatever information (including a copy of the requested public record) he or she deems necessary to determine whether legal grounds exist to deny, in whole or in part, the request for that public record. If the FOIA Coordinator desires to deny the request, in whole or in part, and the City Attorney concludes that legal grounds exist to support that denial, then the FOIA Coordinator shall issue a written notice denying the request for the public record. The written denial notice shall contain the following:

- An explanation of the basis under the FOIA or any other statute for the determination that the public record, or portion of the public record, is exempt from disclosure, if that is the reason for the denial.
- A certificate that the public record does not exist under the name given by or as described by the person making the request or by any other name or description reasonably known to the FOIA Coordinator, if that is the reason for the denial.
- If a separation or deletion is made, a description of the public record or information on the public record that is exempt from disclosure and separated or deleted from the disclosed public record as required by the FOIA, unless that description would reveal the contents of the exempt information and thus defeat the purpose of the exemption.
- A full explanation of the requesting person's right to do either of the following:
 - File a written appeal with the City of Charlevoix, which appeal shall include the word "appeal" in a prominent place on the front page and shall identify the reason or reasons the FOIA Coordinator's denial decision should be reversed.
 - File a lawsuit in circuit court within 180 days after the final decision denying the request which seeks to compel the FOIA Coordinator to disclose the public record requested.

(e) A notice of the right to receive a circuit court lawsuit reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and disbursement if the circuit court determines that the City has not complied with the FOIA and orders disclosure of all or a portion of the public record requested and of the right to receive compensatory damages and $500.00 in punitive damages if the circuit court determines that the City has arbitrarily and capriciously violated the FOIA.

Section 5. Administrative Appeals.

- The City Manager of the City of Charlevoix is hereby designated the body vested with authority to hear and decide appeals from decisions by the FOIA Coordinator denying requests for public records under the FOIA. Any appeal of the FOIA Coordinator's decision denying a request for a public record must be filed in writing with the City Clerk, must state the word "appeal" in a prominent place on the first page of the documents filed, and must identify the reason or reasons the FOIA Coordinator's denial decision should be reversed. Pursuant to the FOIA, the City of Charlevoix is not deemed to have received the appeal until submission of the written appeal to the City Manager.
- Within ten (10) days after receiving a written appeal, the City Manager shall do one (1) of the following:
 - Reverse the disclosure denial.
 - Issue a written notice to the person making the disclosure request upholding the disclosure denial.
 - Reverse the disclosure denial in part and issue a written notice to the person making the disclosure request upholding the disclosure denial in part.
 - Under unusual circumstances, issue a notice extending for not more than ten (10) business days the period during which the City Manager will respond to the written appeal. The FOIA defined "unusual circumstances" as related to the necessity of searching for, collecting, or reviewing a voluminous amount of separate and distinct public records pursuant to a single request and/or the need to collect the requested public records from numerous locations apart from the office receiving or processing the request. The City Manager shall not issue more than one (1) notice of extension for a particular written appeal.
- In deciding an appeal the City Manager shall consider the disclosure request without regard to the FOIA Coordinator's decision and shall determine whether the requested public record should be disclosed, in whole or in part, or whether the public record, in whole or in part, is exempt from disclosure under the FOIA.

Section 6. Fees.

- The City of Charlevoix shall adopt by separate resolution a schedule of fees to be charged for the necessary copying and mailing of a public record pursuant to a request for that public record under the FOIA. This fee shall be limited to actual mailing costs and to the actual incremental cost of duplication, including the cost of labor. The cost of labor incurred in duplication and mailing shall be based on the hourly wage of the lowest paid City employee capable of retrieving the information necessary to comply with the request. In addition to the fees for duplication and mailing, the City may charge a fee for the cost of labor incurred in searching for, examining, and reviewing a requested public record and for the deletion and separation of exempt from nonexempt information as required by the FOIA, if the FOIA Coordinator determines that the failure to charge a fee would result in unreasonably high costs to the City because of the nature of the request in the particular instance and the FOIA Coordinator identifies the nature of these unreasonably high costs. For purposes of this subsection, the City finds that unreasonably high costs will result to the City if the time spent by the FOIA Coordinator searching for, examining, reviewing, and/or deleting and separating exempt from nonexempt information as required by the FOIA exceed 2 hours. The cost of labor incurred in searching for, examining, and reviewing a requested public record and for the deletion and separation of exempt from nonexempt information as required by the FOIA shall be based on the hourly wage of the lowest paid City employee capable of retrieving the information necessary to comply with the request.
- For each request made by an individual entitled to the information, a public record search shall be made and a copy of a public record shall be furnished without charge for the first $20.00 of the fee, if the individual files with the FOIA Coordinator an affidavit stating that he or she is then receiving public assistance or, if not receiving public assistance, stating facts that show an inability to pay the fees because of indigence. For the purposes of this subsection, the criteria for indigence shall be the same as that used by the Charlevoix County Family Independent Agency (formerly known as the Department of Social Services) for determining eligibility for the program entitled Family Independent Program (FIP), formerly known as Aid of Families with Dependent Children (ADC).
- The FOIA Coordinator may require at the time the request for a public record is made a good faith deposit from the person making the request if the fee to receive the public record or series of public records exceeds $50.00. However, the good faith deposit shall in no event exceed one-half (1/2) of the total fee.

Section 7. Severability.

If any section, clause, or provision of this policy be declared unconstitutional or otherwise invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction, said declaration shall not affect the remainder of the policy. The City hereby declares that it would have passed this policy and each part, section, subsection, phrase, sentence and clause irrespective of the fact that any one or more parts, sections, subsections, phrases, sentences or clauses be declared invalid.

Section 8. Effective Date.

This policy shall become effective the day after this resolution is published in a newspaper of general circulation within Charlevoix County.

Man charged with trying to bribe sheriff's deputy

A 22-year-old Grand Rapids man has been charged with a third offense of drunk driving, driving while his license was suspended and trying to bribe a public official following an incident Feb. 17 on Horton Bay Road in Bay Township.

Matthew Scott Feenstra was charged by the Charlevoix County Prosecutors Office for the offenses and appeared in 90th District Court where a $7,000 cash or surety bond was set.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, a county snowplow driver had found a car blocking his plow route at about 2:30 a.m. Feb. 17.

The car's driver, Feenstra, allegedly stopped the vehicle in the middle of the road and apparently passed out.

The sheriff's office stated Feenstra was arrested for operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol — third offense, driving while his license was suspended — third offense and possession of open alcohol.

Feenstra allegedly asked the deputy to let him go and, according to the Sheriff's Office, repeatedly offered the deputy several thousand dollars if he let him go.

He was lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail.

Operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol — third offense and bribery are both felony offenses with a possible five year sentence.

Courier publisher dies from heart attack at 61

By STEVE ZUCKER and KENDALL P. STANLEY
Petoskey News-Review Staff

LA GRAVE, FRANCE — Charlevoix Courier and Petoskey News-Review publisher Kirk Schaller died Sunday doing what he loved — downhill skiing.

Schaller, 61, died of an apparent heart attack after making his second run down the mountain. He was an avid skier, traveling earlier this year to the Charlevoix area of Quebec. A summer trip to South America to ski was also a regular event.

"He was a great friend, and a great ski friend," said Thomas Huckie, editor of the Cadillac Evening News who was with Schaller when he died.

"Kirk was the type of person you always wanted to be with, and a newspaperman extraordinaire," Huckie said. "He was well-liked and well-respected in the news business."

He said he always respected what Schaller had done with improving the News-Review, and adding other services to the community.

That was a sentiment echoed by Ken Winter, Charlevoix Courier general manager.

"Kirk was quiet, but bright and powerful," Winter said. "He had excellent vision, and knew how to whip ideas into things that worked."

"The company and the paper are what they are today because of who Kirk was."

Winter and Schaller go back to 1974, when Schaller asked him to take over the editorship of the Charlevoix Courier. He had already worked for two years at the News-Review as a reporter under editor Jim Doherty.

After two years, Winter returned to the News-Review to become assistant general manager under Schaller, who was then general manager under his father, Albert, who was publisher. Albert died in 1979.

McSauba to get updates in buildings, equipment

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Mt. McSauba was recently rated by Ski Magazine as being one of the top three small ski areas in the United States, but the city budget shows maintaining its high quality comes at a steep cost.

In the budget, McSauba's expenditures for planned future capital improvements exceed the local recreation area's revenue by $86,700.

Mt. McSauba manager Bo Boss doesn't see the financial cost to the city as outweighing the benefit the facility brings to the Charlevoix community.

"We don't always look at the bottom line, or the profit margin; our goal is to get more kids involved," Boss said.

The budget estimates Mt. McSauba's annual revenue for the next eight years to remain steady at $7,100 a year, a total intake of $56,800. Proposed projects planned for the recreation area over the eight-year period come at a cost of $143,500.

Historical society to present talk on bridges

The Charlevoix Historical Society will present an illustrated program on the history of Charlevoix's six known channel bridges at 7 p.m. on March 6 at the Depot Museum, located at Depot Beach at the end of Dixon Avenue in Charlevoix.

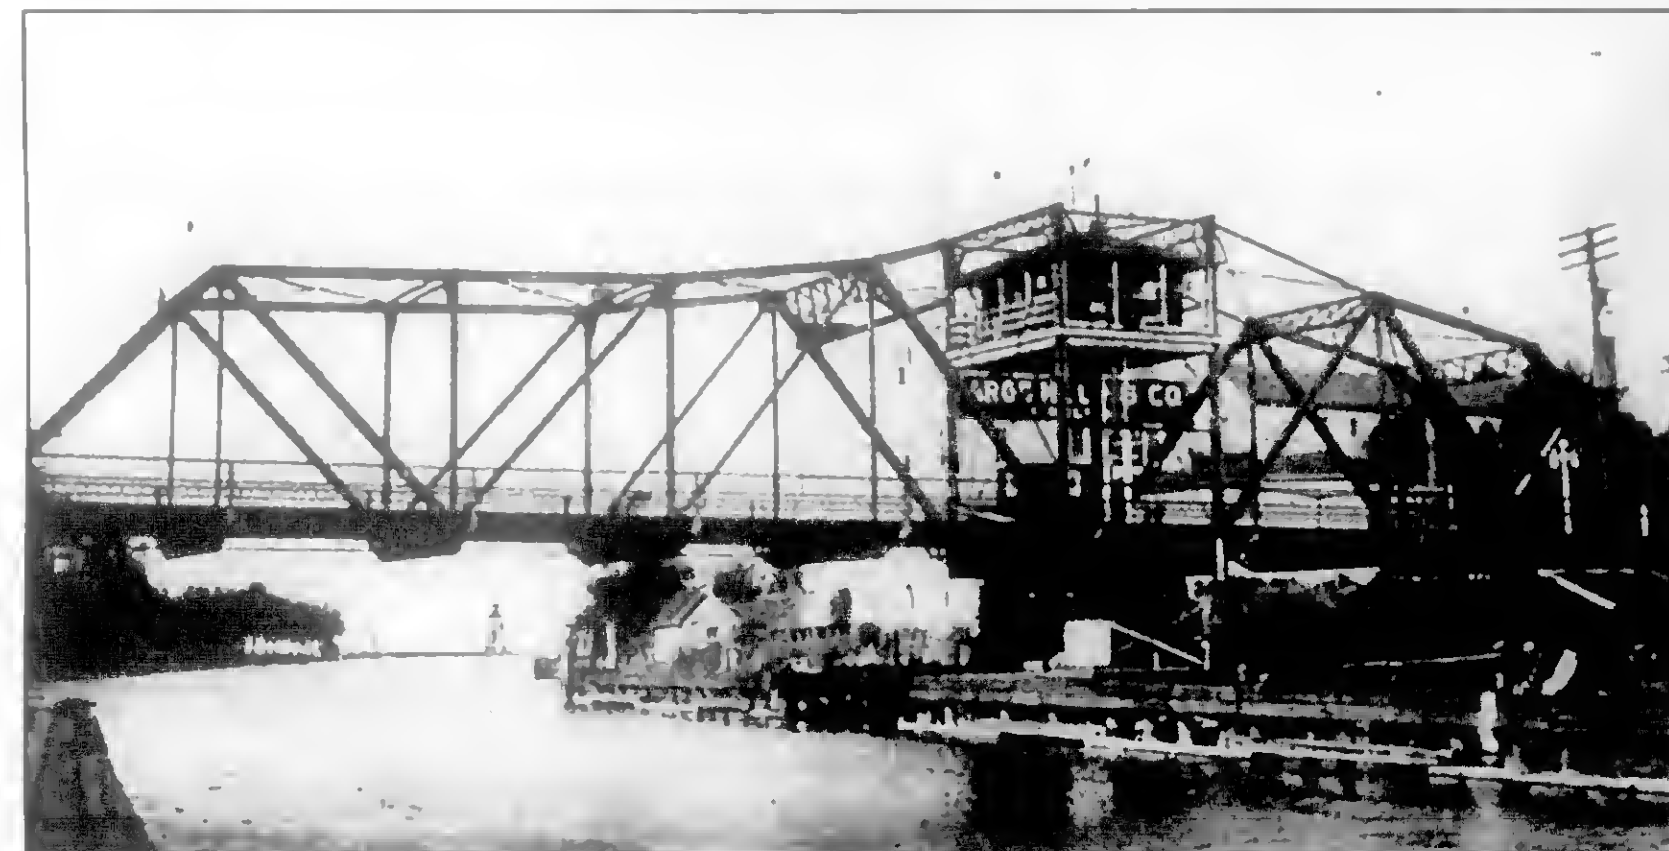

It will be hosted by David L. Miles, editor and board member of the society. He will use stories and photographs from the society's archives to explain how these bridges were built, who built them and how the town reacted to their construction.

These stories range from the comic — the horses who caused a small form of gridlock — to the hair-raising — one bridge almost knocked off its foundation — to the tragic — deaths in the channel waters.

There are even tales of how a man could be taken off his barstool to help open the bridges up.

This program is open to the general public.

There is no admission charge. For more information, call 547-0373, Tuesday through Friday.

Correction

In the editorial column on page 5 of last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier a name was incorrect.

In the portion of the story saluting various people on Beaver Island, the name of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Deputy on the island should have been Deputy Mike Russell.

Oleson's closes for two days to clean up

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Oleson's shoppers were disappointed Feb. 20 and 21 when they headed over to the local grocer and found the doors were locked.

"What occurred there was a lot of construction was going on inside the facility and they were not taking adequate measures to protect the food product from filth and construction debris," Michael Juhasz inspector for the Michigan Department of Agriculture said.

Juhasz explained that the local inspector came into the Oleson's store on Feb. 20 and noticed things did not meet the department's sanitation requirements. The department then issued an unsanitary notice that closed the store down for two days.

He told management that in order to sell the food, they had to take measures to ensure the safety of their products. He said that packages needed to be cleaned as did the shelves.

The inspector added that management needed to take precautions so further construction would not contaminate the food product or the packages.

Oleson's manager Bob Borths said that employees washed everything on the shelves and also washed the shelves themselves. They then put plastic barriers up, separating the construction and grocery areas.

Oleson's doors reopened Feb. 22 after the inspector returned and agreed the store was suitable for shoppers.

"I don't foresee further action being taken by the Department of Agriculture beyond verifying that the facility is clean and has been protected," Juhasz said.

The shut down occurred during phase one of the renovation project. At this time the interior store remodeling is being done.

Phase one was started in early January.

In a previous interview, Oleson's owner DJ Oleson said that the store will not be under construction this summer and phase two construction will begin in the fall of 2001.

Beware of scam e-mail in area

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Residents should beware of an internet e-mail scam that has been found on computers in the area.

Two of the e-mails were even received by the Charlevoix Courier last week.

The scam involves a supposed dignitary from Nigeria that needs money for the Nigerian Football team. It promises a profit to the recipient of the e-mail letter.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, this is the first time he has seen this type of scam on an e-mail system in the area. In the past, letters similar to the e-mail have been received by area residents through the mail.

"I've probably received in the last 5-6 years about a dozen of those letters sent to area residents," he said. "They use fancy names, fancy titles and offers too good to be true."

In the e-mail sent to the Charlevoix Courier, the sender introduced himself as Dr. David Akhigbe, deputy secretary/chief accountant of the Nigerian Football Association. He stated he has put too much money into a youth football championship by millions of dollars and needs an overseas account to transfer it into. According to the letter, the person who gives their account will get a percentage of the money.

The sheriff stresses, do not fall for this scam.

However, there was one area man who did fall prey to it. According to Lasater, the local man even went to Nigeria to meet with the sender of the letter.

He was met at a Nigerian airport by a person who looked like a dignitary and taken out for lunch.

In the end, the man had lost about $20,000 due to the scam. Lasater advises if any resident receives an e-mail or letter similar to this situation, they should contact their local police department or sheriff's department.

"Don't try to take advantage of this thinking it is too good to be true. It is a scam....," Lasater said.

What do you think about marina plans?

Readers will be seeing a new addition to the Charlevoix Courier's OPINION page.

Starting this week, we will have a "What do you think?" editorial once a month. We will introduce a topic and state both sides of the issues. Readers are then invited to briefly tell us what they think on the issue. All of the reader comments we receive will be published in a special section before the regular letters to the editor.

This new addition is kind of like an unscientific poll of the community.

We thought we would start this first one off with the proposed expansion to the city marina.

This expansion would increase the number of slips in the marina to a maximum of 111. The expansion will take up a significant portion of the southwest corner of Round Lake and may intrude on other riparian rights.

Opponents say this expansion would bring too many boats to Round Lake. This would keep the bridge up too long and create congestion problems in the downtown area of Charlevoix, as well as in Round Lake.

Opponents also argue there are too many environmental impacts in these plans.

Proponents argue the expansion is needed as more boaters are discovering Charlevoix.

Plus, more boaters means more shoppers spending more money in downtown stores.

So, what do you think Charlevoix? Is a marina expansion a good thing for Charlevoix?

Send your comments to the Charlevoix Courier at P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720 or e-mail them to charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com. We have provided a cut out comment box at the base of this editorial as a guide.

The usual "letters to the editor" rules apply. Comments that are personal attacks will not be considered for publication. So, stick to the issue.

What do you think?

I am for/against this marina expansion because:

The mystery behind the genes that make us up

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

This past weekend, I was shown a wall poster of all the known human genes and their locations on our chromosomes. The poster was about 4-feet-by-5-feet and was completely covered with printed words and symbols too small for my far-sighted and slightly clouded vision to appreciate without considerable magnification.

Within the last month or so we have all read news stories about the decoding of the human genome, the complete genetic recipe for the human being. Just what does all this mean and why should anyone but a few scientists be interested in it?

Some writers have suggested that the decoding of the human genome and that of other creatures constitutes the greatest intellectual moment in all of human history. Maybe that's a reason for being interested.

A very short genetics lesson is in order.

If we look inside the microscopic cells of any sort of organism — from bacteria and molds to plants, insects, clams, squirrels, chimpanzees and us — we find similar structures. Some of the most important structures there are chromosomes.

Each cell of an organism has the same chromosomes. During the past 50 years or so, detailed chemical examination of those chromosomes has shown that every kind of creature on earth has the same chemicals in those chromosomes. The most important chemical is abbreviated as DNA (short for deoxyribonucleic acid.) All the DNA found in each individual cell constitutes the genome of that organism.

Matt Ridley has written recently that the human genome is like a book. The human genome according to Ridley consists of about 30,000 stories called genes. Each story is made up of paragraphs and each paragraph is made up of words. Geneticists call the words codons. Each word is made up of only four different letters called bases. The bases make up the DNA in each of our cells and in each of the cells of all other creatures.

The human genome book has about one billion words, or about as many as in 800 bibles. Many of the words and stories in our genome book are the same as those in the genome of other organisms. We share about half of our genes with plants and more than 90 percent with a wide variety of animals not closely related to us.

Nearly all our genes are like those of chimpanzees, and the differences in genes from one human to another must almost necessarily be described as inconsequential.

Among those billion words making up the human genome, only a few hundred are likely to be different from one of us to the other. Imagine looking for the few hundred differences in words among 800 bibles.

Knowing what the human genes are and knowing what they do will provide us with an almost unbelievable set of future options. Some diseases may be cured in remarkably efficient ways; birth defects may be eliminated or reduced; and we will likely know a great deal about just what sorts of diseases or disabilities we are likely to acquire as we grow older.

There are genes that enhance or encourage the development of cardiovascular disease. We will probably be able to predict at birth and with some degree of certainty whether a given individual is likely to suffer a heart attack before age 40 for example.

Would you like to know that about yourself or your children? Would your insurance company like to know that about you? These are questions we will have to answer both for ourselves and for others before many years have gone by: certainly within a few decades.

As the old Irish toast or curse goes, "May you live in interesting times." We do and we will, and knowledge about the human genome will both provide the questions and possibly help us answer them.

More basketball courts needed

Editor:

I am a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I have an idea to keep kids safer after school hours. I think we should have basketball courts in the vacant lots or alleys. This would keep kids off the streets after school.

Kids need a place to go after school besides Subway. Some young people can't go straight home after school and if they wanted to they could go play basketball. Basketball is just one thing they could do. I chose it because I like the sport a lot.

Another reason is so kids won't get hurt walking around by themselves. For example kids who are unsupervised after school are more likely to get hurt. If they get hurt who will help them?

Lastly, some people can't get access to a gym. A gym is a good place to play basketball. Thank you for listening to me.

Gault gives her thanks

Editor:

I appreciate the opportunity you have given me to try to thank all the people that were touched by our ordeal. I did not know where to begin; I wish I could thank each and every one of you personally.

First of all, Paul Welke, who is our absolute hero. You can only imagine our feelings when off in the distance, we heard the sound of a plane, only to hear it become louder with each passing second. His bravery, experience, intuition and deep caring makes him a truly remarkable person. It may sound silly, but when we are ready, we plan to adopt a puppy and name him Welke. Thank you Mr. Welke.

To the people of Beaver Island, I knew, just knew, if we were on the island, you were out there looking for us. It gave such hope.

To Tim McDonough, Deputy Sheriff Mike Russell, Jim Wojan, Darrell Butler, Rich Gillespie and all the people involved in the rescue, so many thanks.

To our dear friend, Ron Wojan, for being with my husband, in his darkest times.

To Billy McDonough, who announced the wonderful news to my husband.

To Jeff Powers, the island vet, who so sympathetically took care of our dog, who made me feel some relief.

To all of you, that I have never met and don't even know your names, thank you.

To the Canadian Rescue team, that was out there looking for us.

To the men in the Coast Guard, who are trained for this, but probably never truly prepared for what they may find.

To the people in Charlevoix. To Sheriff George Lasater, who was a lifeline to my family in Chicago, when they could not get answers from anyone else.

To all the doctors, nurses and staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

To Tamara Stevens, the public relations person at the hospital, who kept me shielded from the media, which was an experience that could have added so greatly to my stress.

To Bob, the ambulance driver, who brought my Emma tacos when she was feeling better. I could see her perk up.

To the people I have never met, who offered me their homes, prayers and emotions.

I know I have probably left many people out, but please know that you all played a part in this. I never knew people could be so "good."

On behalf of my loving husband, my beautiful, spectacular children — I thank all of you.

Love,
Mirth Gault

Float, letter example of moral decline

We need more sports

Editor:

I am a student at Charlevoix Middle School and I think the middle school should organize more sports for sixth graders. One example is that only eighth graders are allowed to be cheerleaders. If sixth graders could cheer, we could support our team, have fun and keep out of trouble easier.

There are no sixth grade basketball teams for the school. Even if other schools don't have teams, we could help them get teams. If we get any teams, we should have them open to sixth graders before they are open to seventh or eighth graders. That way, more sixth graders will have a chance to be on teams. Two of the only teams we can be on, the ski team and cross-country are open to seventh and eighth graders too.

If we want to play baseball or soccer, we have to play in the recreation league. Sixth graders are not allowed on the Rayder soccer team or recreation soccer team. Recreation league soccer ends for us after the fall going into sixth grade. We also have to play recreation league basketball. That is not as much fun because barely anyone comes to watch our games. Also, we have to play against most of our friends instead of with them.

Most importantly, if people are busy, they usually stay out of trouble easier because they are occupied. Sometimes, kids don't know what to do in their free time so they do something they aren't supposed to do. Sports keeps kids busy and out of trouble.

For example, on Saturdays, I am always occupied because I play recreation league basketball. Then, I stay to watch my friends play their games. Since I am occupied, I stay out of trouble.

This is why I would like someone to organize more sports for sixth graders. Even if it doesn't happen this year, next year, I hope the sixth graders will be busier and happier.

We need real drums

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School. I think that the drummers in our band should get real snare drums. It makes sense because the trumpet players get real trumpets and the saxophone players get real saxophones. So why shouldn't the drummers get real drums?

One result of having real drums is we might get more drummers because people might be more enthused to play. That would be good because then the wind instruments wouldn't drown us out. We would also have a better sound because people would be more likely to practice. Also, a snare drum can make more than one sound and sounds better than the clicks and taps that we get on our practice pads.

Most importantly, it all adds up to a better band because people might practice more and we'd have a better sound. One advantage to having a better band is we'd do better in festivals. I think the drummers in our band should get real snare drums.

More basketball hoops needed at Shanahan

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School. I think Shanahan should have more basketball hoops, because some of the hoops are broken or rusted. Also, the skating park is in the way of the hoops. There are always three or four ramps on the court, which means no room for the basketball players. But most importantly, people could get hurt if a basketball rolled on to the half pipe and someone was going down the half pipe. Also someone could press charges for this. Thank you for your time.

Manker resigns coaching job for Harbor Springs job

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After six years of sweating it out on the field, soccer hall of famer Hagen Manker, 50, of Charlevoix, resigned his position as girls' varsity soccer coach recently.

"Hagen brought with him a great work ethic. He was very demanding and I appreciated that from him. He has been the only coach we've ever had here for girls' soccer. He has built a really good program," said Keith Haske, assistant principle and athletic director at Charlevoix High School.

Manker said that his decision wasn't easy but it came down to watching his daughter play from the sidelines or coaching her himself.

Manker's children are currently attending Harbor Springs schools and he decided not to pass up the opportunity to spend more time with them. He has accepted the position as both the girls' and boys' varsity soccer coach in Harbor Springs. Manker moved to Charlevoix 22 years ago and after having played soccer for 40 years of his life he wanted to share his experience with others.

Hagen started the girls' soccer program in Charlevoix and has seen great successes in his six years.

The team started out with little experience and after three years they beat Petoskey who had a long-standing, strong program. They also defeated Alpena last year which showed the team's growth and strength.

Manker proudly noted the handful of players that went on to play at the collegiate level after graduating from Charlevoix.

Beyond tallying many wins, last year the team was in first place in the state for academics and were in the top five for academics during the four years prior.

The team's success on the field and in the classroom may reflect Manker's unique coaching philosophy. He explained that the lessons he teaches student-athletes are not only about dribbling, passing and scoring, but they also deal with life.

"To me there is nothing more gratifying than instilling a sense of rewards through hard work in the students. Through hard work in academics, athletics or spirituality you can make a change in your life. You see tangible results as a coach you can see where you make a positive impact with just a little effort," Manker said.

Manker leaves behind a solid foundation to be built on by the varsity girls' soccer coach taking over the reigns in the spring.

The Charlevoix school board accepted Manker's resignation at the Feb. 12 meeting. Manker said that the school is looking at Charlevoix resident Carol Madison to replace him.

The school board will review this recommendation at the 7 p.m. meeting March 12 in the study hall room at the high school.

"The Charlevoix girls' (soccer) program is in really good shape. These girls are one of the premier teams in northern Michigan right now. They should do well and I wish them all the best," Manker said.

Hagen Manker has decided to take another job coaching in Harbor Springs to be with his children. He has been a soccer coach in Charlevoix for 6 years. (File photo)

City to shell out bucks for McSauba upgrades

City treasurer Rick Brandi said the city doesn't know how they will fund these projects, the capital plan itself is only a planning tool that helps the city project possible future costs.

"The first couple of years are fundable. It's when we get into the third and fourth years, and the water line replacement that it's (the fund balance) in the hole," Brandi said. City Manager Mike Wiesner said that the money will most likely come from the general fund but the city may also look for grants.

"There is no guarantee that the money will be there (in the general fund) but it is likely," he added.

The budget shows that in 2001 the recreation area is $9,400 on the plus side. However, the city will be paying $20,000 this spring to build a new garage to store the snow groomer that was purchased in 2000.

Another change was approved during a recent city council tour of the back hill at McSauba. It was decided that a triangular group of trees at the bottom of the tow line would be removed.

Boss said that it is currently difficult for the tow operator to see down the line because of the trees.

In 2002 the capital plan shows the ski hill will replace a snow gun for $9,000 and will also be putting in a snowboard park at a cost of $2,500. Adding the 2002 estimated revenue of $7,100 to the $9,400 from 2001 gives the recreation hot-spot a total of $16,500 in available funds. So, at the close of 2002 McSauba's fund will have a balance of $5,000.

Boss said that the city is getting a deal to replace the snow guns from Nub's Nob manager Jim Bartlett, who designed the snow making system they currently have.

"We bought the guns we have right now in 1979 for $10,000. They've run their course," he said. At $9,000 a piece for the new guns, Boss said the price was "incredible."

The snowboard park will be situated where the difficult run, "the chute" currently is.

Boss will present a clay model of the planned park to city council in the next couple of weeks. He said that all costs of constructing the park will be donated.

In 2003 the fund balance falls further. Another snow gun will be replaced at a cost of $9,000. Adding the revenue from 2003 to the fund balance from 2002 gives the city $12,100 in available funds. This $12,100 minus the $9,000 allocated to the snow gun, leaves the fund balance at $3,100.

The budget shows that the city will have to start paying more money into McSauba in 2004 when the snow making water lines and pumps are planned for replacement after 20 years of service.

Boss said McSauba's current irrigation system uses plastic lines that split often and need repair. He added that the city has been lucky the lines lasted for so long and they will most likely be replaced by steel lines.

Replacing this irrigation system comes at an estimated cost of $40,000. However, the total expenditure is $49,000, as another snow gun will be replaced. New snow guns will again be bought in both 2005 and 2006.

The completion of these projects will require the city to fund, or find funding for, the remaining $38,800.

Boss sees the efficiency of the new system as helping save money in the long-run.

"In December we made snow for 400 hours. The new system could make the same amount of snow in probably 100 hours. That will save big time on water and electrical costs. The new system can also make snow up to 32 degrees, now it has to be 25 degrees or below," Boss said.

A parking expansion is also in store for McSauba in 2004. Boss said that on an average night, cars line either side of the street.

He foresees them doubling the current 75 car capacity.

Schaller called a legend in newspaper business

SCHALLER

"Kirk has been more than a boss for 27 years," Winter said. "We've had our annual ski trips to Canada, Colorado, and all over out west. It was a time for talking shop and having fun."

"He was more than a boss to me, he was a big brother. And he was a hell of a mentor."

Jim Grisso, publisher of the Gaylord Herald Times which is owned by the Charlevoix Courier and Petoskey News-Review's parent company, Northern Michigan Review Inc., said his memories of Schaller go back 57 years.

"Kirk and I go back to when we were friends when we were 4 years old," Grisso said. "There's a lot of good memories growing up with Kirk in Petoskey."

Grisso eventually moved away, but when he wanted to move out of Cleveland where he was selling ads in 1967, Albert offered him a job at the News-Review.

Grisso ended up in Gaylord and has worked with Schaller since.

"Kirk's a newspaper man," Grisso said. "He cared about his newspaper, and he cared about his people. One article on Kirk a few years ago said he put the newsroom and the editorial integrity of his publications first, and the dollar second. I've known that for 30 years, and that's the way we operated."

"There's a lot of memories of Kirk, but mostly it would be his honesty and integrity as a newspaper publisher," Grisso said. "He treated everyone the same, his employees and members of the community."

"I'm going to miss him."

Christopher Huckle, publisher of the Cadillac Evening News and Thomas' son, said he knew Schaller through his father.

"The Petoskey News-Review has always been a paper where I could call Kirk and Ken and trust them implicitly with a newspaper decision," he said. "Kirk was a great guy, and a phenomenal person."

He said it was Schaller, Winter and his uncle, Jim, who got his dad into skiing in the early '90s.

"He'd take two or three trips a year with Kirk, to South America, Austria, Canada, France, out west," he said. "They liked the extreme skiing, the hiking up, they didn't like mainstream skiing, they wanted to ski where most people don't get a chance to ski."

One of those skiing partners was downtown Petoskey business owner Dave Meyer.

Meyer, of Petoskey's Meyer Hardware, said although his family goes way back with the Schallers, he first got to know Schaller well when he was invited along on a ski trip some 20 years ago.

Meyer said he remembers that Salt Lake City, Utah, ski trip vividly.

"I was all fired up to go skiing and the first place we go is to the grocery store," Meyer said. "There Kirk was buying all the newspapers and picking up all the free publications ... He was always a journalist at heart, on vacation or working."

Last month Meyer accompanied Schaller on a skiing trip to Canada where Meyer said he still was picking up all the local publications.

Meyer said he has made many trips back to Salt Lake City to ski since that first trip with Schaller 20 years ago.

In fact, Meyer spoke to the News-Review today, Monday from his hotel room in Salt Lake City where he is on a skiing trip with his son.

Meyer also pointed to Schaller's sense of humor.

"He could always come up with a good laugh at the dinner table that would bring the whole group down," Meyer added.

"It's tough," Jim Erhart, a close friend of Schaller's said of his "good friend's" death. "There's a big sense of loss. My heart goes out to the family. There's a huge void."

"The times that we spent together were just so fabulous," Erhart said as he recalled playing hide and seek with Schaller this past New Year's Eve.

"I'm the last guy to play hide and seek with him. That just shows the depth of his person ... He's going to be missed dearly."

Cindy Shaw, a family friend of the Schallers, described him as someone who did everything "110 percent."

Shaw's husband, John, was a close friend and former roommate of Schaller's who shared many skiing adventures with him.

"He died doing what he loved," Cindy Shaw said. "We should all be so fortunate to die in deep powder."

In addition to his skiing, he loved to sail.

Karl Jurries, a long-time friend of Schaller's, said he'll remember the many sailing races and ski outings he shared with Schaller.

"He fully enjoyed life to the most," Jurries said. "He always took time to talk with his family. He was always happy and had a good joke ... His enjoyment of life was infectious. He'll be missed."

Schaller's mother, Doris Schaller Vernon, said when Albert died she was on the board, and it made sense to have Kirk become the publisher. He had been working with his father, and it was logical for him to take over as publisher, she said.

"I was secretary of the company board, and after Kirk was publisher for awhile, Kirk was in charge," she said. "I gave my input, but I've been happy with what he's done over the years."

"It's a sad day."

Schaller's history at the newspaper goes back to when he was 4, when he'd sweep up around the office of the old Northern Michigan Review. He started part-time in the mid-1950s, and went full-time in 1962 after his graduation from Ferris State College with a degree in business.

At the newspaper he worked as a photographer, advertising sales representative, business manager and then general manager, before being named publisher in 1979.

The Schaller family purchased the Charlevoix Courier in the late 1960s.

Longtime Petoskey News-Review sports editor Jerry Rosevear said he has known Schaller since high school and remembers working with him back when the paper's offices were located on Mitchell Street.

"To me he was a boss who, in a quiet sort of way, kind of always blended in," Rosevear said. "That's what I will remember."

"As a fellow worker, and later my employer, it was the same calm demeanor. I never heard him raise his voice to anyone within the office. He was very respectful and respected," Rosevear added.

Former Petoskey News-Review reporter and fellow Rotarian Dianne Litztenburger described Schaller as "a quiet giant in the publishing world."

"He didn't fit the (typical) character (of a publisher)," Litztenburger said. "He wasn't loud with his voice, but he was with his actions. That made him truly a newspaper legend."

Litztenburger said she enjoyed working for Schaller during her 8 1/2-year tenure at the News-Review in the 80s.

"He was the type of guy you could walk down the hall and talk to him about whatever was on your mind. He always had a steady hand and a gentle way of leading the News-Review."

Litztenburger said she got to know Schaller better through her service on the paper's editorial board.

"He could be extremely vigilant, especially when the subject had anything to do with taxes. That was his crusade," she said. "He was willing to use the newspaper to offer help for a good cause."

Fellow Rotarian Jim Beno expressed the shock shared by many at Schaller's sudden death.

"This is a tremendous loss of a great leader, Rotarian and good friend to our community," Beno said. "Kirk worked hard and played hard. He loved to live life to the fullest."

Beno pointed to the time when Schaller shared his favorite deep-dish pizza recipe and a list of his favorite Chicago restaurants with him as one of his favorite memories.

"He died pursuing his favorite joy and pastime, skiing. Knowing Kirk, if he had to pick a way to go, I feel it truly would have been while skiing ... He will be forever missed."

Former Petoskey Mayor and Emmet County Commissioner Herb Carlson, who worked with Schaller for many years on local traffic and road issues, described him as very energetic.

"I had great respect for Kirk. I valued his opinions and sought them often both as county commissioner and mayor."

He is survived, in addition to his mother, by his wife, Elsa, sons David, John and Patrick Schaller, daughter Gretchen Schaller Arnold, brother Brent Schaller and sister Karen Schaller Lewicki.

Island history

Recently, Courler Editor Jeremy McBain took a historical tour of Beaver Island. The tour started at the Mormon Print Shop (left) with Robert Cole of the Beaver Island Historical Society. The print shop was the home of the first daily newspaper in northern Michigan, the Northern Islander, a mormon paper in the 1800s. Below, an old desk and chair in the print shop from an ancient island school house. (Photos by Jeremy McBain)

The trip also included a stop at the Beaver Island Historical Society's Maritime museum. Above, a lifeboat from the famed ship, the Bradley. The ship blew up one night in the harbor killing the men on board. Next to it are Cole and Society member Bill Cashman (right). School to offer computers, instruments to students

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Through the Student Technology and Arts Resource Program the local charter school, Northwest Academy will be offering its students the opportunity to earn personal computers, software and musical instruments.

"The purpose of the program is to increase the student's ability to excel by getting the equipment into their hands. What's the catch? There is no catch," Northwest's technology teacher Jonathan Winkjer said.

The school's plan is to offer new students or current students that recruit a new student an "award."

"The program is driven by recruitment. Students themselves seem to seek out the best students. They say 'hey, there is a bit more freedom (at Northwest)' it's not as formally structured," Winkjer said.

One of the award options is a brand new desktop computer complete with monitor, modem, speakers and basic operational software. Students will receive the computer in November, after the first marking period, and can then use it throughout the year.

After completing the school year the student may purchase the computer from the academy for $100 or

Jonathan Winkjer,
Northwest Academy technology teacher return it to the school.

Or, students who already have a home system may opt to upgrade that system through a variety of software options.

The third option is based on Northwest's musical savvy. Winkjer estimates that 70 percent of the 90 enrolled students are already in one of Northwest's three bands. He also said that he has seen students join the school band and then had their grades go up.

Because of the correlation, the school's administration has seen between inclusion in the band and high academic marks they are offering a package that includes one year rental of a band instrument or $400 toward the purchase of a new instrument.

The fourth opportunity is a $400 scholarship to an approved program for arts and technology instruction during non-school hours.

Eligibility is based upon performance and academic competency. Students must maintain a C grade level in each class they are taking at all times or they lose the incentive package.

The school plans to use state funding to pay for the program.

Winkjer said this money is earmarked for the students and should go directly to them.

He added that the program has students excited and that the school already has four or five students lined up for fall enrollment.

"We feel truly committed to quality education. We hope that the program shows students and parents what kind of support we are trying to provide," Winkjer said.

However, the school does not intend to use the program to double its enrollment.

"We are a small school and we intend to stay a small school. Our cap is 125 students. We are not looking to add on buildings, we are looking for good quality students who thrive in this type of environment," he said.

More information on this program is available at www.nwa.edu.

Rayders clinch the conference

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports stringer

Boyer City High School has been a lucky place for Charlevoix boys' teams to play this school year.

The football Rayders clinched the Lake Michigan Conference crown and a playoff berth there earlier this season. And last Friday night, the Rayders' basketballers gave coach Keith Haske his first Lake Michigan Conference crown there as well with a resounding 101-77 win last Friday.

"It was a great feeling," Haske said. "It was one of the big goals the kids had going into the season. Our teams in the past had set a standard in the tournament, but we hadn't won the league. Winning the league shows consistency over the whole year as opposed to over a short period of time (like the tournament)."

Earlier in the week, the Rayders also beat Roscommon, 80-47.

Charlevoix started the week in impressive fashion against the Bucks of Roscommon. Roscommon's sophomore star center, Kyle Gross, went to the bench with three fouls as the Bucks outfoiled the Rayders 7-0 in the early going.

Nothing went right for Roscommon as the stifling Charlevoix defense forced many turnovers. Scott Parrish (eight points) and Rob Boss (five points) took advantage of Gross's absence down low.

Sophomore Nate Teuscher brought the crowd to its feet with his first varsity points on a three-point play, which put the Rayders up 22-3 late in the first quarter.

The second quarter brought more of the same as the halftime buzzer saw Charlevoix holding a 49-18 advantage.

For much of the game the Rayders showed a new look with Nate Teuscher running the point and Patrick Gowell playing down in the paint. Gowell's post moves netted him six points in the second and five points in the third quarter.

Charlevoix led by a 63-26 tally at the end of three quarters.

In the fourth quarter, the Rayders' only disappointment was that they couldn't reach the 40-point lead mark that would have triggered the running clock.

Ryan Leitner scored eight points in the final period while Ryan Rafacz scored six.

On the game, Parrish led the Rayders with 20 points. Gowell had 12 while Jim Shepherd chipped in with nine. Boss, Rafacz and Leitner all had eight in a balanced attack. Nate Teuscher finished his varsity debut with seven.

"Nate fit right in with the team. In a lot of other schools, he would have been a varsity player all year long," Coach Haske commented.

Against Boyne, the Rayders again came out fast, leading at the end of the first quarter, 25-14 behind Parrish's eight points and Boss's six. The Ramblers came out blazing in the second quarter, however, and cut the Charlevoix lead to 30-26 with 5:30 left in the first half.

Gowell hit a three-point shot and followed it up with a jumper to give Charlevoix a more comfortable 35-26 margin. After a Boyne trifecta, Parrish scored nine points in a 14-4 run by the Rayders to close out the half.

The Rayders closed out the half on two sensational plays.

The first was a three-point play by Parrish keyed by a steal and assist from Gowell. On the ensuing play, Parrish supplied the defense by stealing a pass and feeding Rafacz with a length of the court pass that Rafacz turned into a layup just beating the buzzer.

The Rayders moved closer to their goal of a conference crown and to their new goal of scoring 100 points by exploding for 28 points in the third quarter for a 77-54 lead.

Shepherd scored 15 in the second half, including three treys from behind the three-point stripe. Keith Daly took over underneath with Parrish and Boss on the bench, scoring 10 in the second half, including the tip-in which put the Rayders over 100 for the game with only a few ticks left on the clock for the game.

Parrish led the way with 27 points, 14 rebounds and six blocks. Shepherd finished with 17 points. Jeremiah Teuscher had 15 points, four rebounds, four steals and four assists. Boss scored 11. Gowell tallied nine points, six rebounds and three blocks. Daly played a solid game in the post with nine points and 13 rebounds.

The Rayders (15-3 overall, 10-0 conference) look to finish the season undefeated both at home and in the conference with two home games against Kalkaska on Tuesday and Traverse City St. Francis on Friday.

Charlevoix will defend its district crown next week, opening with East Jordan at 6 p.m. March 7 at Harbor Springs High School.

Ski team runners up in state, conference champs

By LAURIE LOUNSBURY
Skiing writer

After the morning event of Giant Slalom, it looked like the Charlevoix Rayder Ski Team was going to do the nearly impossible — take the state championship title away from the perennial powerhouse, the Petoskey Northmen.

But when the final tally was taken at the state finals at Boyne Mountain Monday, the Charlevoix boys ended up in the runner-up position, finishing second behind the Northmen. Even though they missed out on the state crown, it was still a great ending to an impressive season.

"We gave Petoskey a run for their trophy, but Petoskey just skied a little stronger in slalom," said coach Sue Miller.

In the week leading up to the state finals, the Charlevoix team claimed the Lake Michigan Conference title at Nub's Nob, dominating the competition in both events. It was the first time in more than a decade that Charlevoix has won the conference title. For the skiers, it was the first time that the conference title was determined by four league meets, with the final meet at Nub's Nob being worth three times the points. Charlevoix won all four league meets.

"It was a wonderful feeling, to sweep the conference title that way," Miller said.

York Smith won the slalom event at the final meet, beating out Harbor Springs' Drew Bartlett. In the GS, Bartlett took first and Smith took second. Other conference finishes were: Chad Johnson, third GS, fourth slalom; Roscoe Serrels, fourth GS, sixth slalom; Taylor Fisher, 10th GS, 13th slalom; Lexi Wilson, 21st slalom, 27th GS; Troy Smith, 22nd slalom; and Annakate Trubilowicz, 35th GS.

At the state meet, the Charlevoix ski team was in first place with a six point lead over the Northmen after Giant Slalom, with senior Troy Smith capturing first place, followed by Roscoe Serrels, sixth; York Smith, 12th; Chad Johnson, 16th; Taylor Fisher, 33rd; and Lexi Wilson, 42nd. Seventy of the best skiers in the state class B-C-D schools competed in the events.

Petoskey's boys charged past the Rayders in slalom, turning in solid performances by every racer. They ended up claiming their title with a score of 54 points overall. Charlevoix followed with 76 points, and Iron Mountain came in third with 78 points.

In the slalom event, Troy Smith finished second, behind Petoskey's Jacob Olson; Serrels finished 11th; Johnson, 19th, York Smith, 28th; and Wilson, 43rd. York Smith was in fifth place after his first slalom run, but caught a tip on his second run and had to hike to keep the team's chance for a second place finish alive. Fisher also had trouble on the slalom event, and did not finish.

"We started this year with only two returning boy skiers, having lost five of my skiers from last year," Miller said. "Lexi joined the boys' team, along with three freshman, and I think that, with such a young team, they skied really, really well."

CHARLEVOIX ICE HARVEST NOW IN PROGRESS

Two Operators Have Opened Field at West End Lake Charlevoix

Ice harvesting operations for the 1939 summer season are now in full swing.

Two fields have been opened along the west shore of Lake Charlevoix off Ferry avenue. The Charlevoix Coal & Ice Co. has a crew filling their storage place in the old beet sugar factory and another crew employed by Allan Campbell and D.J. Eckinger are filling the Frank Noble ice house. They will also fill Booth Fisheries, Belvedere, Hallett and The Inn hotels and the Chicago Club.

Ice ten inches thick and of excellent quality is available. Due to the fact the local ice supply ran out by mid-fall in 1938, a greater quantity will be stored by all dealers this year.

THREE LOCAL FISHING TUGS AT SO. MANITOU

John Cross, Owner Tug Edna, Crew of Two, Ice-Bound Two Weeks

FATHER AND SON BANQUET A COMING EVENT

Annual Affair to Be Held March 27th at Methodist Church

Those in charge of the annual Father and Son banquet are glad to announce that the committees have been very successful in arranging for this annual affair, which has become such a permanent institution in our community, and has always been so generously patronized by the men and boys of the entire city.

This year the program will be entirely a "home folks" affair. R.F. Sloan, who consented to act as toastmaster, will bring ability and experience to the position, and his work with the boys this last year makes it especially fitting. There will be a short address, "To Our Fathers," by one of the sons, and the same by one of the fathers. W.F. Meyers has been invited to give the latter, and the high school is cooperating with the committee in selecting the boy for the former.

Floyd A. Supp, for many years a Detroit attorney, and now a resident of our city, will give the last address, on the topic, "Our Future Presidents." This gentleman made such a hit with the young people; in an address on a recent Sunday evening in one of our churches, in that the committee is glad to present him to this larger group.

The committee hopes to sell all tickets beforehand, with none sold at the church, if possible not to overcrowd the dining room, to the discomfort of the diners. Remember the date, Thursday, February 27, 6:30 o'clock, at the Methodist church.

FLAMES!

The Charlevoix School Building Destroyed by Fire This Morning.

At 9:30 this (Wednesday) morning fire was discovered in the Charlevoix school building, and in an hour the structure was totally destroyed with all its contents, including fully $500 worth of school books.

The alarm was promptly given, and, notwithstanding the extreme cold weather and other adverse circumstances, the steamer was on the ground and throwing water in eight minutes from the time the alarm was given. But before the hose was stretched flames were issuing from the upper windows, and all knew that the building was doomed. Three streams were soon playing into the building, but when it was deemed useless to make any further endeavor there, the chief turned the hose to save the adjoining buildings.

The fire caught in the basement, but the immediate cause is not definitely known. Two departments of the school were in session, the other two having been dismissed owing to the cold, but all four of the teachers of that branch of the school were in the building. The first intimation of the fire that came to the knowledge of the teachers was when a flash of flame shot from the register in Miss Stover's room. That teacher immediately warned Miss O'Neill in the room above, and the children were marched out with the same order as if it were an ordinary dismissal, singing as they marched. The conduct of the four teachers — Misses O'Neill, Mason and Stover and Mrs. Upright — cannot be too highly praised. The lower side of the stairway was on fire when the children from the upper room went down. After all were out Miss O'Neill returned to secure some of her books, but was driven back by the flames. Some of the children lost their wraps.

The building was erected in 1872, and cost, when fully completed, about $5,000. It was occupied, at the time of the fire, by the two intermediate and two primary departments, the high school being in the Town Hall. It was insured for $2,000, $300 of that amount being on the furniture.

THE SCHOOL

The School Board met at once to arrange for the continuation of the school, and the new homeless grades will resume within ten days. The Grammar grade will go to the High School room. The lecture room of the Baptist church has been secured and the two remaining grades will be provided for at once.

Preservation group drops lawsuits

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association recently chose to utilize compromise in order to end the lawsuits against Marion Township and the Charlevoix Board of Education.

On March 1 in the 33rd Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix an order for dismissal was entered by James Olson, of Olson and Bzdek, P.C., of Traverse City, attorney for the environmental group.
The order for dismissal has since been signed by both defendants, Marion Township and the Charlevoix Board of Education, resolving the last pending claim and closing the case.

However, the environmental group did not walk away without progressing towards their aim — the protection of Marion Township's rural character.
The settlement says that when the township accepts the dismissal, certain changes need to be made to the zoning ordinance and a land preservation program is to be established in the township.

The dismissal document refers to the program as a Farm Land and Rural Character Preservation Fund.

City says education is the key to area snowmobile problems

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

As high winds blew snow through the sky like a sand storm Monday night a meeting of the minds took place inside council chambers at city hall.

At a special city work session, City of Charlevoix officials, Charlevoix Snowmobile Club members and concerned residents spoke candidly of the problems snowmobiles have caused in the city this winter.

It was decided that there are bad apples in every bushel, but maybe more education and more signs are needed to help alleviate their negative impact.

City police chief Dennis Halverson said that since the February council meeting when residents raised the issue of banning snowmobiles in the city because of their dangerous driving, his department has stepped up enforcement.

Mislabeled budget leads to error in story on McSauba

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Due to mislabeled information in the Charlevoix city budget, revenue figures for the city owned Mt. McSauba in last week's article on page one were inaccurate.

Calculations did not include the funds brought in from user fees.

City treasurer Rick Brandi explained that what is defined as "total annual income" in the Mt. McSauba Recreation Improvement Capital Plan is only revenue garnered from tower leases. This "total annual income" of $7,100 each year in the budget did not include funds from ski passes and day tickets, what are called "user fees."

Brandi further explained that the tower lease funds go into an account used only for capital improvements at the hill, while money generated from user fees goes into the city's general fund which supports McSauba's operational expenses.

The city budget estimated that McSauba would bring in $20,000 from these user fees this year. Brandi said that the ski hill has already exceeded that figure by $18,000.

The user fee revenue goes toward McSauba's total operating expenses.

Brandi said that McSauba's normal operational cost is $74,000 a year, which is $36,000 over the user fee revenue. The city's general budget will contribute this remaining $36,000.

Brandi said a $40,000 annual contribution from the general fund to the recreation area's operating expenses is pretty typical.

Additionally, the planned capital improvements exceed the revenue the hill brings in from the tower leases by $86,700. City officials said this additional cost for these improvements will be paid from the general fund, where the hill's user fees are directed, and possibly from grants.

Brandi sees the community benefit from using McSauba as being the driving force behind the city's financial support.

Bo Boss, manager of McSauba, declined to comment.

Correction

A cutline under a picture of a lifeboat on page 13 of last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier was incorrect.

It should have stated the boat belonged to the Carl D. Bradley which sank in a November 1958 storm many miles from Beaver Island. Plus, Bill Cashman is the Beaver Island Historical Society's Director and the lifeboat is stored at the Marine Museum.

Court case highlights drug use near Charlevoix school

By JULIE MUSILEK
 Staff Writer

A jury trial got underway March 5 in the 33rd Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix involving drug use in Charlevoix High School.

The case will decide the fate of alleged marijuana dealer Nathan Zukowski, a former Charlevoix High School senior.

The case highlights the schools continued battle to keep drugs out of the hands of students.

"Fighting the alcohol and drug problem can't just be the school's problem. It has to be a cooperative effort between the community and all those who care. I think there is a lot of looking the other way in this town," school board member Ardeith Wieland said when asked about the case.

Zukowski, 17, of Charlevoix is charged with delivery of a controlled substance. The charge is based on an incident that allegedly occurred Dec. 6, 2000 two blocks from the Charlevoix High School campus.

Current Charlevoix High School student Will Granath, 15, testified that on Dec. 6 he left school 10 minutes prior to the official start of lunch hour.

He said that he went to get some lunch and one block from 7-11 he met with Zukowski, and allegedly bought marijuana from Zukowski at that time.

In the courtroom prosecuting attorney Jennifer Deegan asked Granath to identify his alleged supplier. He named and pointed to Zukowski.

Granath claimed on the stand he had never purchased marijuana from Zukowski before. He said that he knew Zukowski might have some based on conversations he had with him in a class where the two sat next to each other.

Granath said on the stand that he commonly brought extra money to school in case he came across a marijuana supplier.

But, during the trial, defense attorney Kraag Lieberman referred many times to alibi witnesses who have since come forward and said that Zukowski couldn't have sold Granath the marijuana because he was having lunch at Burger King with them when this transpired.

Granath said that after he purchased the marijuana he headed back to school and Zukowski proceeded in the opposite direction. He arrived at school and ran into a friend, also a Charlevoix High School freshman.

The friend, John Curtis, testified that he was walking over by the gym when he ran into Granath in the hall.

Charlevoix Charter users get option of digital cable

By JEREMY MCBAIN
 Editor

Charter Cable customers in Charlevoix will be seeing some additional changes to their service starting the morning of March 16.

The company recently announced it will be offering digital cable in Charlevoix. According to Sherrie Martin, Charter operations manager in northern Michigan, this will give customers better quality television, more choices in channels and more control over what they watch.

"They will be absolutely amazed at what it will bring them," Martin said.

For example, instead of receiving just one HBO or Cinemax channel, Charter customers have the option of several different versions of this channel, or they can purchase a package of channels to suit their tastes; such as a sports package or music package.

The new system also includes an interactive guide. Martin said this guide will give viewers the ability to search for programming based on subject and will give parents the option of blocking out certain channels.

According to Martin, this also comes at a price that is not much higher than what the customers currently pay for cable television. Prices for the digital service are between $49.95 and $54.95. There is separate pricing plans for the package deals.

All Charter customers who want just the basic channels do not have to switch to digital to receive cable service in Charlevoix, Martin added. However, customers who want premium cable — including movie channels — must switch to the new digital cable.

In order to receive the digital channels, customers must have a special receiver, which Charter rents for $6.95 a month. Martin said they do not have to have a digital television.

People who currently have premium channels and have a cable box, can exchange those boxes for the digital receiver from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. March 16 and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. March 17 at the American Legion Hall located at 106 East Garfield in Charlevoix.

Once customers sign up for the digital cable and receive the receiver, Martin said they can start watching the new channels right away.

Martin added, customers who have premium channels, but do not have digital cable, will have their service discontinued on the morning of March 16.

As for more basic cable channels, Martin said there are none currently scheduled but she would not be surprised if Charter decided to offer more in the next few months.

It would do this because some people are pretty irritable when they wake up. When they go to school, that anger might make them violent. Also, some people like to take out their anger on others.

Finally, students might possibly perform better academically with school starting later. One reason for that would be that when you get more sleep you have more energy in the morning. Besides that, studies have shown that teenagers' natural sleep patterns cause them to fall asleep later at night and awaken later in the morning.

In conclusion, I believe that starting school later would help with a few of the school's problems. We could perform better academically and prevent some violence by starting school later. Thank you for taking the time to read this letter.

Winn named as trustee for Community Foundation

Three new trustees will help guide fund development and charitable grant making at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

Jim Howell, Bill Lorne and John Winn were recently named to three year terms on the organization's governing board.

John
Winn

Howell lives in Boyne City, where he has been involved in Rotary and the Boyne City Economic Development Corporation. A past president of the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce and community booster, Howell is vice president for Commercial Lending at the Bank of Northern Michigan.

A founding trustee of the foundation, Lorne returns to the board after serving two prior terms, one as chairman. Lorne resides in East Jordan, where he is active in various civic organizations and service clubs. He is vice president for business development at the East Jordan Iron Works.

Charlevoix resident Winn is a consultant to the marine industry. He was a co-founder of Four Winns Boat Company in Cadillac. Since moving to Charlevoix, Winn has been active in numerous community and civic affairs. He currently serves on the Michigan Chamber of Commerce and the Michigan Waterways Commission.

The three new trustees join 12 other volunteer board members who come from throughout the county.

The foundation accepts donations from individuals and organizations and invests them in a permanent endowment. Each year, a portion of the endowment's earned income is used to make grants that support a variety of nonprofit programs and community initiatives in the area.

To date, the foundation has built an endowment of 115 separate funds — some earmarked for specific needs of charitable interests, other unrestricted.

Together, the funds are valued at more than $7 million. Since it began making grants, the community foundation has distributed more than $2.3 million to support local programs.

More information about the foundation is available by calling (231) 536-2440, or writing the foundation at P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727.

Woman's courage, vision were significant to church

By CHARLEVOIX CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Beacons of Blessing

Although we are this month celebrating women's history and the great progress they have made, still many women are struggling for a piece of it. Many have been abandoned, divorced, left homeless or without income. Anyone facing these challenges can take heart, there is practical help at hand.

Mary Baker Eddy

A look at history reminds us that many women have accomplished what perhaps the world thought to be impossible. Rosa Parks, the catalyst for stopping segregation on public busing; Gloria Steinem for her dedication to furthering women's rights regarding equal employment opportunities with men, to name two.

A third woman is Mary Baker Eddy.

Her personal life experience of one woman living most of her life in the 1800s can serve as a wonderful example of overcoming these very adversities.

Having been widowed early in her first marriage, divorcing her second husband because of his infidelity, so chronically ill most of her life that her only child was taken from her, often destitute and living in the homes of friends, she rose through it all to become known as one of the remarkable women of history.

Born in Bow, New Hampshire, she grew up in a family deeply rooted in the teachings of Holy Scripture so it was natural for her to turn to her Bible for comfort and healing.

She lived at a time in history when women had few, if any legal, political or social rights and many of her accomplishments were done after the age of 50 until close to her nineteenth birthday.

How did she do it? She discovered from her Bible the meaning of spirituality, the divine laws of metaphysical healing, and her true identity as a daughter of God. The dignity and power thus enabled her to overcome many adversities and she was impelled to set about to share this wonderful news with the world.

The Massachusetts legislature has honored her many contributions "as a Christian healer, an author, an educator, a religious leader, and a publisher..." This remarkable woman came to write a book that would make a permanent mark on the religious community of her day and which hasn't ceased to make its mark throughout the past century.

Since 1995, this book, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, her foundational work in the area of mind/body medicine and prayer-based healing, was listed reading for the symposium, "Spirituality and Healing in Medicine," sponsored by the Harvard Medical School, the Mind/Body Medical Institute, and the Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

Mrs. Eddy begins her book with these inspiring words, "To those leaning on the sustaining infinite today is big with blessings."

In Science and Health she goes on to explain her discovery of spirituality and metaphysical healing and its application to physical illness, unemployment, loneliness, parenting or any of the issues of daily existence.

Seeing what Mary Baker Eddy accomplished we have hope that we can overcome our challenges, too. We can celebrate Women's History Month by learning what these women of courage and vision have to teach us.

Newspapers deliver the community!

Only a few people were at the city council meeting when the health officer reported problems with the water supply. Thousands read about it in the hometown newspaper.

Eighty-three percent of local newspaper subscribers read most of the ads and stories in every issue. No single media reaches as many local homes with as much credibility as the hometown newspaper. For proven advertising response and a solid connection to the community, newspapers deliver the most value for the dollar.

William Kirk Schaller: Sept. 8, 1939 - Feb. 25, 2001

William Kirk Schaller, 61, publisher of the Potoskey News-Review, died Feb. 25, 2001, in France.

A memorial service will be at 2 p.m. Thursday, March 8, at the Potoskey United Methodist Church. Visitation will be 2-4 p.m. and 6-8 p.m. today, March 7, at Stone Funeral Home in Potoskey.

Kirk was born Sept. 8, 1939, in Potoskey, the son of William Albert and Doris G. (Frederickson) Schaller. He graduated from Potoskey Public Schools in 1957 and from Ferris State College in 1962 with a business degree.

On March 6, 1971, he married Elsa C. Andrews in Gaylord, and she survives.

Kirk had been associated with the Potoskey News-Review full-time for more than 40 years, succeeding his father, the late Albert Schaller, as publisher in 1979. He had worked in a variety of positions at his family's paper, beginning at the age of 4 sweeping floors, washing hand-set type, washing windows and delivering small orders of job-printing for his father. Later, he filled the positions of photographer, advertising sales, business manager and general manager.

He served as director of the board of the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce and on the Michigan Governor's Task Force studying the state's Single Business Tax.

He also served several terms on the board of directors of the Potoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce and its Retail Merchants Division. He was president of the Potoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce in 1985. Kirk had served as publicity chairman of the nine-county area for the Michigan Week Committee. He was a member of the Potoskey Jaycees and the Rotary Club of Potoskey.

He held memberships in various state and national newspaper organizations.

Besides enjoying being with his family, he was a passionate downhill skier, traveling around the world to enjoy that sport. He also was an avid sailor, participating for many years in the Wednesday night Charlevoix Yacht Club races on Lake Charlevoix. He also enjoyed boating, tennis and bicycling.

He liked having a good time and being with friends.

Survivors include his wife, Elsa; children, David D. Schaller of Mount Plymouth, Fla., John R. Schaller of Harbor Springs, Gretchen K. (Jeff) Arnold of Charlevoix, and Patrick R. Schaller of Potoskey; his mother, Doris Schaller Vernon, of Potoskey; brother, Brent H. Schaller, of Harbor Springs; and sister, Karen K. Lewicki, of Alanson.

Kirk was preceded in death by his father, William Albert Schaller, in 1979, and a grandson, Caden Grayson Arnold, in 2000.

In lieu of flowers, the family would request that donations be made in Kirk's name to the North Central Michigan College Foundation. A scholarship will be established in Kirk's name for students going into journalism/communications arts.

City addresses citizen complaints at meeting

He said that they have written about half a dozen tickets and have sent two snowmobilers to jail.

He added the majority of those that his officers have cited are suspended drivers who are not to operate any type of motor vehicle be it car or snowmobile.

Halverson added that just three nights after this February city council meeting a snowmobiler ran from officers in the city. After some investigation this individual was found and issued two citations.

Halverson added that the city police force is trying to respond to citizen concerns and that he has put an order in to the State of Michigan to get a list of registered snowmobile owners and their addresses.

From this list the police department, in conjunction with the local snowmobile club, plan to do a mass mailing sometime in October or November of 2001. The mailing will consist of the local designated trail map and local rules and regulations that snowmobilers in Charlevoix are expected to follow.

John Ferguson, president of the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club said that the club and the city worked hard to get the ordinance that allows snowmobiles in the city passed.

"It would really be a shame to let that go because of a few bad apples," he added.

Chamber of Commerce President Jacqueline Merta spoke on behalf of the Chamber and the Convention and Visitors Bureau in support of both the local snowmobile club and for keeping the downtown access route open to snowmobile traffic.

"Having winter activities in a community such as ours, where we see a lot of activity in the summer and little in the winter, is good for the Charlevoix economy," Merta said.

However, when residents asked what her position was on being able to use city streets to go to and from trails, Merta responded that the chamber hasn't addressed access to homes yet.

However, not all city residents left the meeting convinced that educating snowmobile users would solve the problems. City residents Don Seelye said he doesn't think that educating the ignorant will make the difference.

He explained his personal attempts at educating some of these misguided snow machine users including getting maps from the city and passing them out himself and following the snowmobile tracks to the owners home and addressing the issue directly.

"I'm not against snowmobilers, I just think that they are in the wrong place when they are coming through the city of Charlevoix. I'm open to suggestions, but I don't see a solution," Seelye said.

Band heads to state

The Charlevoix Middle School band is heading to state competition following a perfect score at a March 2 band competition called the District II Festival in Elk Rapids. The group received straight ones — on a scale of one to four — from three concert judges and one sight-reading judge. The band is composed of 62 seventh and eighth graders. (Courtesy photo)

Who sold drugs to Charlevoix High School student?

COURT

However, their testimony at this point became inconsistent.

Granath said that it was his friend's idea to use the shed and Curtis pointed to Granath as the one having decided to go to Chamberlain's home. Granath also said that they smoked along side the home and his friend said that the two were inside the shed when they smoked.

Police Chief Dennis Halverson's report states that Charlevoix High School junior, Josh Chamberlain was inside his residence having lunch with his girlfriend when the boys were in the backyard.

Josh Chamberlain's testimony was not heard on March 5, but he is listed as a witness in the case.

According to testimony, it was not long after the boys returned from their lunch outing that school administrators discovered Curtis was high in class.

Curtis said that after he was removed from class by a teacher who recognized signs that he was "high," he told assistant principle Keith Haske that he and Granath had smoked the marijuana in a small shed and that Granath had the marijuana and the pipe.

Haske testified that after hearing this confession he removed Granath from class and asked to search his locker. Haske told the court that Granath agreed and opened the locker.

Haske searched Granath's coat and found the marijuana inside the coat's right front pocket.

Haske then gave the coat to high school principle Gary Grundman.

Nowhere during Haske's testimony did he say that Zukowski's person or locker were searched on Dec. 6.

The parents of both Granath and Curtis were notified prior to police interrogation.

According to testimony, the State Police Crime Lab found no identifiable prints on the bag of drugs.

Granath and Curtis were suspended from school for three days.

Granath was charged and tried for possession of a controlled substance, marijuana. A hearing on the charge took place Jan. 15 in Probate Teen Court before Judge Frederick R. Mulhauser.

Granath was placed on probation for six months and will be subject to random drug and alcohol screenings during that time. He was also ordered to complete 40 hours of community service work.

Based on Granath's accusations, Zukowski was initially suspended for nine days.

After the nine day suspension,

Gary Grundman met with Zukowski and his mother and told them he planned to reinstate him under certain guidelines.

Grundman said that the guidelines included steering clear of Granath.

He further said that at the meeting he tried to express to Zukowski that this was a no win situation and that it would be better if he went to school somewhere else.

Zukowski later decided to enroll in another school district, rather than stay in the Charlevoix school system.

Zukowski was expected to testify yesterday.

Rayders close out the season with two wins

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports stringer

The Charlevoix Rayders closed out their regular season in impressive fashion, beating Kalkaska 76-56 and Traverse City St. Francis 77-46.

Charlevoix finished a perfect 12-0 in the Lake Michigan Conference and 10-0 at home. The conference championship was Charlevoix's first. The Rayders' closest conference game was an 18 point victory over Elk Rapids.

On Tuesday night against Kalkaska, the game was tight early on and the Rayders trailed 10-6 at one point. They rallied with a 6-0 run late in the quarter to pull even at 14-14 for the stanza. The second quarter was more of the same as Charlevoix pulled out to a 28-21 advantage but a Blazer free throw and a three-pointer by Kalkaska star Mick Knust cut the lead to 28-25.

The Rayders pushed the lead back up to 32-25 on two free throws by Rob Boss and a Scott Parrish jumper but a three-point play and another hoop, both by Knust brought Kalkaska back to within two. Minutes later, a Boss putback as time expired for the half pushed Charlevoix ahead 36-33. Kalkaska was a victim of their own terrible free throw shooting as they were only four for 14 from the charity stripe in the first half.

The Blazers looked as if they were ready to pull the upset early in the third as yet another Knust bucket cut the Rayder lead to 43-42. Finally the Rayders strung together a run as Patrick Gowell hit a clutch three-pointer and another jumper.

Jim Shepherd's field goal with 3:19 left in the quarter gave the Rayders their largest lead at 50-42.

A Shepherd three-pointer minutes later pushed the lead to 55-47 and two free throws by Boss extended it to 10 at 57-47. Kalkaska converted a three-pointer to cut the lead to 57-50 at the end of the quarter.

Coach Keith Haske's pep talk between quarters must have fired the Rayders up as they exploded for nine straight points at the start of the fourth quarter to pull out to a comfortable 66-50 lead. Jeremiah Teuscher then put the nail in the Blazer coffin by following a Kalkaska bucket with eight straight points of his own.

On the game, Jeremiah Teuscher led Charlevoix scorers with 19 points. Boss scored 16 and pulled down nine rebounds. Shepherd notched 15 points and grabbed six boards. Parrish, double and triple-teamed all night, finished with 11 points, seven rebounds and seven blocks. Gowell added nine points to round out the balanced attack.

There was no drama last Friday night as the Rayders jumped out early against Traverse City St. Francis and cruised to the win.

With Charlevoix holding an 8-6 advantage, Parrish scored six points in a 13-0 Rayder run that put the game essentially out of reach. The Glad-iators never were closer than 10 points the rest of the night.

The Rayder pressure defense was too much for the young St. Francis team to handle, leading to many points off turnovers for Charlevoix. They led at the end of one, 23-9 and at the half, 43-28. In the third quarter, the game turned sloppy, resulting in many whistles and turnovers.

The only highlight of the second half occurred with 6:22 left to play.

Parrish threw a behind the back pass to Doug Rieck who immediately returned the favor with a great touch pass. As Parrish soared for a dunk that would have brought down the capacity house, he was taken down by a tackle by a St. Francis player.

Parrish had 19 points and eight rebounds to lead the Rayders. Boss scored 14 and pulled down 12 caroms. Seniors Rieck and Jeremiah Teuscher, playing their final home games, scored 11 and nine respectively. Keith Daly chipped in with 10.

The junior varsity squad lost a heartbreaker to Kalkaska, 79-77 in overtime. Travis Smith's two free throws with no time left in regulation forced the extra stanza. They came back to beat conference champs Traverse City St. Francis, 77-65 to close their season with a 8-12 record.

Players prepare for March Madness tonight

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports stringer

It's time for the painted cars, the GO RAYDERS signs in windows on Bridge Street and long caravans of cars making long trips on wintry nights.

In other words, it's time for March Madness again in Charlevoix.

The Rayders' basketball team begins play in the single elimination state tournament this week.

Two years ago, the town of Charlevoix pulled together behind the "No Limit" Rayders who traveled down to the Jack Breslin Student Event Center on the campus of Michigan State University for the 1999 Class C Final Four, falling in the state semifinals to Bath.

Last year was supposed to be a down year for the Rayders, but they repeated as district and regional champions, falling only to the eventual state champions from Negaunee.

This year's team hopes to make a similar run, going into the tourney with a 17-3 record and 13 straight wins.

"We're excited. It feels like a new season is starting," junior guard Patrick Gowell said. Junior center Scott Parrish added, "I'm looking forward to it. It was a blast last year."

Coach Keith Haske came to Charlevoix four years ago, having won three conference championships while coaching at St. John's High School, but never advancing beyond the districts. Haske looked forward to coaching in Charlevoix, in part because of the possibility of making a tournament run.

Although the Rayders lost All-Stater Sean Stockman to graduation, it looks as if they may have another All-Stater in the 6 foot, 6 inch Parrish. Any Rayder shot at making it back to the Breslin rests largely on his shoulders.

If Parrish is voted to an All-State team, he will be the second in his family as his sister Lisa received the same honor three times, from 1996-1998.

While Parrish leads in the scoring column, the floor general for the Rayders is 6 foot, 2 inch Gowell, who like Parrish, started last year for Charlevoix as a sophomore. One of the highlights of the season for Gowell was holding Steve McDonald, a first team All-Stater for top-ranked and unbeaten St. Ignace to 12 points earlier in the season.

The emotional leader of the Rayders is 6 foot, 4 inch junior power forward Rob Boss.

"I hope my attitude will help the team. I make a speech each game after we're announced (to fire the team up)," Boss said. He also leads through his unselfish actions.

"If Scotty (Parrish) is hot, I'll keep getting it to him. I couldn't care less how many points I get. I'm just trying to get rebounds and get everyone else involved."

In Class C, one great player can take a team a long way, but a state championship team must have balance.

The Rayders have the big scorer in Parrish, the floor leader in Gowell and the rebounding and enthusiasm of Boss. They also have the three-point bombing of 6 foot, 1 inch junior Jim Shepherd.

After averaging 19 points per game last year on the JV squad, Shepherd's role changed to more of a supporting one this year.

"We have a lot of people who can score and a lot of people to distribute the offense. You might lose stats with scoring, but it's easier to play with people who are good. Pat (Gowell) is a great point guard and he helps me get shots. I'm actually probably getting more shots this year than I probably ever did," Shepherd explained.

The lone senior starter on the Rayder squad is Jeremiah Teuscher, who Haske has referred to as the "heart and soul" of the team.

In addition to his work on the hardwood, Teuscher quarterbacked Charlevoix's playoff football team this year and will star this spring for the Rayders on the baseball diamond.

"We have a group that works hard and we all have the same emphasis—work hard in practice and it pays off on the field or the court," Teuscher said. "It would be great to go out my senior year with all three conference championships and win the all-sports conference championship and get that banner and show them Charlevoix is the best."

With Haske's fullcourt pressure going for a full 32 minutes each game, a strong bench is vital to the Rayders' success. The speed of Ryan Rafacz, the rebounding and interior defense of Keith Daly, the shooting of Doug Rieck and the ballhandling of sophomore Nate Teuscher will be instrumental in determining just how deep the Rayders can go in this year's tourney.

The road to Breslin begins in Harbor Springs this week for the Rayders where they will defend their district title. Charlevoix drew a bye and will open play Wednesday, March 7 against East Jordan.

The district finals will take place on Friday, March 9. The matchup will likely feature the Rayders and the host Rams, who have been hot as of late, posting wins over Traverse City St. Francis and Kalkaska. Harbor has shown new life since bringing up freshman Dean Cosens from their JV squad.

This year's regional will be in Cadillac where Charlevoix hopes to defend its title for the second straight year.

A potential opponent is undefeated Suttons Bay, ranked fifth in Class C and who routed the Rayders earlier this season.

Parrish said, "We played bad up there (against Suttons Bay). It was an ugly game for us. Now they think we're overrated. They may be overlooking a lot of people."

Shepherd is also looking forward to a possible rematch.

"We have to take one game at a time, but that game is circled on our calendar. When we get there, we definitely want revenge," he declared.

In the event the Rayders make it to the quarterfinals for the third straight year, they would likely face either top-ranked St. Ignace or last year's state champion, Negaunee.

"It would be huge to beat St. Ignace. They've owned us the last two years. They are the bar right now for us to measure ourselves against," Boss said. "Most people are looking at Suttons Bay and St. Ignace but I look at Negaunee. They beat us and they got to win the state championship. They lost one kid so it's pretty much the same team that beat us. We're pretty much brand new and we want to show that we can do something like that (state championship)."

It is clear that state championship is on the mind of this team. In fact, not just one championship, but two.

Parrish summed up the team's thoughts.

"We are working toward the main goal which is a state championship. Lots of people would be happy just to make it to Breslin but this group of kids are not. We're looking at a state championship the next two years," he said.

Some tips to keep your back healthy on trips

You work hard all year, saving for that special vacation. But travel, though exciting, can be both mentally and physically stressful.

Nina Leib physical therapist at On-site Physical Therapy and member of the Private Practice Section of the American Physical Therapy Association said back pain is one potential vacation spoiler. To avoid back strain or injury, Leib offers some useful tips that are explained below.

When driving long distances, stop every one and a half hours or so for a stretch break. Be sure to stand fully erect and walk around for a few minutes. Gently leaning slightly backward from the waist a few times can help relieve tension in the lower back.

Most car or airline seats are uncomfortable for long trips. Try folding a towel one to two times lengthwise, then roll it up jellyroll style, about two inches in diameter. Place the roll across the center of your back at about the belt line. Be sure your buttocks and shoulders are back against the seat. This should keep the seat more comfortable and keep the lower back in a good position.

Be careful when lifting luggage. Use two smaller suitcases instead of one large one.

That way, you can carry one in each hand to help balance the load. Remember, humans are not designed to be pack mules. Do not load yourself down with too many bags. You are more likely to lose your footing and strain yourself.

Lifting luggage out of the trunk of your car can often be awkward. Make sure to position yourself in front of the trunk, bending at the knees and hips when reaching into the trunk. Keep your feet apart and your back erect and bend your knees.

Vacations often bring about once a year activities such as sailing or tennis. Be sure to properly warm up before you start any activity and don't try to get a year's worth of activity into one week.

If you do experience back pain while traveling, rest and ice can help decrease pain. But if the pain persists, contact your local physical therapist. Physical therapists are experts in managing back pain. They can help you understand the cause of your back pain and suggest what you can do to alleviate the symptoms and prevent further injury.

Lawsuits dropped against township, board

SCHOOL

The document states that the fund will be used to "assist in the purchase or acquisition of land, interests in land or natural resources, conservation easements, development rights to protect and enhance the scenic corridors, prime farmlands, rural character, environment, or other unique or rare natural features or resources within Marion Township."

"Improvements" to the township zoning ordinance include a revision of the standards used for considering special use permits. These revised criterion are to help guide the township so "proposed uses and projects will not interfere with or adversely effect the natural resource, rural character, open space, farmland, fiscal resources, and other values identified by the zoning ordinance and township land use plan."

Olson said, "School or no school, sprawl is a concern the township needs to address. There was some concern from the beginning, even on the township's part about the adequacy of the standards in the zoning ordinance. It made sense to correct these issues to better manage sprawl."

The settlement agreement and the order for dismissal do not impact the case currently pending in circuit court, Kenneth Staley, et al. vs. Board of Education, Charlevoix Public Schools, and Dr. John J. Sturock, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools.

Oral arguments in the case will be heard this summer.

Parents have many choices in preschools

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Many families search high and low for the perfect refrigerator, one that fits the needs and personality of the home — eventually choosing the one with the right gadgets, space and price.

This is the same approach educators suggest you use when choosing your child's preschool provider. The key is to shop around until you've met your child's match.

Of non-profit preschools locally, Charlevoix parents have three choices: Kids Corner, Charlevoix Children's House and Head Start.

Each of the three educate students age 3 to 5 through play, but do so using different teaching methods including: the cooperative approach, the Montessori method and parent empowerment/developmental creative.

Kids Corner

Charlevoix residents Phyllis Hess and Marylu Norton started Kids Corner, located in the Charlevoix Congregational Church, a cooperative preschool, in September of 1983. Since then, teachers, toys and students have come and gone but the strength of the program has remained.

Mary Beth Zimmerman, a Charlevoix resident of 15 years, is the new head instructor at Kids Corner. Zimmerman brings with her a bachelor's degree in education, an endorsement in early childhood education and teaching experience from time spent at Head Start in Petoskey.

Kids Corner president Pam Barnes said that the school is helping students develop skills and is preparing them for their future.

"Kindergarten teachers stress that they want children who come in to be able to socialize, to sit down and listen to a story,

They are not worried about whether or not they know their ABC's and their sounds. They will learn those things in kindergarten," Barnes said. "We try to create an atmosphere where play and academics converge."

The cooperative environment at Kids Corner is "cooperative" because of the parent/teacher relationship in the classroom. Zimmerman is assisted in each session by a parent helper.

"It is fun for parents. At this age parents want to be able to participate in their child's education," Zimmerman said.

Zimmerman and her parent helper shares the responsibility of about eight children.

The classroom is currently filled with various centers to create its academic/play environment including: a water table, a sandbox, writing and computers.

Montessori

The Montessori learning model followed by Charlevoix Children's House differs from the Kids Corner cooperative setting in some basic ways.

The Montessori setting is a more structured learning environment than both Kids Corner and Head Start.

"A child must have freedom to develop; but freedom is a goal, a point of arrival, and not a starting point. True freedom implies responsibility and self-discipline," a pamphlet distributed by the school states. "In a Montessori class, the child is helped toward self-discipline by offering him limited choices at first and then gradually expanding the possibilities of choice as the child becomes able to choose responsibly."

School director Deborah Saygers Hobbs, 46, of Central Lake said that this "structure" doesn't mean that students are being pushed academically, but that the objects in the classroom are set up in such a way to encourage learning.

She said that the environment in the classroom is the school's curriculum.

"Montessori is more geared toward following children. They will search out and find what they need," Hobbs said.

Hobbs considers herself to be a directress because the child leads his/her learning process and she and her assistants are there to guide their work — the active link between the child and the activities.

The classroom has four specific academic areas. One area is called, practical life. Here students learn skills needed in their daily lives like dressing themselves, pouring liquids, setting the table and using a ladle. They learn to take care of and respect their own environment.

Beaver Island resident keeps area's history alive

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Beaver Island resident Robert Cole and the Beaver Island Historical Society are working on keeping the stories of the past alive.

In 1990, Cole started interviewing the memories of the 12 oldest living native-born Beaver Islanders in order to create an oral record of the area's history. The project was sponsored by the Beaver Island Historical Society and the Beaver Island Library.

According to Cole, the project was designed to be taken up by the community, but it never was. Thus, for the last 10 years, the oral history project basically faded away.

However, Cole recently got the project back up and running and has already collected three more interviews with native islanders.

"The goal is to collect 25 interviews with 25 subjects and make the interviews available to the public through the Print Shop Museum," Cole said. He added he is also trying to make the transcripts of the interviews available on the internet at www.beaverisland.net/history.

To achieve this goal, Cole is not only looking for subjects to interview, but funding to keep the project going.

"I am appealing to three separate grant entities to get money to travel to native islanders who no longer live here and are in their 80s and 90s," Cole said.

The project is focusing on Beaver Island's history in the Twentieth Century through anecdotal stories of life on the island. Cole said a lot of it revolves around the Irish-American presence on the island.

The project is partially of significance to historians because of the unique situation that comes with living on an island.

"Because we were isolated, we held on to a lot of traditions that might have faded on the mainland," Cole said. He said this type of project would be great for a study of cultural history and not just a strict study of the island's local history.

The project is also special to Cole because it gives him more respect in the island and island life. "Because I am native born and grew up in this culture, I grew up with these stories. My sense of respect and appreciation for the culture has deepened," he said.

"One thing that impresses me is the degree of closeness (on the island). There is a sense of identity. There is a great deal of pride here held by those who were descendants of the original settlers."

Cole added he also enjoys recording these stories because they tell of the strength the residents of Beaver Island have, especially when faced with the many obstacles — economic, infrastructure and comfort — that mainlanders do not have.

"They worked very hard against this back-drop," Cole said.

But, time is Cole's enemy on this project, as his subjects are getting older.

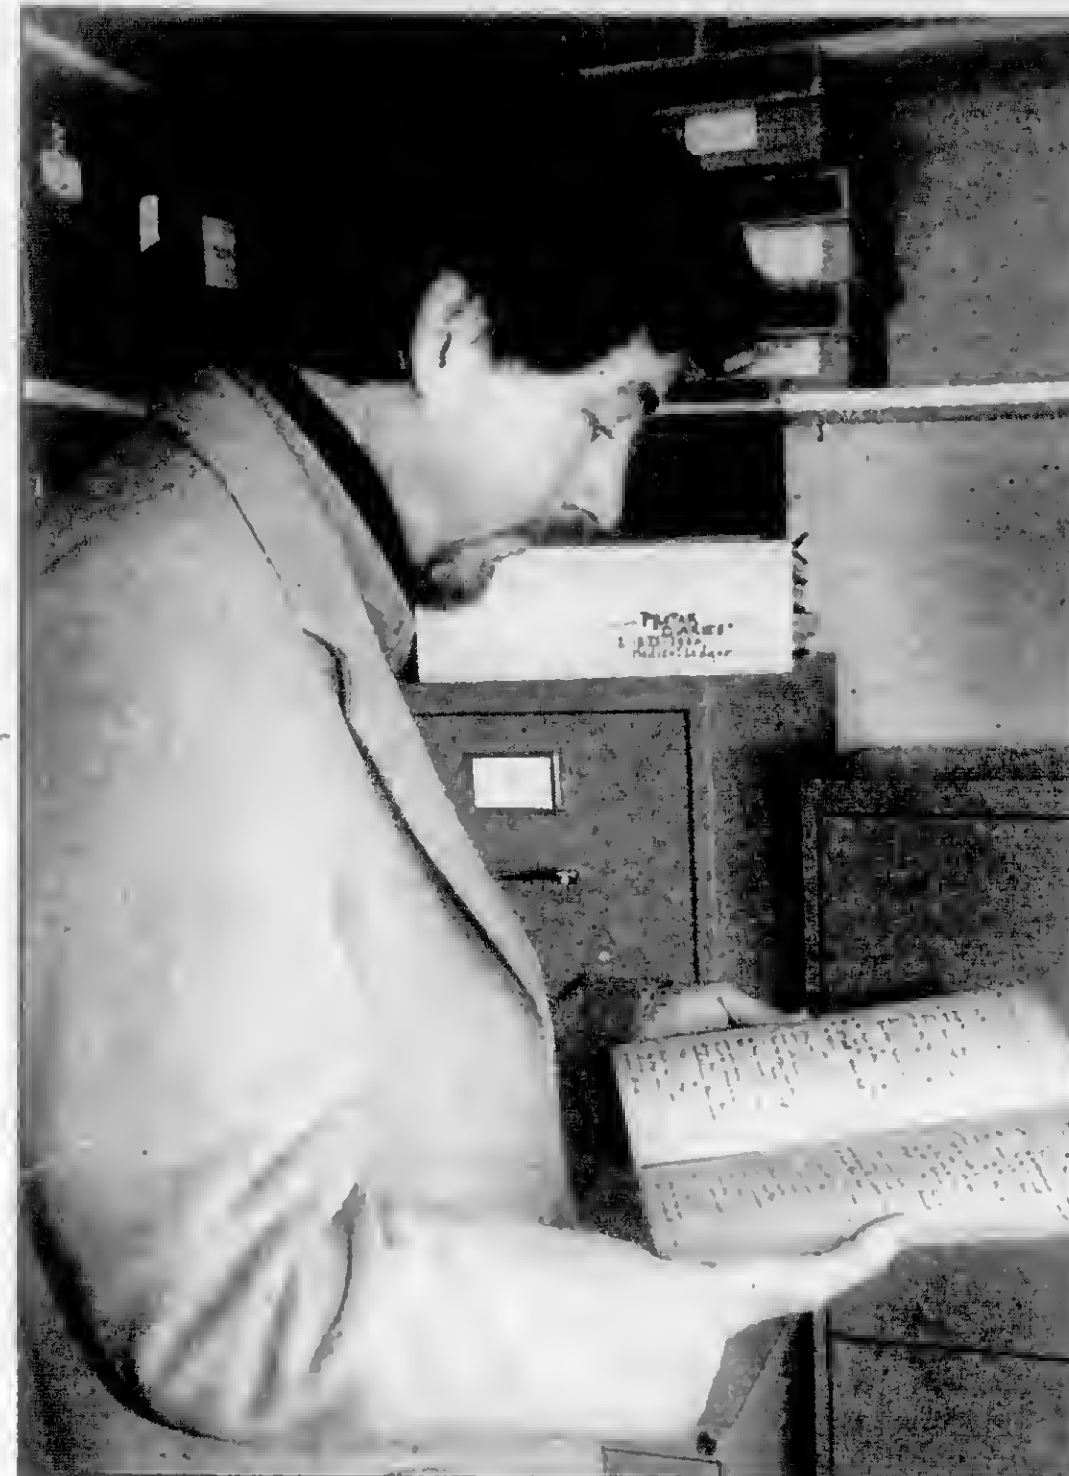

"They die without very much warning," he said.

Another problem Cole must overcome are the logistics of getting to these people.

"Some subjects live far away. It takes considerable time and money to get to them," he said.

In order to find subjects in time to record their memories, Cole is appealing to the public to contact him if they know of someone they think would be a good person to interview for this project.

Cole can be contacted by calling (213) 448-2254 or writing to the Beaver Island Historical Society at P.O. Box 263, Beaver Island, 49782.

Free trees from Arbor foundation

Ten free white pine trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during March 2001.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit foundation's "Trees for America" campaign.

"The white pines will add year-round beauty to your home and neighborhood," John Rosenow, the foundation's president, said. "They are fast-growing landscape trees with soft needles and graceful branching. You can use them as specimen trees or as a privacy screen or windbreak...even as a beautiful sheared hedge."

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between now and May 31 with enclosed planting instructions. The six to 12 inch trees are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to Arbor Day, the Foundation's bimonthly publication, and The Tree Book with information about tree planting and care.

To become a member of the Foundation and receive the free trees, send a $10 contribution to TEN FREE WHITE PINE TREES, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, Neb.

Students get good marks on state test

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Many bank accounts belonging to Charlevoix High School seniors looking ahead to college will be $2,500 ahead this fall.

According to recent reports 62.7 percent of the class scored high enough on the MEAP test to receive the Merit award, a $2,500 scholarship. The 62.7 percent is the calculation before the state adjusts for special education.

This means that, like last year, Charlevoix High School has proven its academic success in the state of Michigan.

Last year, 78 percent of the graduating class received the Merit award which placed Charlevoix fifth in the state for their performance on the test. High school testing director John Prescott said that Charlevoix was beat by three class A schools and one gifted and talented school in Grand Rapids.

MEAP testing scores are not required by all Michigan colleges like the national test, the ACT, but Prescott said that there are three in the state that do ask to see students' results. Colleges that request the results include: Saginaw Valley State University, Western Michigan University and Northern Michigan University.

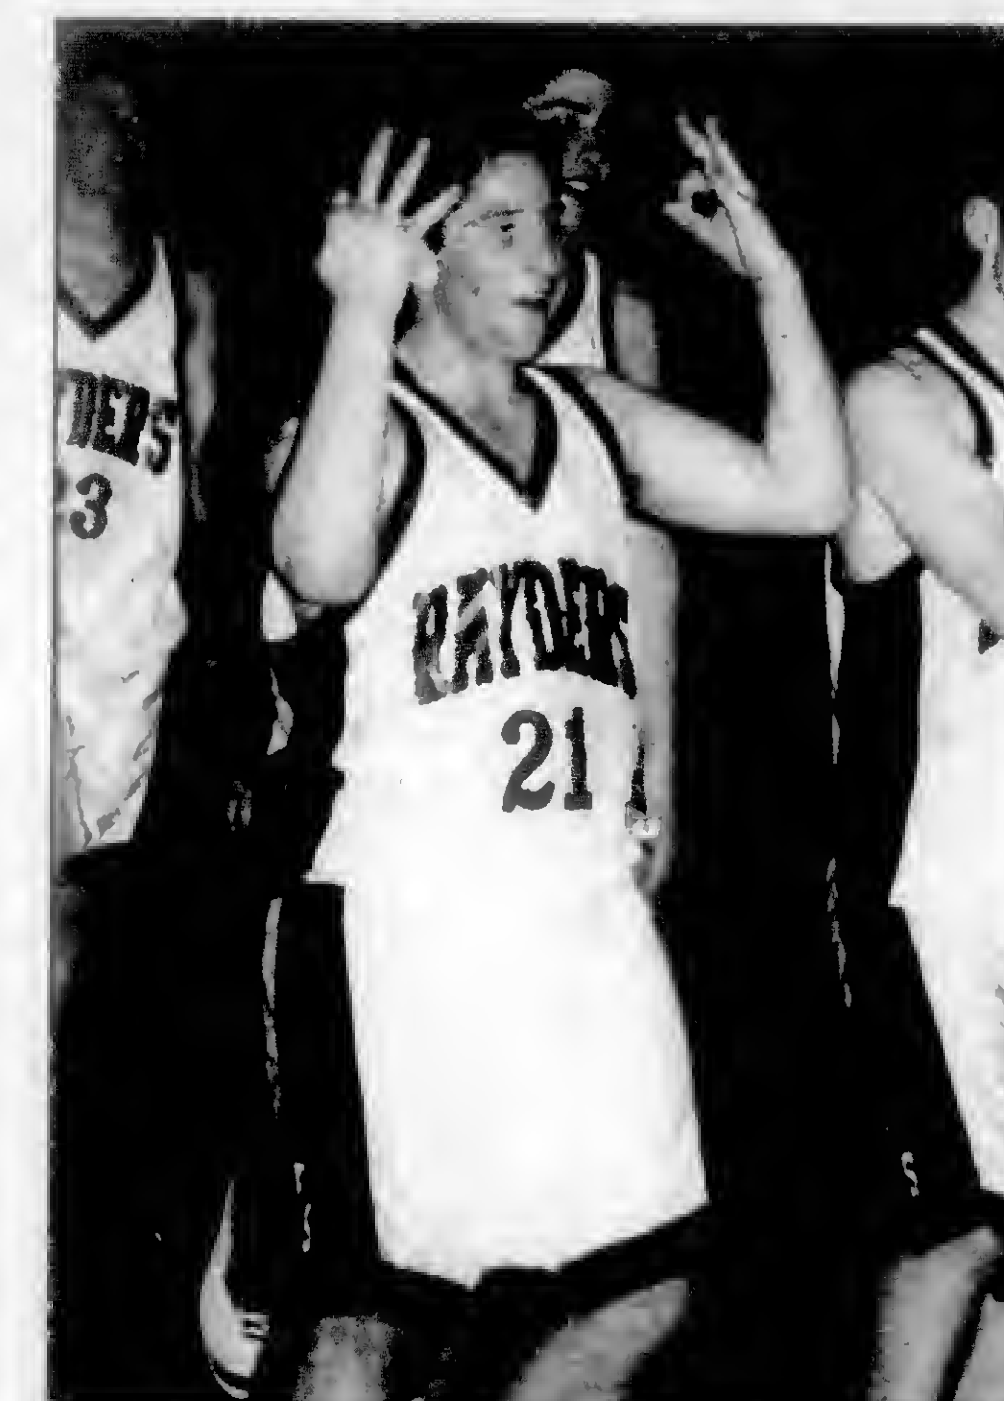

However, as Prescott explained, the intent of the test is not to help get Michigan students into college but it is an avenue used by the government to monitor Michigan school districts.

"The purpose of MEAP is to make sure schools are teaching the curriculum as dictated by the state of Michigan. The state is being the teacher saying, 'Here is what you should have learned. Let me make sure you've got it,'" Prescott said.

After reviewing a complete set of all Michigan schools test results from the 1999-2000 school year at MeritAward.state.mi.us, it is evident that Charlevoix has "got it."

Former student acquitted of drug dealing charge

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After about an hour-and-a-half of deliberation, a jury acquitted Nathan Zukowski, 17, March 7 in the 33rd Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix.

The jury found the former Charlevoix High School senior not guilty of delivery of the controlled substance, marijuana.

Zukowski was charged with the crime following an incident Dec. 6 at Charlevoix High School. According to reports and testimony, after lunch on Dec. 6, teachers at the school discovered a freshman student "high" in class. The student, John Curtis, 14, admitted to smoking marijuana with fellow student, Will Granath, 15, at lunch nearby. School officials searched Granath's locker and found the marijuana.

Under questioning, Granath said Zukowski had sold him the drugs. School officials suspended Curtis and Granath for three days and Zukowski for nine. Granath was also charged with possession of a controlled substance in teen probate court and given community service and probation. Zukowski was charged with selling the drugs to Granath.

Unlike Granath, police did not search Zukowski's locker or person the day of the incident. This is because school had let out for the day.

In an interview after the trial, Zukowski said the case should have never gone to court because Granath's testimony was the main source of evidence and his testimony was inconsistent.

"I feel that I was unjustly treated. The school kicked me out when they had no evidence or proof," he said.

Anne Zukowski added, "I am very happy and relieved it is all over and my son can finally get on with his life."

Zukowski completed his requirements for graduation at Hemingway School in Boyne Falls. He said that he plans to attend Grand Rapids Community College in the fall.

Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas said testimony of a change in stories by Granath to school officials may have lead the jury to their verdict.

"That always causes difficulty with juries in terms of credibility," Pajtas said.

According to testimony, after Zukowski returned from his nine day suspension, Granath came to Charlevoix High School principal Gary Grundman with a different story than he told Dec. 6.

However, based on Granath's demeanor at the time, Grundman testified he believed the student had been threatened to change his story. He added a teacher had seen Zukowski and Granath talking during a class Dec 18.

But, during Granath's testimony on March 6, he said he did not feel threatened during the conversation that took place between the boys.

Police chief Dennis Halverson, who arrested Zukowski, said that the jury's decision doesn't effect city officers' approach and they will continue to battle drugs in local schools.

"We are there to help the school out. Our resolve isn't affected by this. We have a role to play in keeping the proper education environment," Halverson said.

"We are going to be aggressive in combating drugs in schools. We did our part and the jury did their part, this doesn't affect our direction in this area. We consider this (drug use in school) to be a priority issue."

School working on solutions to drug, alcohol use

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Increased reports and incidents of drug and alcohol use in Charlevoix High School among students from November to December last year prompted school and local law enforcement officials to take action.

According to Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson, he was receiving reports of alcohol use and rumors of drug use in the school last fall. He even had a couple of incidents where officers were called in due to students drinking at school and at basketball games.

"We had meetings with the administration and the student body to address those concerns," he said. "Obviously that activity is a bad reflection on all of us."

Halverson said the school took action on it and started studying ways to address the problem.

He added he has not heard of any more problems at the school since December.

At the time, it was determined one of the best ways to stop drug use and drinking at the school was to appeal to seniors in the high school.

"Students have to help establish their own good environment. I think it is pretty safe to say they rose to the occasion," Halverson said.

High school principal Gary Grundman said the seniors at the school took the initiative to talk to the younger students.

"The seniors felt the same thing, that there was a problem. They were very concerned about this," Grundman said. "They actually went into the classrooms and spoke to the students without the teachers being present."

Grundman added the seniors that took part in this have also inquired about talking with students in the middle and elementary schools on drug and alcohol use.

For further help in this problem, the school has also been talking with Scott Kelly, the director of BASES, a local teen center that specializes in helping students with drug and alcohol problems.

Kelly said he sat down with the school and looked at a number of possible solutions to drug and alcohol use on campus. He stressed he did not think this latest rash was an indication of increased use among teens, but only some really out-in-the-open use by a few students.

The first thing the school and Kelly did was take a survey of the students on drug and alcohol use. The preliminary results of that survey were returned recently and "(Students) have to help establish their own good environment. I think it is pretty safe to say they rose to the occasion."

Dennis Halverson,
Charlevoix police chief are just waiting for the finishing touches to the document.

Kelly also said it was decided that more education needs to be given to the students and parents about drugs and alcohol. He said it will be easier to determine what type of education is necessary when the surveys are finalized.

The school currently requires all freshmen to take a drug and alcohol awareness class.

Additionally, Kelly said there was talk at the meeting about closing the campus.

"In December there was a lot of concern about how long it will be before someone gets hurt real bad," Kelly said.

Grundman confirmed the school is looking at ways to close the campus at lunch. He added he is unsure if it will take place before the construction on the new high school.

"We would have a real difficult time closing it here because of the size of our cafeteria. But, we are looking at ways to close the campus as early as next year," he said.

Further solutions to the problem discussed at the meeting were: Educating and updating the staff at the schools, more referral for student assistance and the consideration of an alternative education setting in the city of Charlevoix.

Grundman said an alternative education school in Charlevoix is being worked on right now by Charlevoix schools superintendent John Sturock.

But, what does the school do right now when it catches a student using drugs or alcohol on campus?

Grundman said the school currently has a policy of immediately calling the student's parents and the police. Students are also suspended from school for a length of time that is determined by the offense, he added.

"The whole idea is at that point there is a problem that needs to be addressed. That is why it is real important that we involve parents," Grundman said.

A student caught doing drugs or alcohol on campus can also expect to go to mandatory drug screening at BASES Teen Center. They can choose to go elsewhere, but this would be at their parents expense, Grundman said.

To help students with substance abuse problems, Grundman said the school has two full-time counselors on staff. The school is also very good at communicating between teachers, students and counselors to determine what students are in need of help.

"It gives us a chance to be proactive rather than reactive," Grundman said.

Off campus, students can get help for substance abuse problems at BASES Teen Center, located at 208 West Lincoln Street in Charlevoix. All of BASES services are free of charge and students will be with trained professionals.

Kelly added, "I think as a community, we need to try to get some of these things pulled together. We need to increase the level of education and increase the awareness of available resources. We need to accept some responsibility for taking care of our little corner of the world."

OPINIONS

Alternative ed, closed campus are needed

EDITORIAL

Well, you can't say officials in this community look the other way.

Last fall and into December, Charlevoix High School was experiencing a problem with students using alcohol on campus. To make matters worse, their were rumors of drug use on and near campus — which in at least one case, proved to be true. It wasn't as if more students were doing illegal things, it was just that some students seemed to have a brazen attitude toward the rules and openly broke them.

But, rather than look away and pretend there wasn't a problem, school officials, local law enforcement officials and even the students rose up and started to work on solutions. Through meetings they determined a plan of attack and students even started telling other students the dangers of these substances.

It was and continues to be a cooperative effort on the part of a number of different groups.

We would like to salute them for taking a stand, especially the students. The students are showing the community just how good of leaders they will be in the future through their actions to help stop this problem on campus.

However, we would also like to encourage the school to follow through with the implementation of some of these solutions they worked out in the meetings.

Specifically, the creation of an alternative education environment and creating a closed campus at lunch.

Currently, the only source of alternative education for students is located near Boyne City. This creates a tremendous burden on Charlevoix students needing this service and their families.

Secondly, it is a fact that an open school campus at lunch has and will continue to create problems for the students and community.

This doesn't just mean students taking part in illegal activities. With so many students leaving the safety of the high school grounds at lunch, it is only a matter of time before someone gets hurt.

A closed campus helps keep the students safe by keeping them in a controlled environment throughout the day. We urge the school to continue looking at ways to close the campus as early as next year.

Don't wait for that new school to be built, the problem is already here.

Furthermore, as a community we all need to realize that Charlevoix is not encased in a bubble that keeps out the problems the rest of the world faces.

Only through our combined efforts as a community can we solve these problems. While they are doing a great job addressing it, school officials and students still need our help.

Be cautious when reading 'scientific study' results

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

We have all read or heard the phrase "studies show that..." Most often when someone is trying to convince us to buy whatever they are selling, whether an idea or a product.

We are likely to believe that a "study" is significant science that proves something. It is important to know just what a study is. If I keep six laboratory rats in cages, feed three of them garlic and the other three something else, see how long each rat lives and what it dies from, when I publish the results somewhere (even on the Internet,) I have conducted a study. If one of the garlic eating rats lived longer than all the others, I could claim on the basis of my study that garlic can increase cardiac health or even life-span. After such a study, someone could say, "Studies show that garlic can decrease the risk of heart attacks and premature death."

The general community of scientists will not say that, but someone wanting to sell garlic capsules could.

What sort of study would make certain the efficacy of garlic? It would require not six rats, but thousands of people. The people would have to be divided into two groups perfectly matched by age, sex, ethnic origin and geographic locality. Both groups have identical diets with the exception of garlic. One group eats some quantity of garlic each day and the other does not.

Then we would follow both groups for years to see whether one group lived longer, developed heart or circulatory disease more frequently or was generally healthier. It is pretty easy to say that no such study has ever been conducted. If our large study showed no difference between the groups, we would still not know for certain whether garlic had positive health effects. If the garlic eating group lived much longer and healthier lives we could say with some confidence that garlic is a valuable health aid.

Science can be used in all sorts of ways to support an individual point of view. It is possible to arrange a study small enough or uncertain enough to find the result someone might want.

Real science doesn't work that way. Real science is looking for that elusive thing we might call a fact or some small fragment of truth. Science in the pay of commercial or ideological interest is only concerned with buttressing a previously decided point of view: only concerned with finding or conducting "studies" that support that point of view. Such studies can almost always be found or provided. We should all try to understand the difference between real science and the mostly bogus science that is meant to deceive.

The finest example of science in the thrall of a political or ideological point of view I have encountered recently is what is framed in the press as the "debate" about a link between abortion and breast cancer.

There are a number of studies, some of which seem to suggest that there is an increased risk of breast cancer among women who have had an abortion.

Other studies seem to suggest that there is a decreased risk of breast cancer among women who have had an abortion.

Abortion opponents use one set of studies and supporters of abortion rights use another set of studies.

Proper scientific approaches would rightly argue that while this is surely an important health matter, when studies show no consistent results then nothing has been proven or even suggested. "There is no proven link between abortion and breast cancer," is an appropriate scientific statement.

However, political groups have too much at stake. Laws have been passed on the basis of the flawed conclusions of interest groups.

Already, three states have laws requiring that women be informed of the potential risk of breast cancer associated with abortion and other states are contemplating such legislation.

I take no serious side in the debate about abortion, but I must object most strongly to the haphazard, ignorant or positively dishonest use of the information provided to us by the activities of science.

We could learn whether there is a real link between abortion and breast cancer, or between garlic and heart disease, but we are unlikely to be able to in a political climate that uses selected bits of science for its own selfish ends.

Science rules, but only if we know what constitutes real science.

Letters to the editor

Names shouldn't have been used

Editor:
This letter is about the high school drug case. Since when are you allowed to print the names of minors in the paper?

This story could have been told in the same way without using names. I am sure this was hard enough on the kids and parents when it happened, but now it is in their face again and everyone knows who the kids were. Someone should have thought twice before writing this story in such detail.

If this happened with my kids, I would want to deal with it in private to protect the kids. I am glad to see the school is doing something about the drug and alcohol problems, but the paper was wrong putting the names in the paper. The kids are going to be labeled now whether they were guilty or not.

Please don't think I am not supporting the school because I am. I just don't agree with telling everyone the names of the kids involved and if this is such a huge problem, why is this the first one we have read about?

Sue Macks
Charlevoix

Editor's note: The story being discussed is about a drug offense trial involving minors in last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier. This was a public trial and the incident in question took place near a public school. It is the policy of this paper to print the names of witnesses, defendants and plaintiffs in almost every trial story, regardless of age. The exception to this rule is names of sexual assault victims. There are no laws preventing minors' names from being published in a newspaper.

Case highlights zero tolerance's failure

Editor:
The chief of police, the Charlevoix Public School Administration and the Charlevoix County prosecutor's office have forever changed the lives of young Nate Zukowski and his family.

For the Zukowski family, the last three months have been a nightmare. Nate was suspended from high school in the last half of his senior year and for over three months, the threat of imprisonment for a crime he did not commit hung over his head. Nate has no police record, was a good student and is known for being a hard worker and a "good kid." How could this injustice happen? A freshman student was caught coming to school high and having marijuana in his locker? On the witness stand, this young man stated that he was advised to name names so "things would go smoother." The freshman student told police that he had purchased the marijuana from Nate. Nate proclaimed his innocence and even under the frightening information from (Charlevoix Police) Chief (Dennis) Halverson that he could be imprisoned for up to seven years, Nate stood his ground.

Incredibly, the police never asked Nate what he was doing and who he was with at the time of the supposed crime! Nate never even knew when the sale supposedly took place. Two weeks after he was suspended from school, Mrs. Zukowski was able to get a copy of the police report. If the police had bothered to ask Nate, they would have discovered that Nate could not have been guilty, but no one asked. In spite of a startling lack of evidence and in spite of the freshman accuser's attempt to change his story, the authorities went forward with prosecution. The case came down to the word of a scared freshman student against Nate. The freshman was suspended for three days and is on probation. Nate was forced to leave friends and the school he had attended since seventh grade. In order to finish his senior year and go onto college, Nate enrolled in the Hemingway School in Boyne City. He has completed his requirements and will graduate, but he will not receive his diploma with old friends and teachers at Charlevoix High School. Three months after he was first accused, Nate was found innocent by the jury. But, Nate and his family have paid a huge price.

No one wants kids to use drugs. Drugs take a horrible toll on our world every day. But the law must be enforced equitably and fairly. It has not been. When the war on drugs and zero tolerance policies become a war on our children and loved ones, something is very wrong.

P.S. It is not helpful for the Courier to name the minor freshman student. The young accuser is also a victim of an ill-enforced, punitive drug policy.

Cabin fever cures

Editor:
I should have written sooner, but I am suffering from a bad case of cabin fever.

After reading the "cures" in the recent edition of the Courier, I feel obligated to add my two cents worth. There is no cure for cabin fever. Only spring. Green grass, 50 degrees, blue sky, no snow, bare ground, dirt, you know what I mean.

I know how you feel and no amount of dancing, or exercise, or snowmobiling, or skiing, or skating, or sledding, or anything connected with the outdoors is going to help. It's cold out there and the ground is covered with white stuff. I'm tired of it. I'm tired of putting on 14 layers of clothing to go out and snowmobile boots, and heavy socks, gloves, hats, long underwear, so many layers it's hard to move. Your arms stick straight out from your body and God help you if you happen to fall down. You'll never get up without a tow truck.

So, what will we do? What can we do? Spending money always makes me feel better. If I had any to spend. Going by-bye in the car is fun. Just point it south and keep going until the temp is 20 degrees warmer and there is no snow on the ground. The only thing wrong with this is you eventually have to turn around and go back home. If there is not a raging blizzard by the time you turn around to go home. And anyway, who can afford gas just to go by-bye. A nice weekend getaway at a local resort would be nice, too. If they have a pool and a world class restaurant. Just think of it, three days without having to go outdoors. Sounds good to me. And my final suggestion, which also costs a bundle of money, just hop in your private jet and fly somewhere sunny and warm.

I'm sorry, all my suggestions seem to be for millionaires who probably don't suffer from cabin fever anyway. I guess we'll just have to wait for spring. Can't be long now.

Start school later

Editor:
I am writing to you about starting school later in the morning. First of all, every morning we're waking up at approximately 6 a.m. to go to school at 7:41 a.m. We're going to bed at about 10 p.m. trying to get all of our homework done, but that's a different topic.

Also, we need more rest. Kids that are older tend to stay up later. This means they don't get enough sleep. Kids are too sleepy when they get to school because it's really hard to get up that early. Scientists say the kids need nine to 12 hours of sleep per night. Yet, we're only getting seven to eight hours of sleep. In addition, scientists also say that middle and high school students do better in the morning. Another point that I might add is the bus drivers might be confused. A possibility might be that we could just exchange bus times with the elementary school students. I think this because elementary school students start at 8:55 a.m., which would be more convenient to us older kids.

I hope you consider letting middle and high school students start later in the morning. If you do not see this as a possibility now, then I hope you do in the future.

No homework

Editor:
I am a student at the Charlevoix Middle School. Teachers shouldn't assign students homework.

First, students would have more time with their family. Family events could be planned more freely. Students could then have better relationships with their siblings and parents. Second, teachers and students would have to use class time more effectively. If this happened teachers wouldn't have to assign homework.

Later in life, students would be able to work at their jobs and plan their schedules better.

Lastly, students would have lighter backpacks because we wouldn't have homework. This could prevent dangerous back problems. Backpacks should not exceed one-fourth of the weight of the student. Kids could then be able to focus in class better because their backs wouldn't be sore.

This is why we shouldn't have homework.

Detailed score results from the Charlevoix class of 2000 reveal the local class exceeded the state average for graduating classes in all of the tested subjects with the exception of social studies.

Prescott said that the social studies section of the test is extremely difficult and that the state is in the process of revising the section. He added it doesn't count toward the Merit award.

Prescott expects to see the revised social studies section included in testing for 2002.

MEAP categorizes the students scores into four levels. Level one exceeds Michigan's standards, level two meets Michigan's standards, level three is performance at the basic skill level and level four is unendorsed.

Twenty percent more of the students in the Charlevoix class of 2000 scored at level one in math, writing and reading than the rest of the graduated classes in the state.

There was less of a difference between Charlevoix students' scores and those of the rest of the state in both science and social studies. Only 7 percent of the graduating classes in 2000 across the state scored at level one in science while 15 percent of the Charlevoix class scored at level one.

The percentage of Charlevoix class of 2000 students who scored at level one in science is much lower than those that scored at level one for math, writing and reading.

Roger Gowell, head of the science department at the high school, said that each year he meets with his staff and makes sure that the department is giving students the chance to learn the objectives they will be tested on.

Gowell added that no major changes have been made to the curriculum this year.

Charlevoix also struggled in social studies, a subject where no local students in the class of 2000 scored at level one and only .5 percent of the graduates across the state placed in level one.

But, changes to the MEAP test itself may prove that the test and not the curriculum are at the root of the low social studies scores.

Ann Marie Conway, head of the high school social studies department said she feels the department is giving the students all the resources possible and that the test is extremely difficult.

"Our scores weren't where we would like them to be. We have done a lot to work with the kids as far as getting prepared for MEAP," she said.

She added that there is currently no social studies class at the ninth grade level, but this is not feasible with the current staff and would be a lot to ask of the students. The additional class would mean the students would have six required courses and only one elective on their agenda.

Prescott foresees the same detailed information of MEAP test results for the class of 2001 being available some time after graduation and as of now 62.7 percent of the class will receive the Merit scholarship.

Homeless shelter to open

COTS

Aside from offering cots, bunk beds and air mattresses to comfortably accommodate their guests, the house will also provide a meal for those in need.

The program is not designed to provide long-term housing. The house has a three day limit. During those three days members of the program plan to help get people back on their feet by offering their guests information and contacts.

The Ezra House will accept anyone not under the influence of substances and will not allow minors unaccompanied by an adult to stay.

Two "Innkeepers" will be on-site with all house guests.

COTS board president Tim Boyco said that the program shows that Charlevoix is a caring community.

Each church has also pitched in by taking a room and scrubbing, painting and polishing every inch of it.

COTS will be ready to open their doors on Thursday.

However, they are still in need of floor covering and they are asking anyone willing to donate to call Schairbaum at 547-9122.

Those in need of assistance can call Schairbaum at the number listed above or contact the Innkeeper's pager at 516-1769.

Poor economy causes layoffs at local plant

Hoskins closes doors for one week, 25 workers laid off

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Due to poor economic conditions facing the country right now, Hoskins Manufacturing in Charlevoix has been forced to shut down for a week and layoff about 25 of its 90 employees.

The manufacturing plant shut down Friday and the downsized employees received notification that day, Michael Paliwoda, vice president of manufacturing at Hoskins said.

"We are suffering a 20 to 25 percent reduction in sales volume due to economic conditions," Paliwoda said. "The length of the layoffs are undetermined at this time."

Paliwoda added the layoffs took place at all of the company's facilities. Hoskins, based out of Novi, has facilities in Charlevoix, Hamburg, Lewiston, Mio, Mt. Carmel, Penn. and Kildare, Ireland.

A total of 57 people were downsized by the company, which were a combination of manufacturing and salaried employees, Paliwoda said.

He added the layoffs and poor sales numbers have even caught the company by surprise. Because of this, Paliwoda said he is unsure if more layoffs will be necessary.

Paliwoda said the company will know more after the shut down this week.

Currently the company is not doing anything special to help its laid off employees.

"If it progresses further, we will have to look at some assistance. Either a resume generator or job placement services," he said.

The decision to shut the plant down for a week and layoff some of the workers was finalized March 7, Paliwoda said.

According to the company's corporate profile, Hoskins was formed in 1908 to manufacture products from newly developed nickel-chromium alloys invented by its founder, Albert Marsh.

The company now produces a variety of alloys for electrical control and resistance heating, temperature measurement and control, spark plugs, welding and metal sprays.

Hoskins products are used in everything from hairdryers to nuclear generators, Paliwoda said.

Zonta names award winner

Heather Marie Jones, a senior at East Jordan High School, was named the winner of this year's Charlevoix Area Zonta Young Women in Public Affairs Award.

The competition for the award is designed to encourage women to pursue decision-making positions in their communities in order to impact the policies that affect the lives of women locally and throughout the world.

The Zonta Young Women in Public Affairs program looks to the young women of today who will be the leaders of tomorrow.

Jones was chosen because of her involvement with her community and her focus on her career goals. Jones is an exceptional student at East Jordan High School. She plans to attend Grand Valley State to pursue a general business degree. Eventually, it is her intention to become a financial consultant or an accountant.

Jones demonstrates her commitment to the community through her volunteer work at Charlevoix Area Hospital, Charlevoix County Community Foundation, Girl Scouts, Youth Advisory Committee and helping with canned food drives, Toys for Tots and blood drives. She is also very involved in school activities, including student council, National Honor Society, cross country, SADD, basketball, Spanish Club and two years as a class officer.

Zonta is a worldwide service organization of executives in business and the professions working together to advance the status of women. The award is one of the many programs for young women sponsored by Charlevoix Area Zonta.

Applications for next year's award will be available from Charlevoix Area Zonta in late fall of 2000.

Rayders basketball wins third straight district title

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports stringer

The Charlevoix Rayders proved they were more than a one-man show this week, trouncing East Jordan 80-44 and Harbor Springs, 91-53 to win their third consecutive district championship.

They also did this without leading scorer Scott Parrish being the one doing most of the damage.

Parrish suffered a severe sprained ankle against East Jordan on Wednesday night and played about half of the game on Friday against Harbor Springs. Fellow juniors Rob Boss, Jim Shepherd and Patrick Gowell picked up the slack and carried the Rayders to the convincing victories.

"I thought we had better focus (in the district games) and played a little bit more intense than we did down the stretch," Coach Keith Haske said. "The tournament re-energized us a bit."

On Wednesday, the Rayders traded baskets early with East Jordan and only seven straight points at the end of the half gave Charlevoix a somewhat comfortable 32-22 half-time lead. The second half was all Rayders as Boss took control down low with Parrish on the bench. The advantage was extended to 57-37 in the stanza. The fourth quarter was more of the same as the Rayders steadily pulled away to the 80-44 win.

Boss led the Rayders with 15 points. Parrish had 12 in limited action, ten coming in the first quarter. Keith Daly scored 10 and Shepherd had nine. Ryan Rafacz had seven steals and four assists.

Against Harbor Springs, a hobbled Parrish started and scored five points early, but he didn't score the rest of the way. The game saw back and forth for much of the first with the Rams holding a 16-15 lead at one point and tying the game 18-18. But Shepherd's hoop with 1:44 left in the period put Charlevoix ahead to stay.

In the second period, the pace slowed considerably early, but Boss (five points) and Jeremiah Teuscher (three points) carried the load, as the Rayders edged out to a 30-24 lead with six minutes left in the half. In the following three minutes, Charlevoix blitzed the Rams with a 10-0 run, leaving them in the dust.

Gowell hit two free throws followed by back-to-back steal and layup conversions from Jeremiah Teuscher and Rafacz. Jeremiah scored two more in the run and his brother, Nate, fed Keith Daly with a beautiful pass for a layup. Harbor never threatened again. Charlevoix led at the half, 46-29 and pulled away the rest of the night.

Twelve of the 13 Rayder players got into the scoring act as eventually the 40 point margin led to the running clock and another Charlevoix blowout. This margin was very surprising because of Harbor's recent resurgence (nine straight wins) and the Rams' home-court advantage.

"Scott was about 80 percent. Robby played a great game and everybody else seemed to pick up a bit," Haske said. "That's the response you hope for as a coach."

With the win, the Rayders have now won 15 straight and hold a 19-3 record overall. For the game, Boss led Charlevoix with 19 points, seven rebounds and five assists. Shepherd poured in 18 while Gowell scored 12, dished out five assists and grabbed four boards.

The Rayders faced Mio (22-1) in the regional semi-final in Cadillac on Tuesday night. Results were not available at press time.

If they are victorious, they will face either Suttons Bay (22-0) or McBain (21-2) on Friday night at 8 p.m.

Wet, heavy snow fell during the late afternoon Monday causing slippery roads and accidents. This accident occurred at 4 p.m. that day at the intersection of Michigan Avenue and Petoskey Avenue in Charlevoix when Kimberly Renee McClellan, 21, of East Jordan was traveling south, making a turn around the curve in her 1991 Mercury, when she lost control and struck a vehicle driven by Janice Lynn Ruback, 54, of Boyne City, who was headed north. No one was injured. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Hoffman gave a lot more to the city than just a park

Marilyn Boss
'Days gone by'

Charlevoix has a lovely park to enjoy because of the generosity and forethought of a man who was a visionary and had a great love for the town.

Doctor Walter Hoffmann, came to Charlevoix in the early fifties and bought a lovely old home on Park Avenue, which overlooked the channel. It was in disrepair, and he renovated it for his residence and dental office. The view of the channel and the bridge was spectacular. He was our dentist during the years our children were growing up.

When you entered the front door, you were in a lovely atmosphere, with ivy vines draping from the ceiling and clocks of every type surrounding the room. When they went off on the hour, it was an experience to remember. His beautiful cat would greet you as you walked in. Our daughter, Diane Priess remembers being teased about being the milkman's kid. He would say something about mooing cows, etc. She especially liked to go there to have her teeth fixed. His dental chair faced a picture window which looked out at the bridge. His office was really homey, an unusual feature for the time. As many Charlevoixians remember, he had a silver artificial Christmas tree which was displayed year-round in the upstairs front window. Today, it is across the street in the house that is used by the Charlevoix Conservancy.

Dr. Hoffmann was always thinking up ways to promote Charlevoix, and when he was councilman, in the early sixties, he suggested that all outgoing mail from the Chamber of Commerce and the city, be printed with the slogan "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

One of the first things I vividly remember was the minstrel show he organized and took part in. It was put on in the present middle school gym, to capacity crowds. It was really a wonderful production and one that any of those taking it in would never forget. It was a musical, and was a great treat for the audience.

Dale remembers Doc going down to the back room of Neff's store every morning, where a group of local guys would have coffee. They would talk over town problems, and ways to make things better. He was truly the ordinary man's councilman. He was responsible for purchasing for the city of Charlevoix, a tract of land from Alex McSauby, located on Mt. McSauby Road, directly across from the gate of the MacGillivray property known as "Turtle Hill."

He said someday the city would need this for the expansion of the golf course. Due to the ten-fold increase in traffic on US-31, Doc's dream will some day in the future become a reality. Lou Orlovski has already drawn plans to show how it will work, and so when the time arrives for it, everything is in place.

In the Aug. 6, 1964 issue of the Charlevoix Courier, there is a picture of him in a beautiful 1930 rich yellow Hudson Roadster Eight, which he bought in Detroit. It was in mint condition and he was a familiar sight, driving it around town. His friend, Julius Gilbert, was driving a beautiful 1927 baby blue Rolls Royce roadster, at the same time. Charlevoix has always lent itself to unique people driving fun cars. Doc also had a nice old Model T roadster, with no top on it, and he would enjoy driving that around town too. He had a friend, David Beck, who lived out in Norwood Township, who would regularly be seen on Park Avenue, tinkering up Doc's T so it would run good. It's always needed a great deal of tinkering to make them run smoothly.

In 1980, I was told that I would need an expensive operation. I decided to get a second opinion at Cleveland Clinic. We had a land contract which we were collecting payments on, and Dale put it in his pocket and went downtown and saw Doc checking out his groceries at Oleson's. Dale told him he would discount the land contract 10 percent and it took less than 2 minutes in the checkout lane to complete the deal. He told Dale to stop in at LoAnne Brown's desk at the County Bank in the morning and the check would be ready.

As it turned out, I was given a clean bill of health, but this shows what used to happen in a small town. People trusted and were willing to help each other.

Two days before the end of the 1983 year, Dale got a call from Doc, telling him that he wanted him to be his representative in conveying to the city a warranty deed for the Park Avenue property. He said it was to be for park purposes, so that the poor people would have the same opportunity to enjoy the views as others who owned condos along the street. Dale picked up Ken Saley, the mayor, and Bea Parton, the deputy city clerk, and they went out to his home on a day that was so stormy, that US-31 was only one lane. They obtained the deed, with one verbal restriction, that a 6 foot high chain link fence be erected on the eastern edge of the property along the alley.

A neighbor had been renovating a building on the channel and was encroaching on Doc's property and he didn't want this to happen with the new park. One day in the spring, Ken Saley and Bob Hunt, the city manager, called Dale to come to city hall and told him the arrangements were all taken care of, to make the big move. Dale was given a letter addressed, "To whom it may concern" and had complete authority to erect a fence, beginning at 3 a.m. on a Saturday morning. (Naturally, the court house was locked at this time). Dale went down at 3 a.m. and Apple Fence Company out of Traverse City came with several trucks, a big cement mixer, a big bank of lights to light the scene, and a lot of men. Even the city police had no clue as to what was happening, thus the reason for the letter. At 6:50 A.M., MISSION ACCOMPLISHED. The neighbor came down to his building at 11 a.m., and the cement was hard.

Doc was happy with the result. That same summer, 1984, Doc passed away in the Charlevoix hospital, on the same day that his friend, Julius Gilbert died, in the room next to him.

Doc was a great addition to Charlevoix, and his works to better the city were numerous and much appreciated.

Who pays the most in taxes?

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Of the top 10 taxpayers in the city of Charlevoix this tax season, the top two are summer resorts.

According to city treasurer Rick Brandt, the Belvedere Club and the Chicago Summer Resort in Charlevoix are the top two taxpayers in the city, respectively.

"I guess in a city with this much lakefront property, our evaluation isn't very unusual," Brandt said. "It depends on the community and the way it evolved."

While these resorts are composed of private residences, they pay taxes as a single entity.

These two resorts were part of a top 10 taxpayers list released by the city. According to this list the top 10 taxpayers, as of the summer of 2000, are:

- 1) Belvedere Club
- 2) Chicago Summer Resort
- 3) Leo and Maureen Quinn

Fenton Man killed in snowmobile accident

A 44-year-old Fenton man was killed Friday, as the result of a snowmobile accident around 9:30 p.m. Friday on private property in Eveline Township, near the intersection of Ridge and Wurn roads.

William Baisch was driving his 1997 Arctic Cat, followed by his son and a friend on a private trail, when he left the trail and drove across a pasture/cornfield area and struck a two strand electric fence, said Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater.

Baisch suffered face and neck injuries and was treated at the scene by Boyne City ambulance EMT's. He was then transported to Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey where he was pronounced dead.

Lasater said it did not appear alcohol was a factor in this accident at the scene, but blood test results are still pending. He added speed and reckless driving were not a factor.

Reports indicate Baisch knew the area he was traveling in, Lasater said.

"No one can explain why he went in that direction," he added.

An investigation into this accident is continuing.

Charlevoix Golf Course named a survey favorite

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A recent survey conducted by AAA Michigan named the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Club a "favorite" in a rating of the best county, city and park courses in Michigan.

"The Charlevoix Golf Club provides the public with an affordable facility while offering a sporting challenge to various levels of players ability while focusing on the integrity of the game through an aesthetically appealing community showcase," director of golf of the Charlevoix Golf Club, Tom Heid stated.

Writers for the AAA March issue of the publication, Michigan Living, surveyed golfers, sports writers, association executives and pros from around the state and compiled a data set to guide readers to their course of choice.

Heid, who is in his seventh season as the municipal course's director, attributes the high ranking in large part to the Golf Course Master Plan, the 1990 brain child of the Charlevoix City Council.

Heid explained that the plan's aim is to further beautify and improve the historic course through upgrades and the provision of essential equipment.

Since the plan's inception the city has worked to rebuild course tees and in 1999 installed a new irrigation system. Heid said the watering system was a big step up for the course — improving course conditions and quality including that of the turf grass.

Prison parole absconder sighted in Charlevoix area

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is investigating the report of a prison parole absconder being sighted around 7 a.m., March 10 in Charlevoix Township.

A local businessman checking a storage unit found a blue-gray Chevrolet Blazer in his driveway with the man inside. The man was asked what he was doing, and he said he was waiting for the police.

The businessman reported this incident to the sheriff's office and gave them the vehicle's description and license plate information.

A record's check revealed that the man was Barry J. Sparks, 43, of Cadillac. Sparks is 6 foot, 3 inches tall and weighs 245 pounds. He is wanted nationwide for absconding from prison parole from multiple convictions of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Deputies responded in minutes to the area, but the vehicle was gone.

Contact with the parole agent revealed that Sparks owes over $300,000 in restitution to prior victims and has been tracked through the Chicago/Detroit/Grand Rapids/areas over the last several weeks.

The sheriff's office believes Sparks was in the area trying to set up a new victim. One of his many ploys is trying to sell new motorcycles at less than wholesale prices due to him having factory connections.

Once he gets money for the item, he leaves the area.

Several recent victims have been swindled out of $30,000 or more and are reluctant to prosecute or report the incident.

Anyone who has had contact with him in Charlevoix County is requested to contact Sheriff George T. Lasater or Det./Sgt. Don Sproul at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office at (231) 547-4461.

Students taking part in dual enrollment option

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Sixteen Charlevoix High School students are enrolled in a college course that takes place in the comfort and convenience of their own school.

"I think one reason we have such a diverse curriculum (131 sections of classes and dual enrollment) is to give the kids that need a challenge, a challenge. Certain kids are ready for it and certain kids aren't. Dual enrollment has a place in a vast curriculum," high school principal Gary Grundman said.

The program referred to at the high school as dual enrollment has been an option available to students for some time. However, in the past, students drove to Petoskey to take North Central Michigan College courses, now the college is coming to them.

Testing administrator and school counselor John Prescott said that the new set-up means there are 16 less students on the road and 16 more in school. He thinks that the new program increases camaraderie because students don't miss important aspects of the high school environment like time with friends and assemblies.

The class currently being offered is an introductory communications class. Prescott said the material students are focusing on relates to how an individual's physical and emotional past is related to the way in which they communicate.

Not only do the kids earn three social science college credit hours, the credit hours are free and the students only pay for their textbook, which is $40.

Two seniors currently enrolled in the course, Corey Bascom and Michael Grosberg, said that the savings, the opportunity to "get ahead" and getting a taste of collegiate expectations all combined to rope them in.

Bascom said he has found the instructors expectations are different than what he was accustomed to in high school. The college professor places more reliance on the student's personal responsibility to learn the material.

"They don't care if you don't do your reading. It's your own responsibility to get the work done," Bascom said.

Grosberg said that as he expected, the course requires the students to work a little harder, but he and Bascom both agreed that these requirements are helping them to prepare for what they will face on the campus they choose for the fall.

Students taking the course are required to complete three tests, three speeches and three papers — a substantial load for a four month class.

The two said that there were a couple of D's on the last test and their instructor was less than pleased to see them.

"She wasn't happy with the test scores, but that's a transition thing. Each teacher gives tests in a different way," Grosberg said.

Bascom said that he plans to attend either Grand Valley State University or Central Michigan University in the fall. Grosberg is looking to attend either Grand Valley or Ferris State.

OPINIONS

You don't need to know what is under there

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

I knew she had something planned from the moment she came up to me....just by the look in her eyes. I just knew she was going to try and find out if I had underwear on.

You see, last weekend I visited Beaver Island to take part in the island's St. Patrick's Day festivities. I was asked to bring my bagpipes and my kilt and play a few tunes. I agreed to do it, and showed up at the Shamrock Bar in downtown St. James wearing my kilt and carrying my bagpipes at my side.

Now, I should point out here that the kilt is not — I will repeat in bold type — is not an Irish article of clothing. The kilt is of Scottish origin and represents the Scottish family of the wearer. Many bagpipers prefer to wear this item whenever they are playing their bagpipes — also Scottish — in public, as I was doing on St. Patrick's Day.

Inevitably everyone asks the ultimate question: "What do you wear under the kilt?" So, it wasn't long before people were coming up to me in the Shamrock Bar, asking if I was going "traditional."

Which brings me to the story of the woman. Seeing me from across the bar, her eyes locked onto me and she made her way through the crowd with a sly smile on her face. Instead of standing in front of me though, she walked just to the left of me and asked, "What do you wear under that kilt?"

As she slowly tried to walk behind me, I noticed her staring at the bottom uniform. I knew what she was doing; she was trying to sneak behind me to lift up my kilt. So I spun around, like a man treading water with a shark circling him, and kept her at arms length.

She didn't get her answer and didn't find out through force that day. I have learned a thing or two from my many experiences wearing a kilt in public.

However, later that night as I stood on the stage at the Shamrock to play a tune on the pipes, some man came up behind me and lifted up the back of my kilt. I wasn't prepared for it and I didn't see him coming, but I sure felt a breeze.

Luckily, I was already facing the audience at this time and he was the only one who saw the answer to the question.

It baffles me why people would even want to know what we wear under the kilt. Usually I do not tell them the answer. Why should they know? I don't care what they are wearing under their pants, so why should they care what I am wearing under my kilt?

Have you ever walked up to someone and just blurted out, "Do you wear underwear under your pants?" And, then, if they don't answer you, have you ever tried to take a peek?

Sounds silly, doesn't it? You could be slapped with a harassment suit or arrested for assault for doing that in today's society. So, why do people find it necessary to act like that when I am wearing my family's historic costume?

And it is not just me; pipers all over the world continue to be hounded. But, we have come up with some clever ways of answering the question or dealing with it.

While many of our sayings when asked this great question are unprintable, my favorite answer is, "I wear shoes and socks under my kilt."

And, one piper I know got so tired of people lifting up his kilt that he bought a jock-strap and glued rhinestones to it. Then he would wear it whenever he had his kilt on and whenever someone would try to lift up his kilt to have a peek, he would just let them.

The pipers I know also love to tell the tale of a woman who laid down in the middle of the street with a camera pointed into the air during a parade. She was hoping to get a picture of the underside of the pipers' kilts as they marched over her. But, the bagpipe band just marched around her, leaving this woman lying in the street and looking like a fool.

But, even with our cocky answers, pipers will continue to be questioned about their undergarments. And, many pipers will continue to have their personal space invaded by some moron wanting to flip their kilts into the air.

The bottom line is: Please refrain from asking this question when you see a bagpiper with a kilt on. Also, I am demanding a stop to the practice of trying to lift up a kilt of a piper.

It is already cold enough when there is a strong breeze, let alone when you create a bigger draft.

Side note: The response to last month's "What do you think" editorial has been great. The question was, "What do you think of the city's marina plans?" We will continue to collect your responses this week and they will be published in next week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier. Please keep them brief and remember to include your name. They can be mailed to P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720, dropped off at 112 Mason Street in Charlevoix or e-mailed to charlevoixcourier@charlevoix-courier.com.

Clarification on story

Editor:
I would like to express my thanks to Julie Musilek for including Charlevoix Children's House in the article on area non-profit preschools. She did a nice job of briefly introducing some aspects of Montessori, an often misunderstood educational program.

I would like to clarify some important points about the Children's House and Montessori in general. While the parents of our community don't actively participate in the classroom, they are always very welcome observers and lunch guests. As the first and most important teachers of each of our children, Montessori parents are the backbone of our program. Our parents are also incredibly supportive, bringing many special programs into the classroom and providing countless hours of volunteer time, as well as much-appreciated donations of materials and services. Even with a professional, well-trained staff, we could not provide the rich environment at Children's House without the participation of our parents!

Because of the individualized approach of the Montessori program, there are very few children who do not benefit from the properly directed, child-centered environment of the Children's House. In my 21-year association with Montessori classrooms, I have never met a child who was unable to thrive in this environment. However, there are parents who want a more teacher-centered atmosphere than we provide. Parents sometimes also have separation or other issues, as well as mixed feelings about how dependent they want their young child to be, and don't desire such an empowering program. For these reasons, we make every effort to provide information about the Montessori program to prospective parents and ask them to observe our program in action before enrolling.

Also not mentioned in the article was that the Children's House offers a kindergarten program and daycare (from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. week days). Our present enrollment is 22 children. The school is operated by a parent and community board, and is tuition-based; however, a very successful scholarship program is available.

The Children's House is more than just a school — it is a community of families investing in the future of their children!

More laws for being on ice

Editor:
I'm a student at Charlevoix Middle School and we should have more laws protecting people on ice. Two laws would be, stay near land and have another person with you on the ice. My mom's friend had a brother who went on the lake with his snowmobile and he went through the ice. He froze to death. They didn't find him for three years. They found him washed up on the beach. The Coast Guard went out, but they had no luck at all.

Finally, there should be a law where you must have a life jacket, or an orange jacket with you at all times on the ice. That's why, I think there should be laws for people on ice.

Make school into shelter

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student at the Charlevoix Middle School. I know that we need a place for the homeless to stay, other than on the streets and in boxes. I know that we shouldn't just waste the Charlevoix Middle School. It should be turned into a place for the homeless to live, so they have a place to call home.

Next, the Charlevoix Middle School will be deserted. So, then we can move the homeless that are from the counties that surround Charlevoix to the Charlevoix Middle School to live. This way the homeless humans will learn how to cook food, serve food and clean rooms. So then they may be able to get a job and earn money.

Last and most importantly, I know the homeless need a shelter over their heads (other than boxes). I know they don't deserve to live on the streets and freeze to death. God made us to help the people in need. I know there are some people who don't believe in God, but I do, and I know that these homeless humans need our help today.

So please help these homeless humans get somewhere to stay and call home.

Newspapers deliver the community!

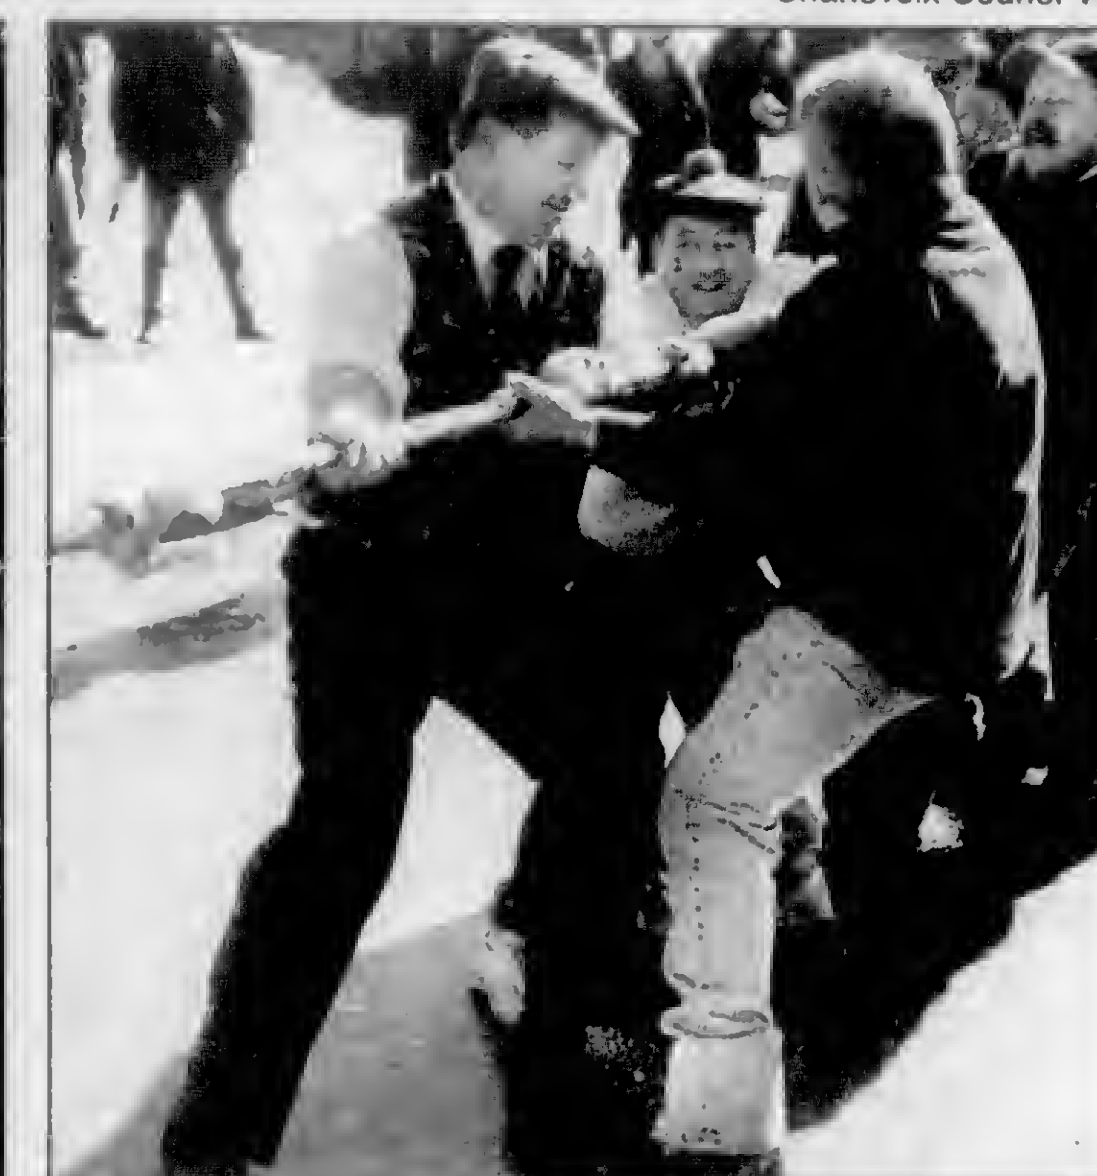

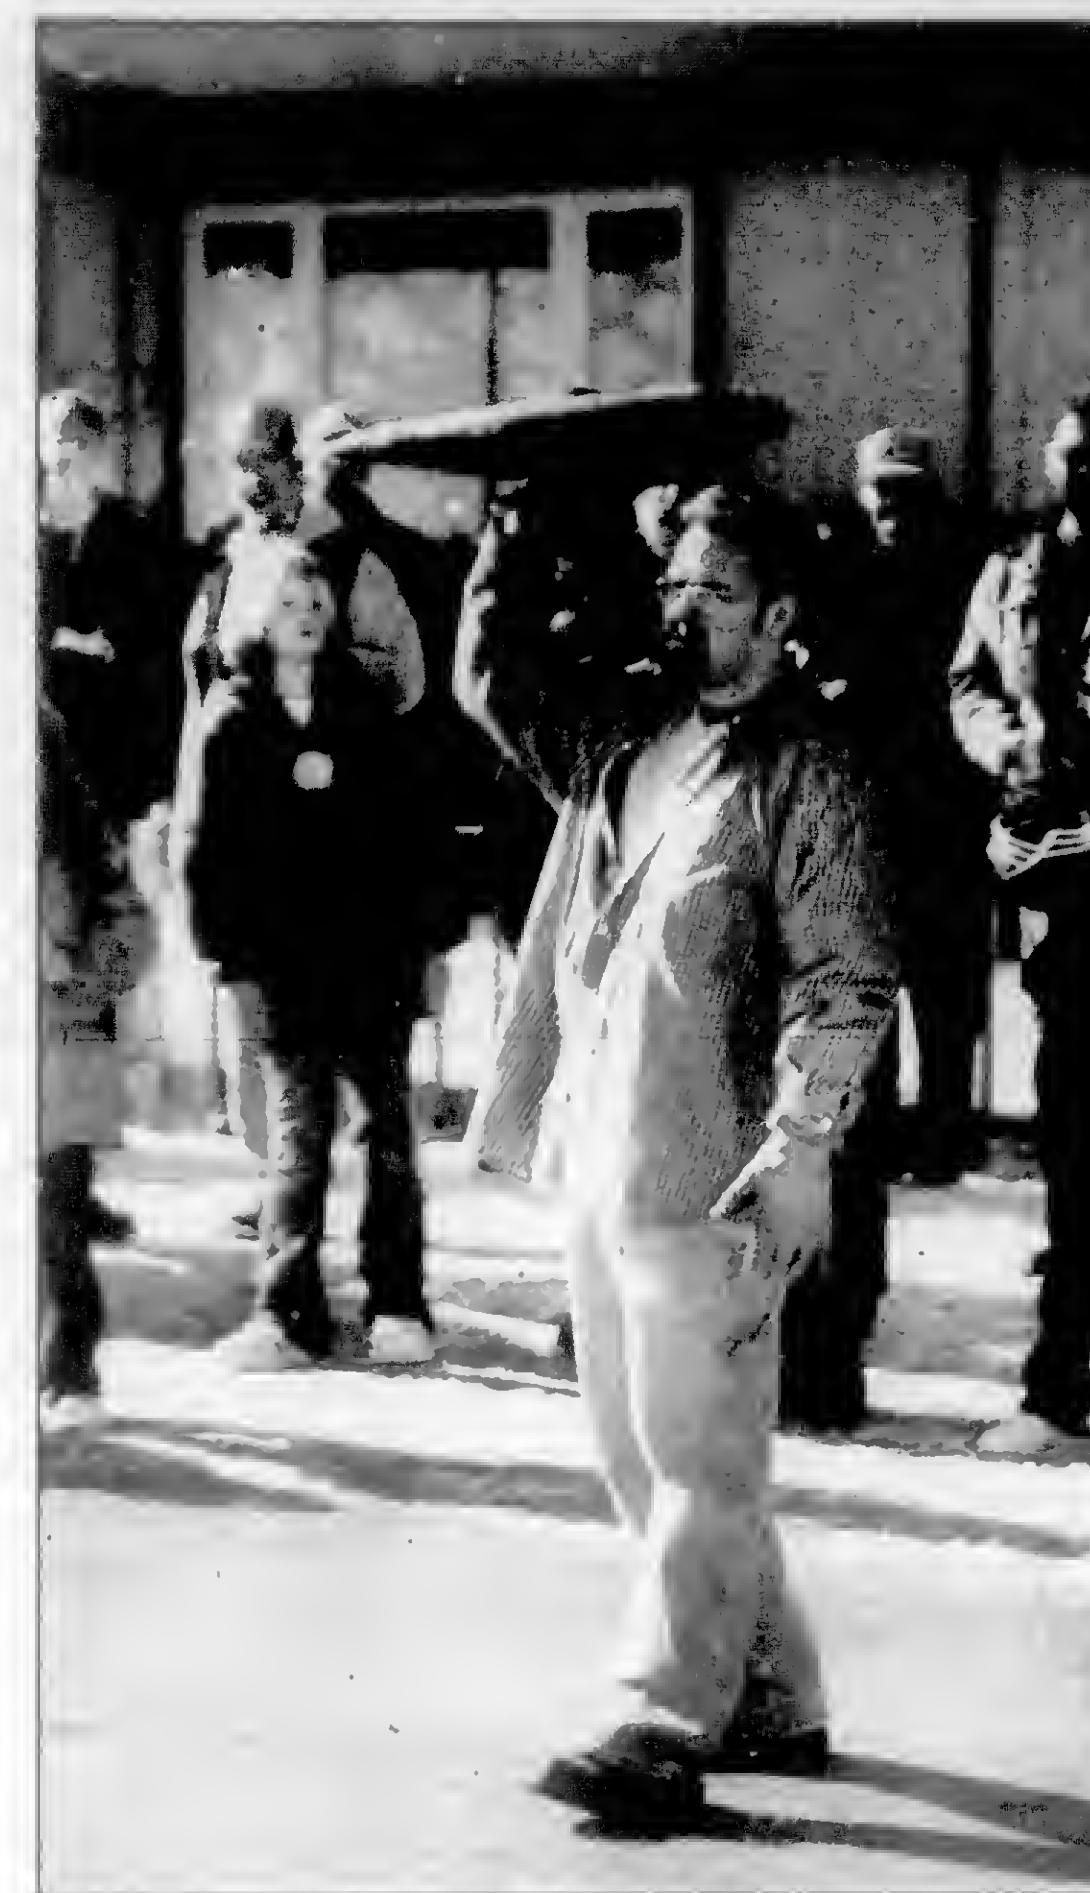

Only a few dozen friends heard Bill Jones announce plans to run for mayor, but thousands read about it when their hometown newspaper landed on their doorstep.

Fifty-two percent of local newspaper subscribers hold on to their newspaper for a week or more. No single media reaches as many local homes with as much credibility as the hometown newspaper. For proven advertising response and a solid connection to the community, newspapers deliver the most value for the dollar.

Your help is needed for the 'least of these'

By CARA HOCHHALTER
Christian Ed. Director, UCC

"Who's doing for the least of these?"

In Matthew 25: 31-46, Jesus tells the story of the Son of Man returning surrounded by angels and surveying all the nations. Looking to the people on his right, he told them they were blessed because when he was hungry they had given him food. And when he was thirsty they gave him drink. He was alone and away from home and they invited him into their homes. He was without clothes and they gave him something to wear. He was sick and they cared for him. He was in prison and they visited him.

The people were amazed and asked, "When did we ever do these things for you?"

He replied, "Any time you did any of these things for even the least of my people, here you also did them for me."

There are many ways in which our community reaches out to those in need. There are two community food pantries, a thrift shop, a soon-to-open Ezra House for transitional housing, a community lunch program, and The Christmas Project. Most of these stem from The Charlevoix Ministerial Association with ecumenical committees organizing and running them through the help of many volunteers from different churches. There are also community agencies such as the Family Independent Agency, Charlevoix-Emmet Housing Coalition, the Health Department, Head Start and Community Mental Health.

The Bush administration is offering some funding to "Faith-based organizations" for programs such as these. However, there are some questions that we need to ask. Why is there such a need for food pantries, homeless shelters and soup kitchens in the first place? Wouldn't Christ want us to look at the whys and not just focus on temporary solutions? Are there some basic issues that could help alleviate the problem? What are the reasons for poverty?

Often circumstantial, people are caught between jobs, lose work due to their or their children's illness, lose transportation, experience divorce or abuse, are mentally ill, and along with that, have exorbitant health care costs that are not covered. It is disturbing to me that many employers, (even in our area), limit workers' time so that they do not have to pay benefits. It is also disturbing to me to hear that more and more doctors are refusing patients on Medicaid.

As much as we are proud of "The American Dream," the idea that anyone who works hard can make a good life for himself or herself, this dream lacks one element that I believe Jesus promoted. That is a compassion for our fellow human beings, and I might add, all of creation. Jesus preached of a compassion that builds people up, stands by them in times of pain and most of all, offers love and respect.

At a time when many people are looking forward to some money back from a tax cut... let us not forget to ask how "the least of these" are being helped. How well are we caring for the poor? How difficult is it to get help if you are poor and mentally ill? How difficult is it to work two jobs as a single parent, raise children and still not receive health benefits?

Granted some people make some bad choices that lead to disastrous consequences, but there seem to be many people who become "victims" of their poverty. One misfortune leads to another and it doesn't take long to be in deep need.

Christ's message is one of hope, however. No matter how poor or ill or even sinful a person was, Jesus brought hope, compassion and "new life." This can be our message as well. Through faith, we must continue to ask ourselves as individuals, as a community, a country and a world, "Are we doing the best we can for the least of these?"

Dawsons arrested on several charges

Susan Rae Dawson and her husband Charles Lee Dawson, of East Jordan, were arrested Tuesday on charges that they violated Michigan racketeering laws, failed to file state income taxes and failed to pay employee withholding taxes.

In a 13 page warrant Charlevoix Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur alleged that between 1997 and 2000 the Dawsons, as owners of at least two trucking companies, withheld money from 19 employees' paychecks for health insurance and that they failed to pay the premiums. In addition to the racketeering charges, the Dawsons are also charged with five counts of failing to file taxes.

The trucking companies owned by the Dawsons are EJ Transportation and Up North Trucking. Both are based in East Jordan. Kur is also seeking the criminal forfeiture of the businesses' real estate located at 04331 Waterman Road and at least 21 tractors and 34 trailers owned by the Dawsons or their companies.

The case began after Michigan State Police Detective/Sergeant Bruce Dykehouse was contacted by several employees of the Dawsons beginning in November 2000. One employee had prescription coverage denied at a local drug store after presenting their insurance card.

In an affidavit supporting the arrest warrants, Dykehouse also alleges that Up North Trucking is not and never has been properly registered under Michigan law and that they are operating illegally. Also alleged in the affidavit is that for at least two years the couple failed to file Michigan income tax returns.

Both Dawsons were arraigned today in the 90th District Court. Bond was set at $10,000 cash or surety. A condition of bond is that the company not operate any of its equipment illegally and that they not liquidate any assets.

A preliminary examination was set for 1 p.m. April 16.

Using the taxable value listed for each taxpayer on the list and the total county millage rate — including county, school and city taxes — which is 48.9756, and the total city millage rate, which is 12.56, the Charlevoix Courier was able to figure, with a formula provided by Brandi, an estimate of the money these property owners pay to the city and county. Those with property in the Downtown Development District have an additional 1.36 mills added to their tax bill.

According to the numbers, The Belvedere Club has a taxable value of $7,716,300. It paid about $377,000 in total property taxes. Of that amount, $93,000 is city taxes.

The Chicago Summer Resort has a taxable value of $3,459,800. It paid about $169,000 in total property taxes. Of that amount, $42,000 is city taxes.

Leo and Maureen Quinn have a taxable value of $2,092,300. They paid about $102,000 in total property taxes. Of that amount, $25,000 is city taxes.

Lexalite International Corp. has a taxable value of $1,818,700. It paid about $89,000 in total property taxes. Of that, $22,000 is city taxes.

CPI Products has a taxable value of $1,498,600. It paid about $73,000 in total property taxes. Of that, $18,000 is city taxes.

Charles and Patricia Koucky have a taxable value of $1,290,400. Since they are in the Downtown Development Authority, they had an additional 1.36 mills tacked onto their tax bill. They paid about $64,957 in total property taxes. Of that, $15,686 is city taxes.

Harbor Industries has a taxable value of $1,177,000. It paid about $57,000 in total property taxes. Of that, $14,000 is city taxes.

Because of an expansion, this company was given a tax abatement for next year, which is not reflected in these numbers. When the tax abatement takes effect, that means the company will not pay taxes for a period of time on its new facilities. Brandi said.

David Guanci has a taxable value of $1,042,700. He paid about $51,000 in total property taxes. Of that, $12,000 is city taxes.

Citizen's Bank has a taxable value of $959,100. It paid about $48,000 in total property taxes. Of that, $11,000 is city taxes. Since Citizen's Bank is in the Downtown Development Authority, it had an additional 1.36 mills tacked onto its total tax bill.

Irish Boat Shop has a taxable value of $884,000. It paid about $48,000 in total property taxes. Of that, $10,000 is city taxes.

The total taxable value of these top 10 taxpayers is $21,938,900.

Brandi added this top 10 list changes each year based on changes made to properties that impact their taxable value.

"You know pretty much where the improvements are each year. We take it into consideration when we do the budget," he said.

Close the gaps in your medical history.

In these days of self-advocacy and personal health care responsibility, medical record ownership is very important. Having a complete record of your medical history, and your family's medical history, provides awareness, knowledge, confidence and control to you the patient, and it helps your physicians and other health care providers do a better job.

Beginning April 2nd, patients of the former Burns Clinic in Petoskey, during the years 1993 to 1999, will be able to get and keep original copies of their medical records. Distribution of these important files will continue for one year, after which all remaining records will be destroyed. So if you were a patient, or if you are the parent of a minor patient of the Petoskey office of the Burns Clinic between 1993 and 1999, go to the first floor of the former Burns Clinic Building in Petoskey where you will fill out a release form and pick up your medical records.

Photo I.D. is required and all records must be picked up in person. Release forms are also available on the Web at www.northernhealth.org and there is no charge for this service.

YOUR HEALTH

Communication is a very important tool

Edward Newcomb, M.D.

'Your health'

The health care system of the United States has been a hot topic of conversations, journalistic articles and even political debates in the recent past.

Concerns over affordability, accessibility and the changing relationship between physicians and their patients are frequently voiced. As a practicing physician, the apparent erosion of the "doctor-patient" relationship is of great importance to me. Statements such as "the doctor didn't listen to me" is indicative of the frustration felt by many patients. Physicians are frustrated as well by time consuming demands of insurance carriers, regulations and documentation requirements that take away time spent with the patient.

Most frustrations experienced by patients are due to a failure in the dynamic communication that takes place between a physician and a patient. Communication goes both ways and there are several things that physicians can do to improve their skills, but this is another topic. What I would like to present in this article is a few ways that patients can decrease their frustrations by becoming "better" or more effective patients. These suggestions are essentially recommendations on how to communicate more effectively, how to get your concerns and questions addressed.

It begins with the phone call to make the appointment. The receptionist needs to know how much time to schedule you for and to do this they will ask you a few questions about why you need to see the doctor. This is not to be nosy or embarrassing, but a brief idea of your concern allows the receptionist to set aside an appropriate amount of time. The more accurate the scheduling will be. You may ask the receptionist how much time you have been scheduled for and if you feel you will need more time, the receptionist may be able to schedule you a longer appointment, or may need to offer a second appointment at another time. If you make an appointment to have a cough evaluated, but when you get to the appointment you ask for an insurance physical or some other more extensive evaluation, there may not be an adequate amount of time available and this can be frustrating.

A second way to be a more "effective" patient is to bring a written list of your concerns to your appointment. Some patients become intimidated in the office by the hustle and bustle and end up forgetting some of the questions they had. A list prevents these memory lapses. Physicians aren't afraid of lists; in fact it makes their job easier by allowing them to know exactly what is on a patient's mind. If the list is quite long, it may become obvious to both the patient and the physician that more time is needed and follow up visits should be made. With less confusion about what concerns you, you are more likely to get what you need.

Bringing a list of your medications or actually bringing in your medications with you to your appointment is also helpful. Many patients see more than one doctor and it prevents confusion if your physician knows what you are taking. It makes the appointment go more efficiently and leaves more time for other issues. Remember that over the counter products such as pain relievers, antacids, vitamins and herbal products should also be included in the list as they may interact with prescription drugs.

Finally, patients need to remember that physicians are human beings. At times we can seem rather dense when it comes to picking up on patients' concerns.

However, physicians are not mind readers and are unable to answer questions until they are asked. If you feel your doctor is not listening or not understanding your problem, tell the physician, we really do care.

If you continue to be frustrated, by all means ask to be seen by, or referred to another physician. Patients are not obligated to stay in a "doctor-patient" relationship that isn't working.

Hopefully these few suggestions will make your next doctor's appointment more efficient and less frustrating.

Becoming better at communicating is something we all can work on. Being a more "effective" patient will increase the likelihood of you obtaining what you want, as well as what you need from your physician. Being a more "effective" patient will help your physician be more "effective" too.

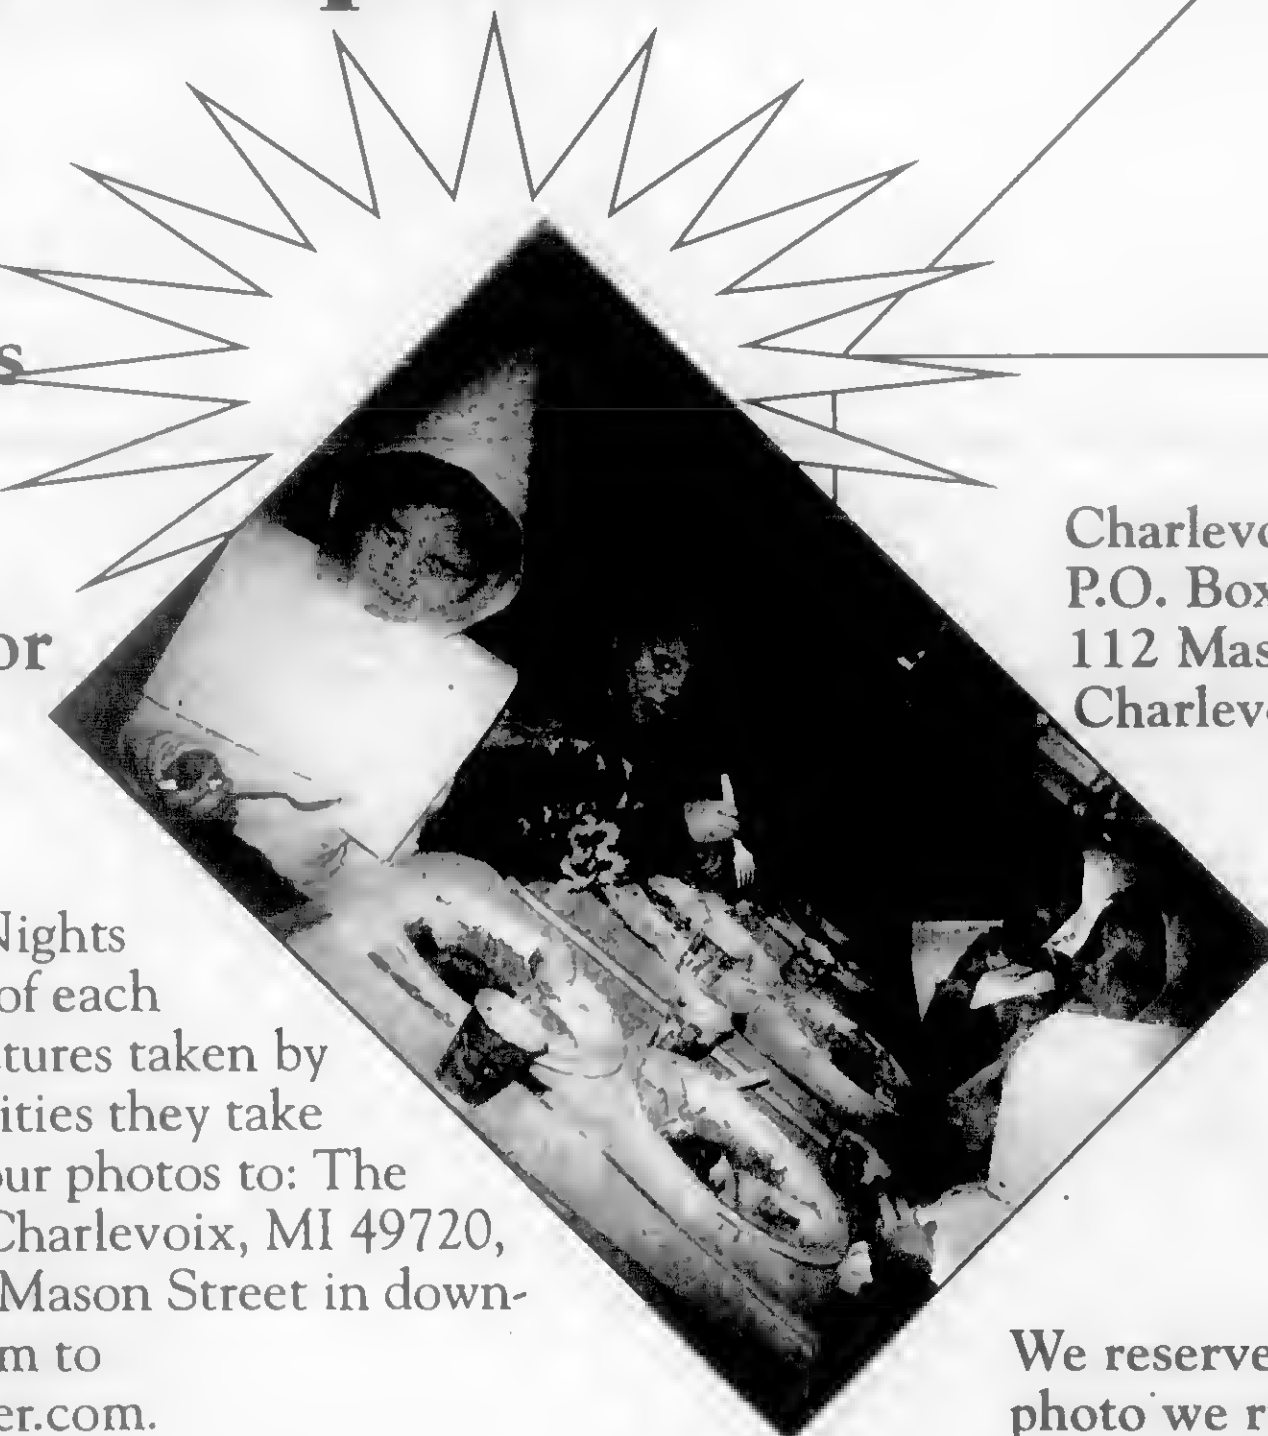

Dr. Edward Newcomb's office is located in the Pine River Medical Center near the Charlevoix Area Hospital. He can be contacted by calling 547-6554.

New coach picked for junior varsity softball

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The junior varsity girls softball team will be lead by a new coach this spring.

Former coach Don Potter resigned in December after "a few frustrating seasons." One of varsity softball coach Phil Butler's assistant coaches from last year, and also his daughter, Courtney Butler, 20, of Boyne City will be taking over the JV girls team.

He said that the low turnout in players coupled with the long bus rides the team took became too much. He added that varsity softball coach Phil Butler was looking to take the team in another direction.

"It was a mutual agreement for me to leave. I'll miss the girls, but I won't miss the long bus rides," Potter said.

Potter has coached middle school girls' basketball for nine years and coached middle school soccer in the past. He hopes to return to his post as middle school soccer coach.

His replacement, Courtney, played softball while she was a student at Charlevoix High School.

In a statement written to the Charlevoix school board by Keith Haske, high school assistant principal and athletic director, Haske stated she was an outstanding pitcher. He also referred to her as, "an enthusiastic coach who will help our program a great deal."

However, when it came time for the school board to accept the appointment of Courtney at their March 12 meeting they did not vote unanimously for her to be hired by the district to fill the void left by Potter. School board treasurer Larry Leveugood voted against her taking the position.

Leveugood said Courtney's age was the factor that made him question her capability of leading the team and ultimately to vote against the appointment.

Leveugood said that there was no discussion at the meeting to back up the placement of Courtney in the coaching position so he voted no.

"I'm not hung up on age normally and I don't know her personally. It is my understanding that she helped out last year as an assistant on the varsity team which probably at that age is more of an appropriate role for her," Leveugood said.

After watching her perform last year in her role as an assistant coach, Haske said that he has great confidence in her ability to coach the team.

"She wouldn't be coaching for us unless she was going to do a great job," Haske said.

The teams started practicing on March 12. Phil Butler said he is pleased with this year's turnout. Of the 30 girls looking to play, Butler said he plans to carry 17 or 18 and the rest will be on the JV team.

Courtney could not be reached for comment by press time.

City golf course honored in Michigan Living magazine

GOLF

City course golfers can look forward to other possible future improvements that may include rerouting of holes and a new practice center.

These changes are some of the many the historic course recognized by the United States Golf Association as the oldest existing public golf course in Michigan has undergone.

The course was founded in 1896 by Chicago Club members John P. Wilson and Edward Waller. The club members employed the design resources of renowned Scottish golf course architect, Willie Watson. When the course was built in 1896 it was a nine hole course spanning 2,645 yards located west of Mercer Boulevard. Four years later, 100 additional acres of land were purchased by Chicago Club members allowing the 1903 addition of another nine holes.

In 1937 the Chicago Club turned the course over to the City of Charlevoix for one dollar. The city transformed the course back to nine holes and has since maintained it.

Heid said that currently, during the average golf season of a 26 week period, about 20,000 rounds are played. He estimated 70 percent of those 20,000 rounds to be played by pass holders.

Season passes and various course packages are currently on sale. This year's rate schedule is available at the city website, ci.charlevoix.mi.us.

Heid added that the course rates fall below those charged by other courses.

"We are trying to give something back to the community," he said.

He added that the start of the golf season is contingent on weather, but the course is usually ready for play in early to mid-April.

Students talk about violence in schools

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In the wake of several school shootings recently across the country, local parents may wonder whether the students at Charlevoix High School think of their school environment as threatening or violent.

Students from each grade level were chosen at random and asked to share their thoughts on the topic of school violence.

Of the six questioned many said that they have witnessed and in some cases been involved in fights on school grounds. However, they all responded with a resounding yes to the question, "Do you feel safe at Charlevoix High School?"

The following are the exact questions we asked students and their answers:

Have you ever felt threatened at school?

Andrea Ruhlman, freshman — "Not really with this type of environment. I trust the people here for some reason."

Nicole Higdon, freshman — "No. I've always felt comfortable around here."

Liz McSawby, sophomore — "No. I've lived here all my life and I feel comfortable."

Zack Simmons, junior — "A couple of times maybe, but not really a lot."

Brad Ramsey, junior — "No."

Katie Yager, senior — "No, not in my school. But, I don't know, there have been a lot of shootings lately. I think there was one that happened yesterday in a Catholic school. That makes me wonder if it could happen here too."

Do you see violence in school as a problem at Charlevoix High School?

Ruhlman — "I have heard jokes about it before. I have actually seen a fight in the hallway before but other than that, nothing really that drastic has happened here."

Higdon — "No. You don't have to carry weapons to keep yourself protected."

McSawby — "I don't think so, but I've heard of kids getting beaten up. But that was in middle school."

Simmons — "I haven't heard of kids bringing guns and stuff like that, but I have seen fights. I've been in a fight before. It's not all that big. I haven't seen that many really. I've seen people talking trash that want to start fights, but it never happens."

Ramsey — "I've never been in a fight and I've never seen anybody in Charlevoix actually get in a fight."

Yager — "No, I'm sure people kid around, but I don't think anyone would do that (bring a gun to school) here."

What do you think about your school's effort to curb violence? Is the administration's effort too much or too little?

Ruhlman — "I haven't heard about our school policy, but when something comes up in school they (school administra-

Simmons — "I've never heard of a policy. I know if a fight does start I've seen teachers back out until somebody is finally done. I've seen Mr. Certa jump in the middle of a couple and he got his pounding before for jumping in but other than that teachers don't really try to stop them."

Ramsey — "I haven't heard anything. I don't think it is that big of a problem here."

Yager — "It doesn't seem like there have been many problems. From all the media coverage, it seems like the shootings are all building off each other and those kids might be feeding off of the publicity other kids have gotten."

What the school does to keep students safe

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Efforts made at the Charlevoix High School to ensure campus safety according to school officials include:

- School size: Principal Gary Grundman said that the high school currently has 440 students and that the administration tends to know each one.

- The seminar concept: Each class is divided into seminars that meet two times each week. Students from each grade level are intermixed placing responsibility on the older kids to lead by example. Students stay in a given seminar throughout their stay at the high school.

Grundman said that this set-up is aimed at making students more comfortable.

- Community/family setting: Grundman said that the door decorations, hall decorations and seminars help to break down barriers that cause problems in the hallways and classrooms.

- Teacher training: The high school periodically trains its teachers as to what they should be doing to maintain a non-hostile environment, including signs to look for in students.

- In-house experts: The high school has two on-site full-time counselors that, according to Grundman, offer a lot of one-on-one interaction.

- Early student orientation: The high school has a close relationship with the middle school. Eighth grade students going into high school are asked to sit down with teachers and their parents. Grundman said that they do this so students will feel more comfortable with the high school setting and teachers can get to know incoming students.

- Crisis management team: The management team involves all high school teachers. The team is educated using bi-annual updates helping them to be aware of what to look for as a potential problem.

- Caring staff: "The key thing we have going for us is that we have a staff that really cares about these kids," Grundman said.

Charlevoix girl a finalist for 'Princess' pageant

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Hannah Jane Sandow, 3, of Charlevoix was recently selected as a state finalist for the Miss Michigan Princess Pageant to take place at the Dearborn Hyatt in May.

Hannah's mother Alison Foster said that Hannah's first appearance in pageant competition was in February when Alison and her husband Richard Foster were shopping in Traverse City. The couple stumbled upon a most beautiful baby contest, entered their daughter and Hannah later placed runner up in the competition.

Shortly after the Traverse City competition Alison said that the family received information on the Michigan Princess Pageant. They selected a photo and entered Hannah in the pageant.

She said that after a week the family received word back from pageant coordinators, American Coed Pageants, saying that Hannah was named a state finalist.

Gearing up for the May competition Hannah found time to compete in a third pageant. On March 6 she placed second runner up in the Miss Sunburst pageant.

Alison explained that Hannah currently competes at the baby level which means that during competition she goes up on stage, smiles and "looks cute for the judges."

Alison added that as she gets older Hannah will get into talent and modeling competitions.

Alison said Hannah's interest in participating in pageants was sparked by the family's neighbor who had competed in similar events in the past. She said that Hannah asked her parents to compete.

"My husband and I agreed that she can continue to compete as long as it is fun for her. She's having a good time and meeting new girls her age. She is gaining self-confidence from it, she is learning to talk more and is more outgoing," Alison said.

When Hannah is not busy with pageants she enjoys playing with her dog, Kipper, and her cat, Miss Gooch, watching Shirley Temple videos and shopping.

Keeping children from ri doesn't offer the same level of protection as other vehicles. It's designed to carry cargo, not kids."

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP), travel in the cargo area of a pickup truck is a major occupant protection issue that disproportionately involves youth. Persons injured when traveling in the open bed of a pickup are more likely to sustain multiple injuries, injuries of greater severity, and have a greater likelihood of death than do passengers riding in the cab.

Neither do enclosed cargo areas (camper shells) provide adequate protection against occupant injury. AAP said that in 1997, 14 percent of cargo area deaths of children and adolescents younger than 20 were in enclosed cargo areas.

The cab itself can also pose safety issues for young passengers — there are questions surrounding age-appropriate restraint use, appropriate seat location in the cab, appropriate use of rear seating positions in various models of extended cab vehicles and risk of air bag-related injuries.

In addition, Miller said restraint use in the cab of pickup trucks has been reported to be lower than restraint use in other passenger vehicles.

"Basically, we're asking that parents consider the safety aspects of any vehicle when selecting the primary mode of transportation for the family," said Miller. "Pickup trucks are becoming an increasingly popu-

Charlevoix named a 'Tree City USA' for the ninth year

Charlevoix was recently named a Tree City USA by the National Arbor Day Foundation.

This is the ninth year that Charlevoix has received this national recognition.

The city is also a recipient of a Tree City USA Growth Award, for the third year. This is for demonstrating progress in its community forestry program in interpretive program, publicity and youth education.

The Growth Award was created to recognize environmental improvement and higher levels of tree care in the Tree City USA communities.

The Tree City USA program is sponsored by The National Arbor Day Foundation in cooperation with the National Association of State Foresters and the United States Department of Agriculture Forest Service.

To become a Tree City USA, a community must meet four standards: A tree board of department, a tree care ordinance, a comprehensive community forestry program and an Arbor Day observance.

SCRAPBOOK

A history of the channel bridges

By DAVID L. MILES
Charlevoix Historical Society

This is the first of a series appearing at regular intervals on the six known bridges that have spanned Pine River, the channel, in Charlevoix.

A bridge across the channel neck has always been Charlevoix's focal point, its fulcrum, its center of gravity. Loved, tolerated and hated in equal measure, it is the one manmade component that has truly defined the city. Its story over 130-odd years contains comedy, hair-raising calamity, joy, sadness and tragedy, wild horses and Conestoga wagons, elephants and oxen, huge loads of logs on sleds, prankish kids, bureaucratic dilly-dallying, the passage of magnificent passenger liners, hundreds of stately schooners and palatial heart-stopping yachts, tugs filled with so much fish they flopped off the decks into the channel waters and at least one snort of disgust from a titan of American industry. Its stories are legendary. This series will highlight them, interspersed with when and most often why each bridge was built.

A specific date of origin for the first structure is not known. After the first arrivals settled in the 1850s, their first chore was to clear the meandering creek that led from Round Lake to Lake Michigan of obstacles. From a few inches to six feet deep, averaging two feet, it was overgrown with trees that arched to touch over the water. Fallen trunks, branches, and rocks clogged it at several points to create a small series of rapids. Not even a canoe could enter without portage at some point.

The settlers had to hack a pathway along the south bank to move any vessel into the harbor, on which they hauled and tugged as much over solid objects as water. Some attacked it with shovels, then as it slowly began to give way like wood shavings under a plane, horses towing scrapers succeeded in giving it a useful depth. While this was happening, a rumor of a bridge surfaced, if nothing more than logs lashed together and anchored at each end. This might be discounted, for that type of structure would have been troublesome to move, not allowing passage of any vessel without difficulty.

There might have been a crude bridge in place by the mid 1860s. The difficulty dating precisely stems from a statement in the Charlevoix Sentinel newspaper of June 19, 1870: "New Bridge-A.M. Ross, Esq., the contractor, has commenced the construction of the new bridge across Pine River, of this village." But does "new" refer to a first one, or a replacement? The word is ambiguous.

For when David C. Nettleton, one of our prominent pioneers, wrote his memoirs, he mentioned "the Fountain City House (now Weather-vane Terrace Hotel), north side, about 200 feet west of the bridge" upon landing her in 1867, three years prior to Mr. Ross's "new bridge." Nettleton may have simply been orienting any future reader as to the site of the hotel, not a bridge nearby, which may have come later.

In any case, 1867-1870 is a safe guess. The first known tiny span was a foot-traffic-only affair, some 4 feet wide and about 2 feet above the water. Its small pilings were driven by hand, stringers connected them except in the center, then planking was laid across these, a mostly do-it-yourself apparatus for those who couldn't glide under, such as those boats with masts. They simply reached up from their vessel, took up the central planks to move them aside, inched through, then replaced the boards behind them. Or a considerate soul who happened to be at the scene might do it for them.

All heavy crossings both prior to and after the bridge's erection were made either by ferry rafts and scows or wagons pulled by horses or oxen, a task easily accomplished since the waters ran not much more than 2 feet deep within a 50 to 60 foot width. Intrepid pedestrians hitched up their trousers and waded across.

An old rough sketch of the first bridge over Pine River that was up from the 1860s or 1870s to August, 1873. (Courtesy of the Charlevoix Historical Society)

A close look at the primitive drawing indeed shows a man on the left of the bridge bent over to remove the planks for the passage of the sail, while behind him an ox-drawn wagon approaches from the south. Note how the roadway, future US-31, doesn't include the bridge. The oxen will pass through the low water alongside it.

Longtime resident and historian Ralph Hamilton recalled being told that schoolboys took a devilish delight in crossing this bridge from the north side and hoisting up the planks behind them should they be followed by female classmates, who screamed in fear they'd arrive late for classes (the school was on Antrim Street near Ole-son's). Off the boys trotted from the gaping hole in whoops of laughter, until someone on that side came along to shove the planks back into place and the indignant little ladies could cross and scurry on to school.

The summer of 1873 brought the first commercially contracted dredging of the channel, to a width of 35 feet and a depth of 12 feet, for $1,000. They began in July, reached the bridge in August, and had to remove the pilings to finish the job. Hence, no bridge. In August, the county Board of Supervisors met to discuss the feasibility of erecting a metal bridge, and did what all good bureaucrats do by appointing a committee to study the problem and report by the October session. The formula then proposed was for Charlevoix Township to bear 50 percent of the cost, the rest of the county the remainder, because Charlevoix had more taxable property. It was voted down.

By December, the situation was causing Willard Smith of the Sentinel no end of anxiety, and he pulled no punches in his disgust. "Dangerous - Those upon whom devolves the duty of highway repair are guilty of gross neglect leaving the old bridge in a shape which imperils the life of man and beast. No obstruction is placed across it and a stranger entering town on a dark night would be certain to precipitate himself into the river. A narrow escape from such an accident occurred to a Cheboygan gentleman on Thursday night. Let the matter be attended to." It wasn't. For nine full months the span remained down, while the ferry rafts and scows carried everybody over the newly deep waters.

The same 50/50 proposal came up for a vote in February, and was defeated once more, probably by the Charlevoix Township advantage in voter numbers. The shipping season was fast approaching, the bureaucrats dithered in indecision, until pioneer businessman, mover and shaker Amos Fox, who had co-built the gigantic shipping dock off the north beach at the channel entrance nine years before, stepped forward with a proposal to build a wooden bridge for $400. There was no argument now. Time was of the essence after the winter without a bridge. He began in April, 1874, and by May bridge #2 was up and running.

So close to victory....

Rayders stopped in final game for title

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports stringer

The future is already on the minds of the Charlevoix Basketball team, even moments after the Rayders' heartbreaking loss in the state finals to Kalamazoo Christian, 72-69.

"We'll be back," said Coach Keith Haske following the game.

The game was witnessed by 12,608 fans at the Jack Breslin Student Event Center on the campus of Michigan State University. The appearance in the finals was the first for Charlevoix since 1938 when they also fell to another Kalamazoo parochial school.

Going into the season, many thought this would be one for the young squad (only one senior starter) to gain experience and that next year would be the tournament run.

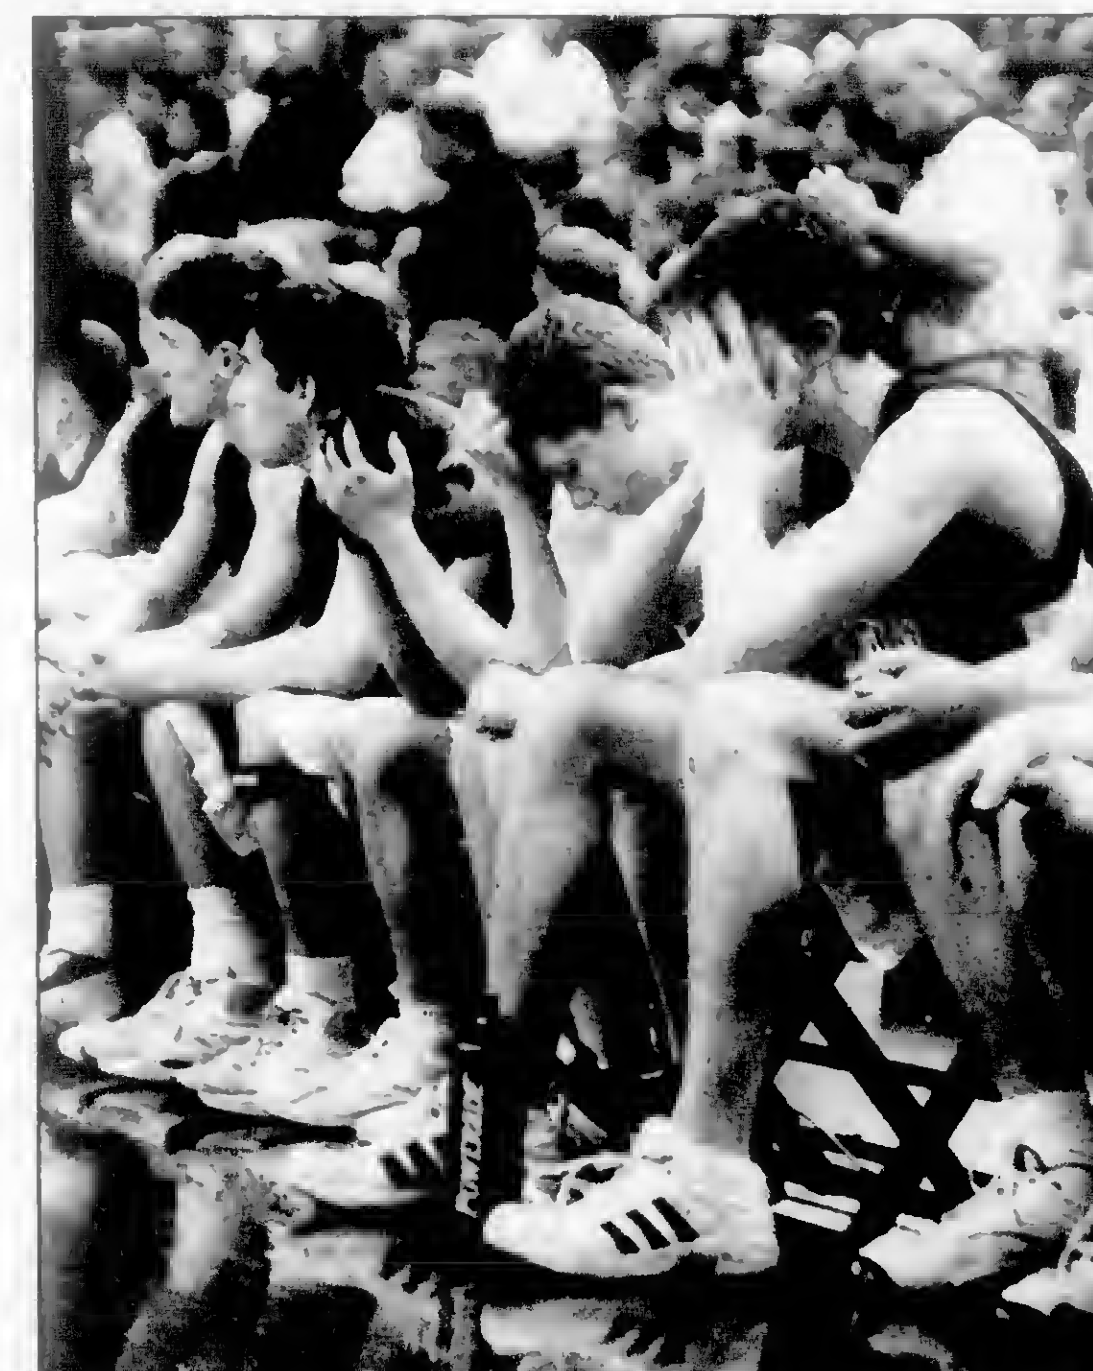

But these Rayders had a different idea.

Before the tournament, junior forward Scott Parrish said the team's goal was a state championship this year—and one again next year and as of Saturday, they came up just short.

The Rayders started off last week's play by beating the top-ranked St. Ignace, 75-71, in overtime on Tuesday for the quarterfinals and beat second-ranked Detroit St. Martin dePorres 83-74 on Thursday for the semifinals before their frenzied rally came up short in the finals.

When asked about all of the players he has returning, Haske said, "These are great kids, great student-athletes and they are great to be around. I look forward to just spending time with them as much as coming down here (to the final four)."

OPINIONS

What do you think about snowmobiles?

The responses are in from last month's "What Do You Think?"

The question was: What do you think about plans to expand the city marina? Nine people responded to this call for comments and every one of them did not support the expansion.

Therefore it seems clear from our little unscientific poll the city has its work cut out for it when it tries to convince the community this expansion is needed. The community just doesn't buy it at this point and basically considers this expansion nothing more than a Round Lake boat parking lot.

On to this month's question. While it is — supposedly — spring, many people in the community are still voicing their anger at an ordinance that allows snowmobiles to be driven within the city limits of Charlevoix.

Snowmobilers must stay on certain routes in the city and they can only operate their machines during certain times of the day. They may also ride their snowmobiles through the city in order to travel to a designated snowmobile trail outside of the city.

Proponents of this ordinance say by allowing the machines in town more potential shoppers will be downtown. They admit some violations of the ordinance has occurred, but this can be solved through further education.

What do you think?

I am for/against the snowmobile ordinance because:

Against

I am against this marina expansion because I oppose anything that significantly encroaches on the sailboat racing after Oct. 15. The plans I've seen move toward "Round Parking Lot," not a better Round Lake!

Against

There must be a public hearing on the proposed marina. The Charlevoix City Council and the city administration should listen carefully to the citizens of Charlevoix. Although development grants are sometimes tempting, they can be costly to quality of life and can create nuisance and safety problems. This decision is too important to be made behind closed doors. It should be made by the people who are affected the most, the residents of Charlevoix. Bigger is not always better.

Why wouldn't Charlevoixans welcome with open arms the expansion of the Round Lake Marina? Aren't we already used to: 1) Scheduling trips that cross the bridge so any travel avoids the half-hour back-up traffic for blocks? 2) Having to leave early and/or arriving late for scheduled appointments when the bridge crossing is necessary and we get "caught?" 3) The clutter that already exists in our beautiful harbor. So what's wrong with twice as many boats? 4) Hearing friends and acquaintances say they avoid traveling through Charlevoix because of the current delays with traffic and constant bridge openings? 5) Forming lines with our boats on a busy sunny day so we can get out to enjoy Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix? 6) Giving and more giving! Our lake shores have already been sacrificed for condo buildings. What's the difference in giving up a little more of our natural beauty and quality of life? Come on Charlevoix friends and city officials! Is there any doubt? No problem in modernizing our existing docking facilities and improving our parks, but anything more.....

Regarding the DDA plans to increase dockage in our beautiful, natural harbor — Let's try to keep it priceless, as it is! When attending the summer concerts, we always remark how Charlevoix is the "most beautiful spot in the world!" We hear this same remark from the summer guests and tourists. Please don't spoil it, DDA. Increasing dockage means more boats, more people, more pollution and more crowding of our harbor! Just a suggestion, but maybe the boat visitors could throw anchors in Lake Charlevoix? "No wheels," you say — DDA could bus them downtown to spend their coins.

P.S. It would be really great if DDA could maybe help our city with improvement of the city roads — not downtown, but up town (northside and southside).

I am against this marina expansion because: 1) It will make Round Lake too crowded. 2) Private docks are not allowed to expand. 3) It will devalue property values in Round Lake. 4) Pollution and increased bridge openings. We do favor a limited expansion.

How can any citizen with a real love of our town let (the city) have the leverage to put the expensive docks in Round Lake. They are making our little New England-like town look like a boat parking lot. All the ambience of our view of the lake, as you drive through town, will be destroyed. We've lost the sailboats now. I see this town has three problems: 1) The bridge — This move will back the traffic back to Boyne City Road. 2) Lack of diversity in the kinds of stores in town — also going out of business. 3) Parking — It's even bad off-season, let alone in the summer. When will these guys look at the real problems. I am sorry to say there is little hope for our future.

I am concerned about an expanded marina downtown because it may detract from the beautiful scenery of Round Lake itself. To view Round Lake while strolling through downtown Charlevoix is breathtaking and never fails to excite me. What other place has a beautiful lake in the heart of town to enjoy while shopping. That is a big part of Charlevoix's uniqueness and why we are "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

If the boats extend into the lake, lessening the view of the lake itself, it would be an eyesore the same as the cement plant on our beautiful Lake Michigan shoreline. Many of us still remember that beautiful shoreline prior to the cement plant and the wonderful shoreline drive or walk to Bells Bay. To remove some of the beauty of Round Lake with an extended view of docked boats would be a sin.

I am against this marina expansion because this will further destroy the very reason people come here — the beauty of the area. When is enough, enough?

March is the best month of the year for Charlevoix

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

I have been a year-round resident of Charlevoix for only about six years and I am still learning what I can about the glories of this place. I have learned enough to have a preference for certain months of the year, and I here admit that March is my favorite Charlevoix month.

I did not start out with a preference for March. I can still hear the grumbling voice of a colleague of many years in another life who would say at this time of year, "Don't make any important decisions in March." He had in mind what is called Seasonal Affective Disorder or sometimes cabin fever, although the tiny, cramped, cold, dark, smoky dwellings that produced that disease have long since been replaced by centrally heated, spacious, brightly lit, filtered air houses where we now spend the winter months in comfort unimaginable for generations ago.

The large part of my life lived in northern climates has not made me into one who enjoys the out-of-doors in winter. Skiing, skating, winter camping and such are not of paramount interest to me. My interest in them would have to be grown to be cursory. It's cold out there, and while the air may be crisp it is mostly not comfortable. My house is comfortable in the winter, and so are all the local watering holes.

March is that first time for months when the sun has some force. And even if the air be cold, a sheltered sunny spot is almost always summery. March is that month when daffodils begin to push green shoots into the warming air.

March is the month when Skunk Cabbage is in full bloom. March is that month when tree and bush buds are noticeably bigger. March is that month when sap begins to push out of my maple tree and the annual quest for maple syrup can begin.

March is that month when you can splash in puddles, listen to water running and watch the lawn reappear. March is that month when spring officially begins. March is the month that has a few strolling shoppers on our downtown sidewalks during the sunny hours.

It is not only the growing biological promises of March that lift it to the top of my list. A few days ago I went for a late dinner at one of our fine local restaurants (I won't mention the name). Three of us had the entire staff and facility for ours alone. That's right, no one else was there. But the kitchen was in fine form and the wait-staff was extraordinarily attentive and very relaxed. This does not happen during other, less-favored months of the year.

I do not suspect that Charlevoix will become a spring-break destination, and there will never be a flood of people who enjoy March as I do. But maybe we could convince a few of those who live in less beautiful places that March is when it's at.

To those who say at this time of year, "I have had it with the cold and gloom. I am leaving for sunnier places until all signs of winter have passed." My response will be, "Look around you. This marvelous place on this pleasant peninsula is magnificent year-round and March is as good as it gets."

Letters to the editor

Action on student was wrong

Editor:

My 17-year-old son, Nate Zukowski, was found innocent of selling marijuana to a ninth grader at Charlevoix High School. The jury took less than an hour to bring back a not-guilty verdict. This case, however, should have never been brought to trial at taxpayer's expense. It illustrates an abuse of power by school administrators and law enforcement officials. Nate has been forced to pay a high price because of it.

For the past three months, Nate has had the threat of a prison sentence hanging over him for a crime he did not commit. Instead of worrying about getting his homework done or who to take to the next school dance, he had to defend himself against people who assumed he was guilty just because he was accused.

The only "evidence" in this case was the word of one scared ninth grader who got caught with marijuana in school. Officials demanded the ninth grader give up a name to make things easier on himself. The ninth grader later tried to say Nate didn't sell to him. He was then interrogated until he changed his story back to implicate Nate. At the trial, the ninth grader stated he regularly bought marijuana at school, but never from Nate. Three other students testified that Nate was not with the ninth grader during lunch when the sale supposedly took place. Perhaps officials were hoping to use this case as an example to "prove" to the public that they have "cleaned up" the drug problem at Charlevoix High School. What I don't understand is how they can so callously disrupt and disregard the life of a 17-year-old boy who was doing well in school and has no criminal record. In their zealotry to try to make an example of Nate, they have let the guilty party off the hook, who is still out there.

Even though Nate's name has been cleared legally, he is still paying a big price. The ninth grader caught with the marijuana was suspended from school for three days. Nate, on the other hand, was suspended permanently and expulsion procedures were started. The school board would have to approve expulsion, but how fair of a hearing would that have been when the Chief of Police — who was also the arresting officer — is also on the school board! Nate's only choice was to enroll in the Hemingway Alternative School in Boyne Falls in order to graduate on time and proceed with his plans to attend college this fall. It was a difficult decision. He has been cut off from teachers he knows and respects and friends he has gone to school with for years. He will not be able to participate in graduation ceremonies with his class.

Drugs are a serious problem in our society and they certainly need to be kept out of our schools. But, in the process, do we want our schools run in such a way that a simple accusation of wrong-doing is all the "proof" necessary to throw a student out of school and have him/her arrested? How would you feel if this happened to your son or daughter? I believe this case has set a dangerous and counterproductive precedent.

P.S. I would like to thank the staff and teachers at the Hemingway school. With their help and support, Nate was able to complete the necessary requirements to graduate.

Ann Zukowski

City to increase hangar fees despite protests

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Even after hearing public comment from local pilots opposing further increases in their monthly hangar rental rate on March 19, the Charlevoix City Council approved the increase.

"My feeling is that we (the city) have an asset out there that we can charge for and we should charge the market price," city manager Mike Wiesner said.

He explained that he sees no reason for taxpayer dollars to subsidize expenses at the local airport when a city-owned building at the site is bringing in revenue below its market worth.

The issue stems from an agreement the city made with hangar renters back in the early 1970s when a group of airplane owners approached the city requesting their permission to build hangars at the site of the airport, city-owned land.

The city entered into an agreement with the private individuals. The contract said if the users paid 100 percent of the facility's construction costs they could use the hangar free of charge for 20 years.

The contract further stipulated that after the 20 year period expired, the hangars would become the property of the city.

Two decades of free use expired in September of 1995 at which time Wiesner conducted a survey of comparable area hangars. He found that the market rental rate was $125 per month, per hangar. The Charlevoix facility has 10 hangars.

Don Seelye who has used the hangar facility since it was built in the early 1970s told council that when they built the facility they used top-of-the-line design and materials. He argued that because of the hangar's high quality as opposed to being a pole barn, the less expensive alternative, they should enjoy a continued price break.

Some members of council inquired as to whether or not the hangar users who were part of the original contract could continue at the old rate of $115 per month.

Wiesner brought to council's attention that the city has other existing agreements, similar to the contract once held with the renters. He was concerned that by making an exception in the case of hangar rental fees the city may "set precedent" and be asked to make similar exceptions in the future.

Council ultimately decided that the price break was not in the best interest of the city and subsequently set the monthly hangar rental rate for the next three years at $125.

Students extend study of language to actual country

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

How many times have you said "this year I'm going to take a trip to Europe?" But when vacation time comes either your bank account is tapped or you've got other things to take care of.

Well, 14 French speaking students from the Charlevoix High School can cross the "what if I took that trip to Europe" thought off their list of possible to-dos.

At 7 p.m. March 26, 13 juniors and one senior, a couple of whom have never flown, accompanied by their teacher Susan Kessler and French speaking chaperone Melissa Marchand, flew out of Traverse City airport en route to la belle France.

For the first week of the trip they are touring Paris and other surrounding points of interest and then they are off to Switzerland for a second week of exploration.

While in Switzerland they will stay with Swiss families in Geneva, the center of the French speaking region of the country.

The program is designed by Intercultural Student Experiences, a touring company based in Minneapolis, Minn.

Kessler explained that the touring company specializes in total language immersion travel which she considers to be a valuable learning tool.

"Primarily, I think the students will take away a much richer understanding of the French culture. Their language skills will also be elevated to such a degree that we couldn't equal with classroom exposure. It will be a magical learning experience," Kessler said.

Prior to embarking on the European exploration the touring company sent information about sites that the students will tour and other relevant materials to help them prepare for their adventure.

The students left armed with three years of French instruction and according to Kessler should return with a better understanding of the cultural basis of the language.

After returning Kessler said there will be plenty of stories to tell. They'll share their experiences in presentations equipped with photos.

The trip cost each student $1,700 which includes; round-trip airfare, accommodations while in Paris and any scheduled tours. Additional spending money was left up to them. Some of the money for the trip was raised through fund-raisers.

These students are headed to France. Captain signs off WKHQ

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After 20 years with WKHQ "The Captain," Bill Vogel, and Charlevoix resident, has bid adieu to his loyal morning show listeners, sitting a breach in contract as the reason for his dismissal.

"Forever and ever get the heck out of bed," he said in an interview last week, just before he left for vacation in Florida.

Vogel said he was ready for a break after a disheartening contract dispute with his former employer, WKHQ owner Trish McDonald-Garbar that ended his 20 year term as the "Captain" at the WKHQ radio station.

When asked about the matter, McDonald-Garbar said, "It's a personnel issue."

Vogel explained that he signed on with the Charlevoix based Michigan

Talk Radio Network which made its debut in January. However, McDonald-Garbar, was opposed to him taking on the position network.

Vogel said that because of this opposition it was very difficult for him to do both.

The issue that ended the captain's double decade stay at WKHQ comes down to what is called a non-compete contract. The clause is used to prevent an employee from functioning as a competitor to their current employer, either as a freelance agent or with another firm.

Vogel said he signed a non-compete clause when he took the job with WKHQ.

In Vogel's case, the clause labels his work with the talk radio network as him working for WKHQ's competition.

As a result of pending litigation Vogel won't be heard on his usual WKHQ or WLXT in this neck of the woods, but listeners in Grand Rapids, Flint and Iron Mountain are all tuning in.

The talk radio network's northwest Michigan stations, including those in the local listening area don't carry the captain's show. He said that in this area, the show "is blacked out..."

In his new post with the Charlevoix based network Vogel is no longer getting listeners "the heck out of bed" but he is offering an afternoon boost from 3 p.m. to 7.

He said, "It has been a great ride in the morning. I guess I'm just getting too old to get up that early."

According to Vogel, the content afternoon listeners are hearing includes, "nothing serious" but he and his co-hosts do discuss odd topical happenings.

He said that listeners in the Charlevoix area can look forward to hearing his line-up "at the very least in the fall."

Rayders are state runner-up

STATE

In the finals, the Rayders jumped out to a 5-2 lead early but fell behind with 4:01 left in the quarter. Charlevoix would never lead again in the game. Blown assignments on the Rayder press and missed switches on defense led to five first quarter layups for the Comets of Kalamazoo Christian.

At the same time, Charlevoix had open looks but couldn't convert, shooting only 25 percent in the first quarter. Christian hit at a 70 percent clip, racing to a 16-9 lead.

In the second quarter, the Rayders heated up a bit more, but the Comets continued their torrid pace, with six more layups, leaving for the half with a 33-24 advantage. The closest Charlevoix came in the second was five at 16-11 and 29-24.

The third quarter proved to be the Rayders' downfall as the Comets extended their lead to 50-34 with only 1:36 left in the stanza. Scott Parrish and Ryan Rafacz both converted layups for the Rayders in the final minute of the period to bring the Rayders to within 12.

With the over 2,000 Charlevoix fans in attendance on their feet and screaming, the Rayders made one final run.

At the 4:56 mark, the Comets clung to a 58-49 lead. Parrish scored on a feed from Nate Teuscher to cut the lead to seven. Seconds later, Jeremiah Teuscher was fouled and hit one of two, cutting the lead to six at 58-52.

Following two Kalamazoo free throws, Rob Boss converted a three-point play inside and the noise was deafening as the Rayders stormed to within five at 60-55 with only 3:53 to play.

Following a TV timeout, the Comets missed the front end of a one-and-one. Jim Shepherd continued his shooting magic with a deep three-ball cutting the lead to only two. On the boxout, Boss was bodyslammed by a Christian player and went to the line with a chance to tie the game.

All season long, Charlevoix has worn teams out in the second half and it looked like this day in the Breslin would be no exception.

Boss made one of two to cut it to one with 3:38 to go. Following two Comet free throws, Pat Gowell just missed a three-pointer that would have tied it. The next trip down the court, in a pivotal call, Boss appeared to take a charge but the referee saw it differently and whistled Boss for the block, sending Christian to the line where they converted one of two.

In the last two minutes of the game, the Rayders were forced to foul and the Comets converted seven of eight free throws to preserve the win.

Parrish paced Charlevoix with 26 points. Shepherd added 20 on eight for 14 shooting. Boss had 10 points and seven rebounds. Gowell had five points, five assists, three rebounds and three steals. The Rayders forced 21 turnovers to only 12 of their own but couldn't capitalize.

"I think that if we shot the ball a tad bit better, we're the state champs right now," Haske told reporters after the game. "Maybe we were a little too hyped up at the beginning. We got open looks and missed shots we've been hitting all year long."

In the semifinals, the Rayders played perhaps their best game of the season, beating tradition-laden dePorres. The Eagles have been frequent visitors to the finals, winning championships most recently in 1996, 1998 and 1999. They bowed out in the semifinals in 2000.

Shepherd led the way with a record-setting day, hitting on 8 of 11 from three-point land, tying a state record for most three-pointers made in a quarterfinal, semifinal or final game in any class. With his four for seven from beyond the arc in the finals, he also tied a state record for most three-pointers made in semifinal and final games combined.

The Rayders trailed 39-32 at the half and rallied late. Charlevoix pulled to within one at the end of the third quarter and took a 57-56 lead on two free throws by Jeremiah Teuscher with 5:43 to go.

Free throw shooting was the key down the stretch. The Rayders were a perfect 14 for 14 in the fourth period, including eight for eight by Jeremiah Teuscher, who scored 14 himself in the quarter.

Charlevoix hit at an 82 percent clip from the floor in a near-perfect final eight minutes.

Shepherd led the Rayders with 26 points. Parrish had 22 points, eight boards, five assists and three blocks. Jeremiah Teuscher finished with 16 points. Gowell added 11, dishing out six assists.

After the game Parrish said, "We've been playing together since seventh grade and it's always been our dream and our goal, to win a state championship."

A 21-year-old East Jordan woman, Jessica Bre Jones, and an 18-year-old East Jordan man, Richard Roof, who was the passenger in the woman's vehicle, were injured when the woman lost control of her vehicle around 4 p.m. March 22 on M-66 near Sequanota Road. The woman's vehicle went into the soft shoulder on the right side of the road, spun out of control and traveled across the road to the opposite side where she had a collision with several trees. The woman and her passenger were taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital and treated for injuries. Speed was believed to be a factor in the crash. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

CHARLEVOIX LOSES OUT IN STATE MEET

DEFEATED 27 TO 23 BY ST. AUGUSTINE OF KALAMAZOO IN FINALS AT GRAND RAPIDS

Charlevoix's Red Rayders missed a state basketball championship by the narrow margin of four points Saturday night at Grand Rapids. They were nosed out in the class C state finals 23 to 27 by St. Augustine of Kalamazoo, a school which has probably topped the class more times than any other in Michigan.

In meeting their first defeat of a brilliant season, the Rayders went down fighting to the last second and by a margin that while meaning the difference between winning and losing, was too close to provide a comparison between the two teams.

Charlevoix opened the scoring within seconds of the starting whistle. The goal provided their first and only advantage, for St. Augustine evened the count and went into a lead which they never relinquished. They lead 6 to 5 at the quarter and counted 7 points to Charlevoix's 3 in the second period to gain a 13 to 8 margin at the half.

That 5-point advantage, the result of three long goals and a free throw, later proved the margin of victory. Charlevoix pulled up within two points of the leaders as the two teams tallied 9 each in the third quarter. Carey's two goals and three free tosses started a rally which was halted when St. Augustine broke loose for two goals in quick succession. The period ended with St. Augustine leading 23 to 17. Charlevoix outscored the winner 6 to 4 in the final period to keep within striking distance of victory, but two goals by St. Augustine sewed up the game.

Carey gathered 12 points to lead Charlevoix. Jurwiak with 13 and McGuire with 11 were best for Kalamazoo.

Personal fouls—Gleason 3, Muth 4, Jurwiak McGuire 4, Shimmers, Manjak, Richardson, Brown, Gallagher, Bergmann 4. Free throws missed—Muth 2, McGuire, Carey 2, Richardson 2, Brown, Gallagher.

Win from Sterling

Charlevoix buried Sterling 28 to 12 in the quarter finals at Big Rapids, Thursday night. Their first quarter advantage was 8 to 0, they led 18 to 3 at the half and 19 to 4 at the third intermission. The reserves played about half of the contest.

First State Finalists

To the 1937-38 Red Rayder aggregation goes the honor of being the first Charlevoix team to reach the state finals. It was coach Kipke's fourth team in down-state competition in ten years and his sixth district winners. One Charlevoix team went to the state semi-finals prior to Kipke's coaching regime.

Close of the 1937-38 season breaks up the most brilliant basketball team ever to represent Charlevoix High School. Graduation next spring will close the local athletic careers of Keith Carey. "Chick" Gallagher, Charles Richardson and Dick Bergmann of the regulars, as well as Gengle, Allison and Smith of the reserves. Brown, Pearl, Withers, Tom Carey and Driggett will be available for next year, the latter until March 3 when he reaches the age limit.

Keith Carey has had no peer in local basketball history in view of his scoring record. Richardson, following Carey in points scored, was an outstanding performer, and Gallagher, while not figuring so prominently in scoreboard totals, was probably the best ball feeder Coach Kipke has ever developed. Bergmann, considering the time he played as a regular, and Brown alike, played brilliant basketball.

Writer experiences a high school flashback on assignment

Julie Musilek
'Stepping out'

When I walked into room A-5 at the Charlevoix High School, I wondered just how bizarre the next hour was going to be, after all, this was the first high school class I'd attended since June of 1996 when I tossed my cap in the air and swore I'd never return.

I took a front row seat and fidgeted awkwardly for a couple minutes while I waited for Karen Peterson, the publications instructor, to rattle off her lesson.

I was there to experience a sound bite of what a day in the high school newsroom where the school paper, The Insider, is created, was all about.

Students sporting the latest hair styles and fashions filtered in from lunch. They took their seats and chatted with their friends; I sat back and watched.

A few moments later, senior Tanya Wyniawskij took the desk behind me. Tanya is involved in a ton of school and community events, so I recognized her right away and said, "Hello."

She returned the greeting and said, "your hair looks cute short." I immediately responded, "Yours looks great short too."

That was all it took; I was back in high school and felt right at home with the students.

Then, I ran into Hal Evans Jr., co-editor of the Charlevoix High School newspaper. Hal had originally planted the idea in my head of coming to class and checking out how they published the yearbook and The Insider sent to district residents.

Being surrounded by a group of local, bright, young minds was refreshing and I was surprised to find the high school news room shared quite a few characteristics with a typical day at the Charlevoix Courier office.

Thus far in my experience as a news writer, I've found a newspaper is not produced in the average, low key setting. The news office tends to be a little more animated. In reality it can get down right loud — ideas are commonly shouted, heated debate ensues and stress relieving screams reverberate off the walls. In essence, the same managed chaos one would commonly find in high school hallways and classrooms.

In Peterson's classroom, advertising project ideas were swapped, files were requested and students typed furiously as they tried to meet their deadline.

I even saw the beginning stages of a serious physical and emotional condition in some of the students, that I've classified as "the news junky syndrome."

I recently realized I was a junky. I was on St. George Island, Fla. with my family a couple weeks ago and after only one day off the job I had to have the local news. The Island Eye-opener, or whatever it was called, wasn't cutting it.

I called my editor, Jeremy McBain, who immediately made up a mirage of lies about buildings burning down and basically the town having been ruined. He followed the stream of fibs up with, "Why are you calling here? Go back to the beach."

Don't get me wrong, I enjoy being informed, but I also fully soaked up fun on

Woman killed in accident at Boyne Highlands

An unprecedented accident that occurred at approximately 1:45 p.m. March 25 during a ski competition at Boyne Highlands claimed the life of 2000 Charlevoix High School graduate Alisha Jewel Johnson, 19, of Boyne City.

"Right now people at the area are in shock and even more than that they are grieving and concerned for her family and friends," Boyne Highlands general area manager Joel Woods said.

According to Woods, Johnson was competing in the downhill event on the "Olympic" run when she fell and slid off the run. In downhill competition he described the turns skiers make as large and sweeping.

On the day of the event the National Ski Patrol lined the course and were thus able to attend to her almost immediately. The patrol was equipped with trauma gear including oxygen, backboards, trauma kits and defibrillators.

"They did everything humanly possible. We are blessed with a highly trained ski patrol at the Highlands," Woods said.

He said that when the ski patrol transported Johnson to the patrol room an ambulance was waiting to further perform first aid. She was transported to Northern Michigan Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

He said that in the 12 years the Highlands has ran this event no injuries have ever been sustained by participants. He added that the ski hill's management has called the competition off three times in the past because of unsafe conditions.

However, Woods described the afternoon of March 25 as sunny, 22 degrees, "about as perfect racing conditions as you could ask for."

Rayder pride

Fans of Charlevoix High School Varsity basketball were out in force last week at the various March Madness tournament games. Many members of the community even made the long trek south to East Lansing to attend the Rayders showing at the Class C final championship game March 24 at Michigan State University's Breslin Center. While the team lost, the fans kept hope alive throughout the game by shouting their encouragement and they rarely sat down in their seats.

Pine River residents evacuated due to fire

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Firefighters were able to stop a blaze Friday at Pine River Place from consuming the entire building and causing any serious injuries.

The fire had the potential to consume all of the 62 units comprising the complex, a three story apartment building located on West Garfield Street in Charlevoix, but ended up destroying only apartment 117 — where Robert Harrison, 53, executive director of the complex lived.

"There was a timing element. Everyone reacted quickly and we were able to keep the fire contained. We could have had a disaster," Charlevoix City Fire Department shift commander, Joe Schwartzfisher said.

The Fire Department's alarm sounded at 10:26 a.m. March 30 and fire units were dispatched to the scene of what was then only "a possible structure fire."

Farmers discuss changes created by disease scares

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

As the infectious "foot and mouth disease" looms on our country's horizon and bovine tuberculosis spreads further through Michigan, local farmers are employing defensive strategies to protect their livestock from infection.

Measures being taken across the country to halt the progression of foot and mouth disease into the U.S. reflect the serious threat posed by the disease. If it does in fact arrive in this country, it has the potential to devastate the livestock economy which is a major concern for local beef and dairy farmers.

But, local farmers say they have started looking at ways to protect their businesses.

"The TB thing brought us around to realizing we aren't immune to anything," Marion Township beef farmer Tom Wieland said.

Dairy farmer Doug Warner uses what he calls "bio-security" at his farm near Norwood to protect his herd. Warner won't let outsiders tour the facility and his employees are the only people authorized to enter the barn.

Warner's isolation tactics may end up saving him his herd since the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) claims an outbreak can occur easily. People wearing contaminated clothes or footwear or using contaminated equipment and are in contact with susceptible animals can potentially transfer the disease.

Fund created to honor 19-year-old

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Nick Carrow, 19, of Boyne City said he will always remember his fiancée when he sees the enormous white blooms of the stargazer lily.

His fiancée, Alisha Johnson, 19, also of Boyne City was killed in a tragic skiing accident March 25 at Boyne Highlands — "she loved the stargazer."

While physically, Alisha is no longer able to be with Carrow, her family or her friends, memories of her life are alive and well in their hearts and minds.

To help share Alisha's memory with the community that she grew up in, Charlevoix, her family has initiated, The Alisha Johnson Memorial Ski Scholarship Fund.

Alisha's former ski coach and a close friend of the Johnson family, Tori Fisher of Charlevoix, helped the family establish the fund at Charlevoix State Bank.

She explained that the fund seeks to incorporate three of Alisha's greatest joys in life, skiing, being involved in 4-H and children.

"The fund will give kids the opportunity to be involved in things she was involved in," Fisher said.

Fisher added that Alisha's parents, Mark and Connie Johnson of Charlevoix, want the fund to be used to help kids who can't afford ski equipment or who need financial help to be in the 4-H program.

Alisha learned to ski at Mt. McSaubia where she and her brother Chad would spend time developing their skills on the slopes. The brother and sister duo took the skills they learned at McSaubia into successful competition.

Alisha was a member of the Rayder varsity team from 1996 until her graduation from Charlevoix High School in 2000. Chad, is a member of Charlevoix's varsity ski team that placed second in the class C state championship this year.

Fisher and Carrow both said that they hope the fund will give others the opportunity to realize some of the same successes in life and on the slopes that Alisha knew.

Those who receive one of the fund scholarships may some day say that Alisha impacted their life as she has the lives of others.

"I wouldn't be where I am today if it wasn't for her. She would have thought that (the fund) was a good idea. She was always helping people," Carrow said.

Those who wish to contribute to the fund should make checks payable to, The Alisha Johnson Memorial Ski Scholarship Fund. Donations can be deposited at Charlevoix State Bank, 111 State Street, Charlevoix.

School election deadline

The filing deadline is approaching for anyone wanting to run for a seat on the Charlevoix school board.

Those interested in a seat on the school board need the signatures of at least 20 voters in the school district and have the proper paperwork turned in to the Charlevoix superintendents office, located at 208 Clinton Street in Charlevoix, by April 9. The school board election will be June 11.

School board members Barney Way and Scott Boss are up for reelection this year. Both men have already turned in their paperwork.

Michigan law requires that a candidate be a registered voter in the Charlevoix school district, be at least 18 years old, a resident of the state of Michigan for at least 30 days and a resident of the Charlevoix school district for at 30 days before the election.

Census shows loss for city, gains in townships

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Growth percentages for the county

According to the latest census numbers, while the city of Charlevoix loses population, the surrounding townships are seeing significant increases.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner said the city's population loss may be the result of more people purchasing a second home in the area and not claiming residency.

"For whatever reason we are becoming more desirable for people to purchase second homes," he said. "It wouldn't surprise me if in 10 years the population dropped again. 'We haven't talked about it this is good or bad.'"

Wiesner said the lower population will hurt the city as far as state funding, but he added the city's tax base has gotten higher to rising property values.

"Yes, we are effected by revenue sharing because of the population count, but that appears to me to be with the higher tax base that has been offset to a degree," he said.

According to the latest census numbers that have been released, the Charlevoix County's population went up by 21.5 percent since the 1990 census. While every area in the county experienced some growth, the exception was the city of Charlevoix with a lost 3.9 percent of its population.

Currently the city's population is at 2,994, which is down 122 people from the 1990 census count of 3,116. Charlevoix is still the second most populated city in the county behind Boyne City.

In contrast however is Charlevoix Township which saw 67 percent growth in this latest census count.

OPINIONS

What is a column and what is an editorial?

Jeremy McBain
'Just a thought'

Sometimes I forget that many people do not understand the newspaper business. It is a strange little world at times, filled with stress, laughter, writing on deadlines and the feeling that you are the most hated person in the area.

Many readers have no idea why one story has the name of its author above it and others don't; why we are not at every event or meeting in the county; why we do not include some of the news items they send in and the difference between a "column" and an "editorial."

So, I thought I would use a little space this week to let you in on the newspaper world.

Let's start with the reasons behind putting an author at the top of some stories and not at the top of others. It all depends on if the story was written by a staff member of the Charlevoix Courier.

Sometimes people send in information on events and it needs very little added to it. So we just type it in and print it in the paper with a few grammar and style changes. Since no one from the staff wrote it, no one from the staff takes credit for it. If it needed some expansion and a total rewrite, then you may see a name above it.

Information that is sent into us in the written form is called a press release. And not all press releases sent in will get printed word for word. We do edit them for length. Plus, if the press release has nothing to do with Charlevoix, the surrounding townships or in some cases the county, the chances of it being printed are slim.

Another reason some news items are missed in the Courier is because the news department consists of two people: Me and the Staff Writer Julie Musilek. As much as we would love to cover every aspect of life in the Charlevoix area, we need to sleep and visit with our loved ones at times too. Therefore, sometimes we are forced to make a choice: Do we attend this event or do we go home and visit with our families — who we haven't seen in days?

We are only human and are just as prone to human weaknesses, like rest and family. However, for some people, the idea that we are not robots that can be everywhere at once is a hard one for them to understand. But, I realize that in many cases, people who send in information are very excited and very proud of these events or groups and we try to give them as much coverage as we can.

Another point you should remember is: We do not usually cover events in Emmett County, Antrim County or Traverse City. We are called the Charlevoix Courier, therefore we cover the Charlevoix area. I do get a little confusion now and then about this.

Now on to the opinion page. Many people ask me what is the difference between a "column" and an "editorial"? The difference is usually in tone. For me a column is written with more colorful words than an editorial. It is one person's view on the little things in life or even the current events we face. An editorial is shorter and more to the point. It is usually a little harder than the softly written column.

For example, what you are reading right now is a column from me. Other weeks you will see a smaller piece of writing on the left-hand side of this page that is labeled "Editorial." This is my opinion on a controversial matter being faced by the city, county or school district. I stress it is only my opinion and not representative of the way any news story is written in the paper. There is a big difference between the opinion page and the rest of the paper, and I try to keep those differences in place.

The reason you don't see both this week is I do not want to give you too much of my opinion on this page. So when I write a column, I do not write an editorial for that week. I think it adds more diversity to the page by allowing more room for other writers' points of view to be put on it. I want to give people as much room as possible to have their letters to the editor published on this page and page 5.

Well, that is all for this week's peek into the world of newspapers. I hope this helps our readers understand our rationale a little more.

Don't build bigger marina

Editor:

I'm from CMS and I believe we should not have a bigger marina in Charlevoix. One reason is there would be boat overcrowding in Round Lake. There would be too many boats in Round Lake, making it harder for boats to navigate. Also, if the lake levels keep dropping, will that work? Large boats could become grounded in low areas of Round Lake. Will facilities such as restrooms, showers and hookups be adequate to handle all the people from the extra boats? If there aren't enough restrooms, there might be some pollution in Round Lake. This could lead to more garbage in the park too. The bridge would be up more and longer. This could cause more traffic backups, which could also detract people from coming to Charlevoix. Also, people will become aggravated and put stress on Charlevoix residents. In conclusion, I do not feel a bigger marina in Round Lake is in the best interest for the people of Charlevoix.

Guns not always bad

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School. I am writing to state my opinion about gun control. It seems to me that most people don't see the obvious about guns. First of all, guns can't kill someone without a person behind the trigger. Also, without guns, how do we hunt? Without hunting, how does the deer herd stay down? The deer are already running out of room in the woods. I don't know many people who like hitting deer. The deer are also depending on people's feed stations more now. They have to eat crops. The deer should be able to find food on their own and in the woods. This shows that the deer herd is too large. We need our guns to help keep the herd down.

Against marina plan

Editor:

I am a Charlevoix Middle School student. I don't think we should have a bigger marina here in Charlevoix. Here are some of my reasons. There will be more pollution because there

Fix Shanahan

Editor:

I think the BMX tracks at Shanawill be more exhaust from the boats, and litter or garbage in Round Lake. Round Lake doesn't have enough room to expand the marina. Another reason is that the bridge will be up longer. That means the cars will burn up more gas, and put more pollution into the air. One last reason is more pollution will kill a lot of fish here in Round Lake. That's why I think we should not have a bigger marina.

han Field need to be fixed up. The main reason is there are a lot of potholes. Potholes make you fall and you can get injured and go to the hospital. One of my friends cut his leg and needed stitches. I also think that they could use a concession stand. Kids like to play at that park and they would be able to buy snacks and drinks if they got hungry or thirsty. I think the profits could be used to help pay for the repair. More kids would be happier and then that would help kids stay out of trouble. I think this would also help our community. Please try to help with this project.

Pick weeds

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student attending Charlevoix Middle School. I feel that in the summer, after we plant the petunias, a volunteer group should go around town, pick the weeds and make the petunias look better. I feel that way because when you look at the petunias in the summer, people probably have run over them with their cars and they are full of weeds. The town should have a day when groups of people are assigned to a block and they pick weeds and if needed, re-plant petunias. By making the petunias look better, we're making the town look better. Also, if we do this about once a month during the summer, just imagine how beautiful our petunias in Charlevoix would be.

Another reason why we should do this is because the people that help will get more team spirit. They will also have more sportsmanship, which everyone needs. Also, they might have a better perspective of themselves and they will feel better about themselves because they volunteered to help out in their community. That is why I feel that we should do this. Thanks for your cooperation and for listening to me.

Police office manager leaves for greener work

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Some people who have spent extended periods of time at the city police station want to forget the incident, but Charlevoix resident Janine Warner says she will miss the time she spent there.

Janine, 45, is a Charlevoix resident of almost seven years and she has been at the station for pretty much her whole stay.

No, she is not an inmate, she was the local station's office manager.

Recently, rumors of her having a "green thumb" escaped Charlevoix and spread to the Emmet County MSU extension office. They contacted her to join their team, filling the esteemed position of Northern Michigan Master Gardening Coordinator, covering four counties. Janine decided she would turn in her scanner and the attached CB in favor of top-soil and a hoe.

"Gardening is a very important part of my life," she said.

Aside from sinking her hands in soil she said she also enjoys teaching and the new position has opened the door for her to teach more too. She will be setting up programs and teaching a master gardener's course this fall.

The course is a 12 week series fully equipped with quizzes and a final. Students' final assignment is 40 hours of volunteer gardening work. Course completion is recognized by the awarding of a master gardener title.

Janine is not only busy with the MSU job, but she has also started up a new local business with business partner, Charlevoix resident Linda Purdy, called Les Jardins Design and Maintenance.

The gardening duo's tag line is, "We plant the earth with color."

During Janine's stay with the city police, she said she developed a close rapport with police chief Dennis Halverson and the city officers. In fact, she said that after being absent from her familiar position she misses them the most.

"They've become my family over the time that I have been here," she said.

When Janine took her work to the great outdoors she left her seat at the head of the office vacant and in stepped former Ann Arbor resident Annette Herbert, 35.

Annette and her family relocated to Charlevoix in September.

"We are happy to be up north. We wanted to be by the water,"

Janine Warner (right), and her replacement as the office manager for the Charlevoix Police Department, Annette Herbert. (Photo by Julie Musilek) she said.

Annette's husband Eric Herbert joined the Charlevoix Middle School teaching staff.

She started at the city police office in February.

The position includes everything from processing officers reports, parking tickets and traffic tickets, filing incident reports and dealing with the public.

"There is a lot of lingo to learn but so far it has been a lot of fun. It is a great position to get to know who is who in Charlevoix," she said.

She said the job fit her work needs perfectly as she was looking for an afternoon part-time position to fill while her daughter was in school.

Hanging flowers to grace city's downtown

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix will get one more addition to the petunia planting in May.

Visitors and residents will see hanging baskets full of the colorful flowers adorning the light poles in its downtown business district this summer.

Last week, the Downtown Development Authority in Charlevoix unanimously gave approval for Charlevoix street and sewer superintendent John Martin to purchase brackets and 24 inch baskets that will be hung on the light poles.

Martin said the baskets will cost about $20 a piece and he has put the brackets out for bid. The city will need about 60 of the baskets and brackets for light poles.

Hugh Mason, of the Downtown Development Authority, said the brackets could cost right around $200 a piece. But, Martin said he does not think the cost will get that high.

Flowers for the baskets will be provided by Keep Charlevoix Beautiful. In addition to purchasing the baskets and brackets, the city will be responsible for watering the flowers.

Martin said he expects all of the bids will be in by next week and the baskets will be on the poles by May 24, when the community has its traditional petunia planting.

He added the baskets and brackets are very sturdy, leaving very little chance of one falling down.

"You and I could probably hang on those," he said.

Going back to school

Area mom finds enrichment with classes

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A few Charlevoix moms have sharpened up their pencils, strapped on backpacks and headed back to school.

"I think one of the greatest gifts we can receive is the gift of knowledge," one of the back-to-school moms, Barbara Haske, said.

Haske, 39, of Charlevoix said that when she and her husband Keith moved here three years ago she couldn't find work as a medical ultrasonographer, a position she had for 14 years before the move.

Haske said she panicked; she was living in a new town, her kids were in school and her husband was at work — everything she had known and her identity had changed.

She said one day she decided to truly enjoy her time. She joined a tutoring program focused on helping Native American students thrive academically.

Working with the students sparked a fire inside her that ignited her spirit.

She woke up one day and decided to go for her elementary education teaching certificate, a degree that would allow her to pursue something we all seek — working in a profession that is our passion.

"I think that maybe I can make a little difference in their (elementary students) lives. After a word of praise or a hug, I saw them (those she tutored) stand up straighter and take pride in themselves. What a reward for a teacher to be able to experience that," Haske said.

She found her dream was waiting no more than 20 minutes away at North Central Michigan College. She enrolled in the program and started back in the fall of 2000.

She soon found out that enrollment was the easy part. Being a student tackling 15 credit hours is a job, as is being a mother of two and a wife, as is being part owner of a local business.

She had transformed from a state of panic when she asked herself what direction is my life going in, to an accomplished woman consumed in three demanding roles.

She said that she realized how much she truly did before going back to school and found it difficult to try and keep up the pace.

"The most important moment was when I sat down and set my priorities straight and saw that some things just aren't going to get done," Haske said.

At the top of her priority list is her family. Haske said that her family is one aspect of her life that does not suffer. In fact, she has seen her role as a student positively impact the lives of her two children, Tyler, 12 and Chelsea, 9.

She said that they think it's cool that mom is back in school. They discuss current events the kids are learning about in social studies class that she is getting into in school too. Then, after school, the Haske clan sits around a table studying and working on homework together.

She also said that she values the subjects she is involved in and applies them more readily simply because she has been in the work force and has seen how it operates.

"Back in September I was in a philosophy class. I was like a sponge, soaking it up," Haske said.

Haske's business partner, Kris Balasz, 39, a Charlevoix resident of seven years has also decided to kick life into fifth gear and is extra busy hitting the books.

She said that when she was younger and studied to build a career in public relations, she may have underestimated how that career would mesh with motherhood.

Balasz found the late hours her public relations position required infringed on her time with her kids and she knew it was time for a change.

A high school is starting to appear in muddy field

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A tour of the site of the new Charlevoix High School in Marion Township proved that even though all the walls aren't complete and classroom floors are made of sand, ice and mud, the school is beginning to take shape.

The tour started as Project Superintendent for the Christman Company, Kevan Flory stopped through the muddy site stopping at the location of the entrance. He pointed up and outlined the way the walls will progress and pointed left into a block room where administrative offices will be located.

The front office will be equipped with many windows which may help administrators monitor the flow of traffic through the school.

Trudging through the entrance into the heart of the building, the classrooms, like the administrative offices, are block with dirt floors.

Down the hallway from the entrance, on the left there is an open space carved out where an elevator will be installed. The elevator will transport students, visitors and teachers to the second level of the new facility as will stairs.

Winding further into the school you come upon the library or what Flory called, "the media center." The library area will be bi-level with an attached technology center on the bottom level and two more labs on the top level where students will have access to computers.

Across from the media center is a sizable open space that will be a landscaped courtyard or commons area where students can read or catch an afternoon breath of fresh air.

The layout of the second level includes both classrooms and a walking track. Marion Township's natural scenery will be visible through windows that will be installed on the upper level facing Lake Michigan.

To access the walking track located above the gymnasium on the right wing of the school, a bridge will be constructed. The bridge will travel over the hallway that the main entrance leads into, connecting the upper level of the gym to the classrooms.

The site tour came to a close at the auditorium. Envisioning the auditorium requires a lot of imagination at this stage — Flory said that Christman has planned to save work on the auditorium for last as it requires a higher level of finish work. The orchestra pit is enveloped in concrete and the concept they'll employ of tiered seating, that will soon be filled with spectators, is imaginable. Construction crews are waiting for warmer weather to really get their hands dirty in there.

Flory said that the majority of the work that is currently done is in the administration/entrance area and the classroom areas. They are currently working on roofing. The biggest remaining task for the high school construction crews is for the masons who will place the exterior brick.

The new school is expected to open its doors in the fall of 2002.

Various bovine diseases have farmers on guard

FARMERS

This is a serious issue because of how highly contagious the disease is; nearly 100 percent of exposed animals do become infected.

Wieland added if a group from Europe or anyone likely to have been exposed to foot and mouth disease wants to tour the facility, they will be asked to wear disposable coverings on their shoes.

He said while isolating the herds may lower the threat of foot and mouth infection you can't totally isolate the animals from deer, which could be infected with bovine tuberculosis (TB).

In Warner's case, even if you can effectively keep intruders away from the animals, as anyone who has driven through the Norwood area knows, more deer inhabit the land than do people and livestock combined.

Both farmers say their livestock are tested for tuberculosis annually.

Wieland said that one cow in his herd was suspected of having been infected with TB during the last test that was done at his farm. The cow was consequently sent away and slaughtered. Results of further tests came back showing the cow was not infected.

Wieland added he was adequately compensated by the state of Michigan for the loss.

Neither said that the lifting of Michigan's TB free status has negatively affected their operations.

Warner sends his milk down to be bottled and it is then distributed within Michigan under the Dean's label carried at Glen's. Wieland also sells his beef within the state.

Farmers dealing with border states like Wisconsin — many of whom are located in the Upper Peninsula — are being negatively impacted by the TB outbreak, Warner said.

While many see the threat of foot and mouth disease and bovine tuberculosis as a foreign invader, the USDA has combated both diseases before. In 1929 the last of nine U.S. outbreaks of foot and mouth disease were eradicated.

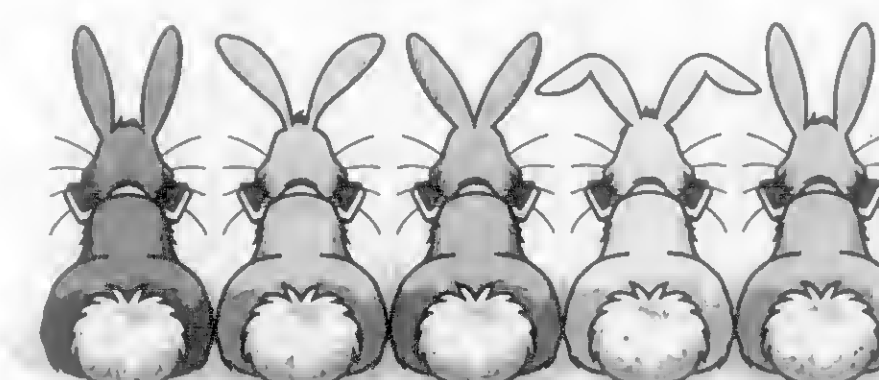

So, with all of these potentially industry devastating diseases threatening business some may wonder why farmers stay in this business.

Wieland summed up the reasons, saying: "I could sell the 270 acres and all the buildings on it and make some money, but I like riding a tractor and watching the sun set. I would just as soon be out turning dirt."

Tom Wieland shows Charlevoix resident Jean Musilek and her son, Camden, some of the corn that he feeds the cattle at his farm. Wieland and other area farmers are taking special precautions to keep their herds healthy. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Numbers show growth in county, but a loss in city

CENSUS

Currently the population of the township is 1,697, which is 681 more people than the 1990 census number of 1,016.

Other numbers for townships in the Charlevoix Courier's coverage area are:

• Bay Township — 29.5 percent growth with a current population of 1,068.
• Eveline Township — 41.8 percent growth with a current population of 1,560.
• Hayes Township — 43.7 percent growth with a current population of 1,893.

• Marion Township — 32 percent growth with a current population of 1,492.

• Norwood Township — 38.4 percent growth with a current population of 714.

• Peaine Township — 90.6 percent growth with a current population of 244.

• St. James Township — 11.2 percent growth with a current population of 244.

The city with the most growth in the county was East Jordan, which saw a 11.9 percent increase in population from 1990. Currently the population of East Jordan is 2,507, which is 267 more people than in 1990 when it was 2,240.

Kelly Chesney, spokesperson for the Office of the State Budget for Michigan said the entire northwestern area of the state saw a lot of growth in this census.

"It isn't surprising considering the number of things you have in northwestern Michigan," she said. Added onto the scenic splendor of the area is the fact that there is a lot more open land than in southeastern Michigan, giving more room for growth.

"In the Detroit area the land is tapped. It makes sense that you would want to move up north," Chesney said. "It is a quality of life issue."

She added northwest Michigan has been rated as the fastest growing area of the state for the past three decades.

YOUR HEALTH

Prevention is the key to keeping your health

Daniel Mann, M.D.

'Your Health'

Everyone has heard the expression "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." This applies to our health, as well as to many other aspects of our lives. Preventative health is a major emphasis of family practice and primary care medicine. Below are some general health recommendations and screening guidelines based on age groups to help promote healthy living for you and your family.

PEDIATRICS

After a child's first several years, children generally require yearly check-ups to ensure a healthy transition to adulthood.

There are a multitude of important issues, from vaccinations, injury prevention and sports physicals to ensuring proper growth and development, both physically and mentally.

WOMEN'S HEALTH

Women generally need yearly pap smears and pelvic exams from the time of becoming sexually active throughout the reproductive as well as post-menopausal years. Breast cancer screening with mammograms should generally begin at 40 years of age or younger depending on personal or family history. In addition monthly self-breast examinations are recommended and any suspicious areas should be brought to medical attention. If you are planning or attempting to become pregnant, a preconception appointment is helpful for addressing general health, proper nutrition, vitamin supplements and vaccination status.

MEN'S HEALTH

Many men think that health check-ups are unnecessary if they don't have any active medical problems. However, exams are generally recommended every 2-3 years and annually starting at age 40-50. Important issues for men, as well as women, include cancer screening and addressing risk factors for heart disease, such as tobacco use, high blood pressure, diabetes, high cholesterol and obesity. Screening for prostate cancer with a digital rectal exam and PSA testing can be discussed with your physician. In addition, just as women perform self breast exams, it is recommended that men perform self exams for testicular cancer, especially in men 20-40 years old, who are at an increased risk.

OSTEOPOROSIS PREVENTION

Osteoporosis places an individual at an increased risk for fractures due to decreased bone strength. Many risk factors include smoking, poor nutrition, immobility or lack of regular exercise and certain medical conditions. Ensuring adequate calcium and Vitamin D is important for optimal bone strength. I generally recommend 1200 mg of Calcium and 400 units of Vitamin D daily beginning in early adulthood as American diets are usually insufficient in these vitamins. In women, post-menopausal hormone replacement can help decrease the risk of osteoporosis and other medical problems. Screening by ultrasound guided bone density testing is recommended for all women 65 years and older and younger women with certain risk factors. In addition, although women are at higher risk, osteoporosis also develops in men and should be discussed with your physician.

COLORECTAL CANCER SCREENING

Colon and rectal (colorectal) cancer is the second most common cancer in the U.S. Screening generally begins at age 50 with testing for blood in the stool and/or scope tests, such as flexible sigmoidoscopy or colonoscopy. The timing and frequency of screening may be affected by you or your families' medical history.

VACCINATIONS

Vaccinations are needed throughout one's life. Tetanus boosters are needed every eight to 10 years. Influenza (flu) vaccines are now recommended for everyone over 50 years of age. Pneumonia vaccine (Pneumovax) is recommended for people over 65. A new pediatric vaccination called Prevnar helps reduce the risk of ear infections, pneumonia's and meningitis. Certain health conditions may require earlier immunizations. There are many other vaccinations available that can be discussed with your physician.

In addition to these recommendations, proper nutrition, appropriate sleep and exercise are important in maintaining a healthy and strong life for you and your family. If you have any questions, please schedule an appointment with your family physician.

SPORTS

Writer shares some of his memories of state

Allen Telgenhof Sports Stringer

My "Road to the Breslin" as a reporter began a couple of months ago when I saw an ad in the Courier looking for a sports stringer. In case you wondered, a stringer is a type of low-maintenance, independent contractor.

I thought that with my journalism background (high school and hometown newspaper writing, sports stringer in college) and the fact that I already go to all the games, I'd be a natural. More importantly, it turns out that no one else was interested in the job, so Jeremy McBain, my editor, gave me a shot.

The Rayders' basketball team was 7-3 at the time and was headed into their biggest week of the season against rivals Traverse City St. Francis and Kalkaska. Who knew that with me covering the team, they'd reel off 16 straight wins and play in the state finals?

Covering games in Charlevoix or East Jordan is one thing, but heading down to the finals at Michigan State, that is big time. Jeremy told me that I'd have a press pass just like all the "real" reporters. He said that it'd get me in most everywhere. I thought to myself, "Where would I want to get in?"

One thing was for sure, my Ray-der Final Four T-shirt would be frowned upon by my new media colleagues. I knew that hollering and screaming at the refs wouldn't be tolerated.

I left Charlevoix Thursday morning with my son in our "Honk for the Rayders" painted car. I wore my Final Four T-shirt under a sweatshirt, hoping I would have a chance to unveil it after a Rayder win. In other words, I was walking a fine line between professionalism and fandom.

I showed up at the Media Will Call window to get my press pass and tickets. Almost immediately, doors began to open for me. No one batted an eye as I walked into "reserved" and "for press only" areas.

We took a walk down to the court and peeked at the famed "press row," a row of seats just off the court, closer than anyone except the teams themselves. To my dismay, I found that they used assigned seating. I saw nameplates for the Detroit News and Free Press, the Grand Rapids Press but no matter how hard I looked, I couldn't find one for the Courier. I did spy a couple of spots taken by writers from Kalamazoo who were following the game before Charlevoix's.

I surmised that they wouldn't be hanging around for a game between Charlevoix and Detroit St. Martin dePorres. As the clock ticked down, sure enough, I was right and my boy Ty and I were just a couple of feet away from the action. No sense scamming seats if you can't include a 10-year-old in your fun.

It was so exciting; I got a little carried away and snapped a few pictures with my own little camera.

In these great seats, I watched Charlevoix beat Detroit dePorres, which probably has been the top basketball program in Class C the past 10 years. At the end of the game, when I just had to cut loose and cheer, I moved a row back with the rest of the Rayder Rowdies.

Right after the game, I was in a conference room under the stands for the teams' postgame press conferences — you can't see that without a pass. I saw the dePorres kids crying and heard their coach talk about how they had no idea Jimmy Shepherd could shoot like that. I also got to hear him say that Charlevoix was the better team that day.

While we waited for the Charlevoix players, I heard some of the other writers talk about Charlevoix and their exciting wins over Mio, McBain, St. Ignace and dePorres. They also talked about Jimmy and his record setting day. You don't get to hear that without a pass.

See PRESS, page 18

A view from the press table at the state finals

PRESS

Then Coach Haske came in with Jimmy and Scott Parrish. I fulfilled a mom's request and took some pictures of her son under the bright TV lights, answering questions.

I did get to hear the standup comedy of Coach Haske. He poked fun at himself, Jimmy, Rob Boss and even the reporters themselves. I was so inspired; I even asked a question. I knew I could always ask them questions later, but I thought, "Hey, my question might make it into the Free Press." (It didn't.)

After the press conference, I ran into Jeremy. He agreed to show me the one thing that every reporter must know. The location of the press room.

Man, those guys get free food and drink, programs, stat sheets, press notes and everything. Did I mention free food and drink? I guess I should say WE got those things, since I had my own press pass.

All my note taking during the game was for naught. They gave me a printout with all the stats and a play-by-play of what happened. Some of the information was pretty interesting. I knew that Charlevoix lost in the finals in 1938 and in the semis in 1999, but I didn't know they had lost in the semis six other times. That 23-5 loss in 1932 must have been brutal.

I left the semis determined to do better as a reporter for the finals. Well, specifically to use my press parking pass rather than spending the five bucks and to grab some press releases and free food before the finals.

After all that, the finals were a bit anticlimactic. Not to mention the fact that the Rayders lost, despite a great comeback and a great turnout by the whole town, it seemed. Now that all the fun of the weekend was over, it was time to make the long trip home and do the hard work of writing my article. Like I had been telling everyone all weekend, sure, it's fun to park close, sit courtside and get freebies. But the reason it happened is because I was there to work. Yeah, right.

At least I paid for my own meals, gas and hotel.

You know the Rayders only had three seniors on that team? I can't wait to get back to the Breslin again next year.

No serious injuries, one unit destroyed

FIRE

Fire and rescue arrived at the site around 10:29 a.m. and found the majority of the residents had already been evacuated to the building's front corridor.

The three minute response may have made the difference between a total loss of all three floors and just the devastation of the Harrison apartment. Schwartzfisher explained that on average a fire grows ten times its volume every minute.

He added that when they first came upon the scene, he didn't see smoke but after walking around to the rear of the building he saw the thick, gray clouds rising from apartment 117 located on the bottom floor of the tri-level building. At this time the apartment was half consumed in flames.

The fire team broke the door wall and windows of the apartment dousing the interior with an estimated 2,500 gallons of water.

The day of the flare-up was a perfect northern Michigan spring day, sunny but cool. But, the elderly and disabled residents outdoors were uncomfortable and city police chief Dennis Halverson took immediate action. Officials were able to get a school bus to transport the residents and provided them with snacks and beverages.

"When I arrived at the scene I saw people in various emotional states, with different medical conditions that we had to get out and do something with. We were fortunate to find a school bus and a transit bus," Halverson said.

Forty residents were transported to the County Sheriff's Department where 33 were served lunch and seven were picked up by friends and family.

While the 33 residents sat comfortably at the sheriff's department, fire fighters worked diligently to contain and extinguish the conflagration.

Resident of Pine River, Mary Ann Hamilton — on behalf of all residents at Pine River Place — said, "We want to thank the sheriff's department, police, EMT's...everyone that was out there. There were so many of them over there. They treated us like royalty. They took cookies and coffee around, snacks, treated us to lunch. They were just super...so caring."

At around noon, all but five residents were permitted to return to their apartment. Apartments 115-120 underwent a cleaning to remove water and the smell of smoke and the residents in them have since returned.

According to fire investigator Paul Ivan, the cause of the March 30 blaze was a toaster oven.

The report states that Robert Harrison was toasting a bagel when he was called to help someone in the hallway. When he returned to his apartment it was filled with smoke and flames.

Robert's wife, Rona Harrison called 911 to report the fire while her husband worked furiously to evacuate the 40 of the 65 residents that were in the building at the time to the outside corridor.

Halverson said that after the blaze was extinguished further investigation found scorching in the ceiling indicating that fire rescue's quick response kept the fire contained to the ground floor.

Harrison said that the apartment itself was a total loss, it will have to be gutted. In the meantime, he and his wife have another residence in Charlevoix that they have relocated to.

landers the ice breaker any time... it means we are no longer so isolated. We can get our cars to the mainland, bring over large items and of course welcome our snow birds home again from those warm places like Arizona, Florida and Texas.

The story of the island's German Father Zugelder

By ROBERT COLE

Beaver Island Historical Society

For well over 120 years, Beaver Island was a largely Irish-American culture with close ties with the Catholic Church. The island's Holy Cross Parish was involved in more than just the religious life of its residents; it played an active role in the community's educational, social, and civic spheres as well.

From 1866 to 1898, Father Peter Gallagher had led the parish of Holy Cross. The Irish-born Gallagher's common heritage with the islanders, along with his fluency in Gaelic, helped to embed the priest among his people for thirty-two years.

Upon his sudden death at 67, the congregation found itself at a loss. The islanders appealed to the diocese for a permanent replacement, but it would be almost another year before an available priest could be found. The locals must have waited with some uncertainty as well, for Gallagher's passing was the end of an era, and the future shape of the local Church an unknown quantity.

It was against this backdrop that Father Alexander F. Zugelder arrived in St. James Harbor on July 4, 1899. Born and educated in Baden, Germany, he had led two Michigan parishes prior to his arrival on Beaver Island. After years of building up each pastorate he had served, the 33-year-old cleric had volunteered to lead the island mission.

Zugelder applied a sense of practical foresight to his new station on the rural island. He transferred to Holy Cross upon the condition that two nuns join him there. The Diocese of Grand Rapids and the Dominican Order there agreed to his request. The Order offered to include two additional Sisters, one a musician, the other a cook and housekeeper. These four nuns were to be the first in a long tradition of Dominican teachers to serve the Island's school system over the next 90 years.

He rented a small house for himself on the harbor and had the nuns set up in a home across the street. The building next to the Sister's abode had been a saloon; Zugelder quickly made arrangements and by the spring of 1900, the tavern had been converted into a chapel.

The Father next set his sights on the Parish complex. Situated near a hillside cemetery a mile south of St. James were the church and an adjoining one-story rectory, built in the 1860's. The rustic buildings had changed little since their construction. The priest used his natural affability and determination to raise large donations of money and labor to conduct major renovations. He had the church nearly doubled in size, added a choir loft, and installed a hot air furnace. Later, the original wood-frame rectory was razed and replaced by a new convent in 1901, into which the Sisters relocated from their harbor residence.

In 1902 Father Zugelder began work on a new rectory sited across the street from the church. Calling on nearby farmers to collect stones and large boulders from their fields, construction began on a two-story cobblestone edifice with walls twenty inches thick, replete with a rooftop deck for observation. Finding work delayed due to a lack of volunteers, local legend has it that in response the good Father lit a nearby woodshed afire; when men scurried in to the area to help, they found the shed in ashes. Having a captive labor pool thus assembled, Zugelder promptly put them to work.

Completed in 1903, the new rectory drew the praise of the Charlevoix Sentinel's editor Willard Smith: "Father Zugelder's house is the best on the island (and) the location of it could not have been better. The view from the highest point of the house was cleverly planned...one can see the whole north end...the harbor and point, all neighboring islands, and the north shore of the mainland on a clear day."

The material improvements in Holy Cross Parish certainly bolstered his congregation's sense of pride; yet Father Zugelder's contributions were not limited to bricks and mortar. He was, more importantly, an accessible touchstone in his people's spiritual and cultural life. During his six years there, weekly mass attendance doubled. Beyond his clerical role he was active as counselor, leader of musical groups, and organizer of community gatherings.

He strove to raise his flock's own latent sense of religious purpose, reaching across presumed ethnic barriers to speak to the immigrant population in terms relevant to their cultural identity. As Zugelder's friend Willard Smith attested, "It is clearly seen that...he is partial to the Irish, and they, in return, are very fond of him and highly appreciate his labors for their spiritual and temporal welfare." That a German-born pastor could so skillfully effect these changes within an isolated Irish community a century ago reveals much of his vision and breadth of spirit.

Having shepherded his parishioners into a new century and a deepened sense of spiritual and communal purpose, Father Zugelder's pastorate at Holy Cross Parish ended in 1905. Today, the buildings he helped create and improve still stand on Beaver Island. Though now the church has been moved into town, and the other structures serve different purposes, his legacy, both tangible and intangible, remains.

Deer forces EMT to act fast

By JULIE MUSILEK

When Superman comes on the scene of a crisis in his bright blue suit and red cape he sticks out like a sore thumb, but Charlevoix hero Bob Roloff saves lives incognito, in a gray sweatshirt and jeans.

Recently, Roloff, the local Emergency Medical Service coordinator, was involved in a situation where he had to rely on his fast reactions and ended up needing help himself.

At around 6 p.m. April 5 while transporting a patient with a broken neck from Charlevoix Area Hospital to Munson Medical Center in Traverse City, Roloff came across a situation many northern Michigan drivers have been in — an unavoidable deer/vehicle collision.

But Charlevoix City Fire Chief Doug Carver explained this collision was anything but average. He said that Roloff thinks of the well-being of his patient above all else and wouldn't slam on the brakes because he risked further injury to the man he was transporting.

A pregnant doe impacted the ambulance on the driver's side, crashed through the window and smashed into the left side of Roloff's face.

False alarms cause many problems in area

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

How does a law enforcement officer better serve and protect the community — by pursuing violators or by chasing false alarms?

This question has become important as city and county police responded to over 300 false alarms in 2000 and each response can take up to 45 minutes of an officer's time.

"One or two (false alarms) could take away the whole force for a period of time," Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson said.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater agreed. Home invasion alarms are taking up too much of on duty police officers' time, he said.

Last year, Charlevoix county officers responded to 251 alarms, none of which were valid.

"The frustrating part is we treat each alarm as a felony in progress. We drop what we are doing and respond to it. It takes officers away," Lasater said.

Lasater explained that the false alarms have a couple of negative impacts. One, they absorb an officer's valuable time and two, they create the "boy who cried wolf" effect.

The "boy who cried wolf" effect occurs after the station has received eight false alarms from the same house; on the ninth officers may be less apt to rush over.

"The unfortunate thing about that is we'll be called to an alarm at so-and-so's place and think it's just another false alarm. Some day it could be valid and someone could get hurt," Lasater said.

Halverson deals with repeated offenders using a tactic based on this same effect.

Rotary extends fund-raiser

The Charlevoix Rotary Club is extending its performing arts center fund-raising drive for a few more months.

"Construction engineers are still working on the performing arts center's design, so we will have a few more months to raise the money we need to accomplish our goal," Rotary Reach for the Stars co-chair Dan Barron said.

In October of last year, the Charlevoix Rotary Club undertook a project to raise $225,000 to upgrade the new high school auditorium to a state-of-the-art performing center.

This upgrade would allow for a wider variety of performances and entertainment opportunities for the entire community to enjoy. A 192 channel sound system, computerized lighting system and professional-caliber stage rigging and curtains will be the result of the Rotary's campaign.

So far, approximately $50,000 has been raised with money still coming in.

Contributions are being accepted at any bank in the Charlevoix area. Bronze, silver, gold and "galaxy level" contributions will be recognized on a plaque in the new center.

Also, contributors will be given early opportunities to purchase tickets for performances for a three year period.

Options limited for last-minute tax filers

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

April means more than just rain, it also means tax time.

This year, filing by midnight on April 16 may be hard for local procrastinators as the post offices in Petoskey, East Jordan and Charlevoix will be closing at 5 p.m. April 16.

The Petoskey post office located at 318 State Street has in the past kept late hours for those with last minute changes or late night filers. But, according to post office supervisor Dick Morford, this year budget constraints won't allow the office to offer that service.

"We did a survey during tax times when we were open and found there wasn't enough traffic to warrant having someone stick around here. Even if we could guarantee 1,000 people would come in we couldn't do it. Things are kind of tight right now so unfortunately that service is one thing we cut back on," Morford said.

Those sitting at home trying to figure out how to get the documents postmarked April 16 when nearby post offices are closed for the day at 5 p.m. are offered an alternative in Charlevoix County.

Boyne City Postmaster Leslie Smith said that the Boyne City post office, 301 East Water Street, will not have an attendant on duty but will have a collection box available that will be picked up at midnight.

Smith said that documents put in the box after 5 p.m. will be postmarked April 16.

Area family featured on television show

The Russell and Susan Bolt Gallery and Studio, Grange Hall Pottery, will be featured on HGTV this month and next.

Segments featuring the business will be aired at 2 p.m. on April 25 and at 2 p.m. on May 14.

The two shows will feature the paintings, ceramics and history of the Bolt family. There will be a demonstration of ceramics and paintings and construction and completion of their popular art works.

The film will also display work in their gallery on Marion Center Road and at their Charlevoix home, as well as interviews with the family by the host, Carol Duvall.

The Weller Grossman Production Company of California filmed these shows in September 2000.

OPINIONS

Now the city knows plans are a mistake

One of the best gifts is the ability to find out you are going to make a mistake, before you actually make it.

This gives you time to react, time to change your ways and thus time to save yourself from the mistake. This is exactly the position the city of Charlevoix should be thinking they are in right now when it comes to its plans for marina upgrades.

Based on reactions from the community in this newspaper, it seems that the two conceptual plans for a new city marina are too much. One proposed plan would add over 100 new slips to the marina and extend into other riparian areas and the other plan would add over 80 slips, both of which are just too big for residents to sign on to.

Residents rightly point out that this massive addition will turn Round Lake into nothing more than a giant parking lot for boats, not to mention the impacts this could have on the natural environment in Round Lake. Plus, the impacts on the length of time the bridge will be up to allow boats to enter the lake could be tremendous.

It is understandable that the city would want to bring in more boats to Round Lake. More boats means more shoppers in downtown businesses and the marina is in need of updates. But there are just too many negatives with the conceptual plans currently out there.

It should be stressed that both of these marina plans are not written in stone. They will change before any work is being done on the marina.

In fact, city officials state they want to hear what the public wants to see done with the marina, and in East Park, before a final plan is drawn up. So, when people comment on their dissatisfaction with the two proposed plans in the newspaper, in public meetings and to their city representatives it should give a strong indication to officials that this is not the direction they want to go in.

It is still early and your comments on what needs to be done with the marina are still needed. City officials say they want the public's opinion, so let's be sure to give it to them.

Speaking out now is the best way to keep the city from making a very big mistake with its marina in the future. And the mistake would be for the city to build a marina like the ones presented in the proposed plans.

The great month of April and snow naming results

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

April is my favorite month and I have some reason to believe that May will be too.

Now that there are only a very few places where piled up snow still lingers, it is probably safe to declare winter over, but March seems to linger in the thoughts of some.

A number of people have told me in the past two weeks that my affection for the month of March is at least misplaced. Some even suggested what I might do with that particular opinion.

I have a confession to make. I recently reread one of Erma Bombeck's brief tales in a book called, "Motherhood, the Second Oldest Profession." In it she tells of the mother who wrote to each of her three sons, swore them to eternal secrecy and then explained to each that she had always loved them best.

What I was trying to do with the applause for March was something like that. It would not be difficult to write about each month in Charlevoix as my favorite. Mostly, I like the one I'm living in at the moment.

For those of you with a genuine antipathy for March, lighten up.

Before the last snow mummy melts away, we should conclude the snow naming contest from a couple of months ago. If you recall, readers were asked to offer new names for the many different sorts of snow we see in the course of an ordinary winter.

There were two entries. Maybe people are busier in February than I thought.

Tom Hanna told me that only the light feathery stuff that drifts down with no two flakes alike is real snow and then provided names for the other white things that fall from the sky.

Beebe sized granules should be called "Spelet" and smaller ones, "Snitt." For sleet that is almost rain, he would like us to use "Snizel." I plan to use "Snizel" whenever that happens.

The other entry came from Mrs. Jeffery Dickson, whose suggestions carried me back to the plains where I grew up. I used to tell people that until I left home, I was not aware that snow fell; I only saw it moving sideways. Mrs. Dickson would have me call that "Sinooin," a short-hand form of side-snow wind. If you say it fast, it sounds like "snowin."

The whiteout produced by sinooin should be called, "Whows" (almost rhymes with "whoa") for what you should be doing instead of driving.

There will be another contest next winter, but don't think snow until you have to. Focus on the cross.

We need a skating rink

Editor:

I'm a middle school student in Charlevoix. I think Charlevoix needs a new indoor ice skating rink. One reason is because the public rink gets all slushy halfway through the winter because of the weather. Some kids have rusted blades because of the slushy water. Also kids are bored in spring and summer. Have you seen all the kids just walking around with nothing to do? We should have at least one indoor ice skating rink. We can get the money from taxes and you can charge $10 for one person and $15 for a family. If we could have an ice rink, kids would be much happier.

We need more sleep

Editor:

I think middle schoolers and high schoolers need more sleep in the morning. First of all, if they don't get enough sleep they might stop coming to school in the morning. For example, they might not come to school because they might sleep in and forget about school. They might not come to school because they are too late or tired to come and are not ready for school. They are also tired because middle schoolers and high schoolers stay up later at night and have to go to school earlier in the morning.

Another reason why our schools should start later is because every morning when I go to school almost everyone in my school is tired. We are so tired that in my second hour class, my teacher makes us stand up and do stretches. My mom and dad also take me to school in the morning because the bus comes to pick me up for school too early and they think I go to school too early.

Most importantly, middle schoolers and high schoolers need more rest. Scientists say that kids need at least nine to 12 hours of sleep a night and we only get seven to eight hours of sleep. We also need more sleep because if we don't get enough, we might not be able to concentrate in school. We do better when we get our sleep and are well rested! I hope you will consider starting school at a later time.

We need a year-round soccer team

Editor:

I am a sixth grader in Charlevoix Middle School. I strongly think we should have a year-round Charlevoix soccer team for all ages. In addition to this, kids would be more involved and would be playing soccer in their spare time and not getting into trouble.

For example, kids or preteens who smoke or do things that are juvenile will maybe stop doing those things because they are worried about their game. I think if a kid gets booted off a team because of their grades, they will care more about their work. Another reason for this is that it gives people more self-confidence and exercise. That also means stronger bones for older people.

Most importantly, it's good for the people of Charlevoix. It gives Charlevoix something else to cheer for. All these reasons are very important. Please consider my proposal.

Children should not be punished as adults

Editor:

I'm a sixth grade student attending Charlevoix Middle School. I feel that children under the age of 18 years old should not be tried as an adult or receive adult punishment. One reason I feel this way is because a child could be put in prison. Another reason that I feel this way is because if a child does something wrong to make you send them to prison they aren't going to learn any good from being there. They may be sorry for what they did, but I'm sure that they won't pick up very many good habits. I know people who have seen a prisoner before; they do not act very polite. The adult prisoners would be very bad influences on children my age.

Another reason I feel that children under the age of 18 should not be tried as an adult is because children need to see the world around them. If a child is in juvenile hall they are given the opportunity to go outside while on probation. If a child is sentenced to life in prison they don't have the opportunity to be on probation and see town. Gym teachers everywhere will agree with me that students need to have exercise. They also need to be outdoors or even able to go into town so that they can see what kinds of changes and differences have been made in their town and in the world.

A third and final reason that I feel that children under the age of 18 shouldn't be tried as an adult is because children need an education. Teachers agree with me also. If you're a juvenile delinquent you're given the opportunity of an education. If you're sentenced to prison you're not. This means that you will never have received any knowledge other than what you learned before you were sent to prison. You may never be able to assure yourself that you have fulfilled your job as a student.

I would hope that most of the readers of your paper agree with me, and believe in what I stand for. I thank you for your time and cooperation.

School should start later

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School. I am writing to say that school should start later. Students need to be awake to concentrate on their work. Then, because students can concentrate, they can comprehend much better. This may also lead to higher grades and higher MEAP scores. So, then people in other towns and cities can go, "Wow, Charlevoix is really smart!"

Another reason that school should start later is that students rarely get the recommended amount of sleep for people their age. Scientists have recommended that school age children get nine to 12 hours of sleep each night. An example of this is a student goes to bed at 9 p.m. and has to get up at 5:30 a.m. to catch the bus. That person only got eight and a half hours of sleep! Some kids even get up before their parents! Studies have shown that the time that the majority of the kids get in trouble is between 3 p.m. and 6. This is because that time is after school and before dinner.

We should start school at 9:45 a.m. (after the elementary school) and get out at 4:41 p.m. Having school at this time would enable kids to sleep in and would shorten the time between school getting out and dinner. Our schools say that they put children first but are we really putting children first by starting school so early?

Thank you

Editor:

The residents of Pine River Place and the families of those living there would like to express our thanks to the many people who helped Friday morning when there was a fire on the first floor. Such an outpouring of love and concern — it was absolutely wonderful! No doubt there were 40-50 people doing whatever was necessary and it was deeply appreciated. We cannot name them all — the fire department, sheriff's department, Charlevoix police, ambulance personnel, drivers of both school and county buses and many private citizens who saw a need and responded.

Again thanks to all of you!

Healthcare Comes Home

"Mom loves her independent life, but she needs some regular assistance. We tried to be with her every day, but our work schedules and the kids' activities made that almost impossible. I worried and felt guilty just about all of the time.

Then we learned that VitalCare could help. Mom went along with the idea of having a home health aide come over three days a week to help her with laundry and light housekeeping. I stopped by the other day, and the two of them were having a great time over lunch. I am so pleased; Mom has her independence, and I have peace of mind."

Senior center announces upcoming fund-raisers

The Charlevoix Senior Center has announced several upcoming fund-raising dinners over the next two months.

They will be: Today — chicken dinner; April 24 — roast beef dinner; May 1 — Swiss steak dinner (tickets necessary); May 16 — chicken dinner and May 29 — roast beef dinner.

All ages are welcome. These dinners are necessary so that renovations can be funded and completed before the busy summer months begin.

Renovations will include an elevator, a pantry and a covered entryway. The elevator to the lower area of the building will provide accessibility so that everyone can participate in the computer, craft, wood carving, music and other activities now located downstairs. Installation of the elevator should begin in April. The pantry project involves enclosing the patio just off the kitchen and will protect the refrigeration units that have been stored there. The third project is to cover the front walkway into the center. This was part of the original plan for the building and will protect visitors from rain and snow.

Much of the funding for the elevator has been secured through grants. In addition, individual fund-raisers have brought the total to over $32,000. If there is extra money collected for the elevator, the funds will be directed toward supplies for the other two projects. Center volunteer labor will be used whenever possible to keep costs of the lift and all the renovations as low as possible.

These projects will complete what was envisioned for the Charlevoix Senior Center when the first expansions were made to the old Charlevoix Township Hall in 1988. Call the Charlevoix Senior Center at 547-5361 if you would like to volunteer or would like more details.

Barnes to study marina's impact on bridge

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Proposed changes to Charlevoix's East Park area have generated community-wide discussion and even inspired one resident to draft sketches depicting his vision of project improvements.

"The public has got the impression that the marina plans (on display outside council chambers at city hall) are cast in stone and that is nowhere near true," Charlevoix resident and bridge impact study coordinator, Josh Barnes said.

Throughout his years as a Charlevoix resident Barnes has had numerous titles — from international businessman, to mayor and engineer.

And city of Charlevoix officials recently shifted the responsibility of conducting the bridge impact study from city police chief Dennis Halverson to Barnes.

Barnes said the study is aimed at addressing how additional boats navigating through Round Lake will impact traffic delays. He added, the study will most likely be completed in the fall of 2000.

City manager Mike Wiesner said the city expected the Michigan Department of Transportation to conduct the study, but because it deals more with boats than cars, they said it isn't a study they normally do.

Beyond the study, Barnes has also developed some data looking at replacing the currently "jagged breakwall" at the municipal marina. A breakwall is the wall between land and water. His plan uses a straight design that he believes will result in a more usable park.

"The public has got the impression that the marina plans are cast in stone and that is nowhere near true."

Josh Barnes.

Former mayor in charge of bridge impact study

"In my opinion, this (breakwall straightening) could make East Park a more usable, pleasant area by eliminating the steep grades. Without that you really only have half a park," Barnes said.

A second part of his proposal has to do with a floating dock system for the marina. The marina currently has fixed docks. As a sailor, Barnes sees the current system as difficult to use, especially for small boats.

Both the sketch produced by Barnes and the blueprints of the city's engineer, United Designs Inc. of Cheboygan, propose the use of floating docks.

Barnes said that he has generated two different sketches, one showing his plan using 70 slips and another with 107.

Charlevoix city manager Mike Wiesner said that ideas like those presented to him by Barnes at an April 2 lunch meeting will be considered for review by the community during a public hearing.

Wiesner added that before that public hearing can take place the city needs to do a financial feasibility assessment and also needs information from the bridge impact study.

"There will be no plan until we have had a public meeting to hear from the community what we want to accomplish in the area," Wiesner said. "People have been asking a lot of questions: maybe we haven't done a real good job explaining how we see the process evolving."

The city is currently organizing interviews to appoint a project planner for shore-side renovations. They are looking for firms that have had experience in how to take public input.

Wiesner said that city officials may have a public hearing for shore-side renovations by mid-June.

Norwood Township needs voter approval to fix up roads

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Norwood Township residents may be headed back to the polls.

The Norwood Township board will have a second public hearing at 7:30 p.m. April 16 to decide on a possible August special election which may increase township taxes by 1.5 mills for three years.

According to the minutes from the first public hearing that took place March 19 — in 2002 a 1 mill road millage would generate approximately $27,450.

At the meeting Norwood Township residents and board members said township roads need improvements and they can't wait for the county road commission to make them.

The minutes from the meeting state that Clipperview Association representative Bill Lovett said, "We depend on our county road commission to do our road projects and they have no money to do so. If we are going to get any road work done, we are going to have to pay for it."

Board trustee Mark Maynard also sees township residents financial support of roads as a merited request. He said, "We need to continue supporting the investment we have made in our hard surface and gravel roads."

Lovett added that one mill may not even be enough to make the improvements, and the township board should be asking for more.

YOUR HEALTH

What happens when you have an eye exam?

Kimberly Molter
O.D.

'Your health'

In 1964, the first presidential proclamation was made declaring the first full week in March to be "Save Your Vision Week." In honor of last month's celebration of vision and eye care, I thought I'd discuss some components of a typical eye exam in my office.

First, your vision acuity is measured. This is the 20/20 number. 20/20 is perfect as most people know, but if you have to squint or guess at the 20/20 numbers, you might still have a small correction that could be beneficial. Sometimes you don't realize how poor your vision is, especially with no other point of reference! This is especially true of children. A 7-year-old with blurry vision probably thinks everyone sees as they do.

Next on the agenda are tests for muscle control. Each eye is controlled by six muscles and sometimes those 12 muscles don't work together as they should. Pupil reactions and peripheral vision is checked to look for any abnormalities. Then a nifty computer scans the power of your eye and gives a baseline poser for glasses, telling me whether you are nearsighted, farsighted or perfect. This test is really great for small children who don't respond so well to more adult tests. Then you get to fine-tune the prescription by choosing which lens is clearest for you.

Following distance vision testing, near vision is tested, especially if you are "40ish" and up. The lens in your eye that changes focus to read starts losing flexibility somewhere in your 40s. That usually means you need one power of lens to focus at a distance and another for near. The most convenient way to do this is bifocals or "multifocals" (progressive lenses), although there are options to discuss.

After the glasses prescription is set, it's time for eye drops! This first drop is for a glaucoma test, also known as checking the pressure in your eyes. Glaucoma under 40 is not common, but not unheard of, and each successive decade you are statistically more likely to have it. The scary thing about glaucoma is that it rarely has symptoms. You don't "feel" like you have it. You are diagnosed with it by regular routine eye exams, every 1-2 years.

After the glaucoma test, one more drop dilates your pupils. The purpose of this drop is to allow me a better view into the back of the eye, the retina. Here I look at the health of the optic nerve and can directly observe the blood vessels in the back of the eye, the only place in the body they can be seen without skin over them.

Vascular diseases like hypertension and diabetes can sometimes be detected in the back of the eye. I also look at the macular area of the retina, which is the part of the eye that disconcerts fine detail. Some people know about age-related macular degeneration and may know older people who cannot read small print anymore.

Current research says nutrition is a powerful preventer of macular degeneration. Tops on the list of food to eat are spinach (kale and collard greens too, if you have a little bit of the south in you) and orange vegetables like squash and pumpkins.

Well, I am running out of room so that's enough education for now. I didn't touch on contact lenses which is another whole topic! I hope you learned a bit about your eyes and having them examined. Celebrate the fantastic sense of vision.

Norwood looks to the voters for road money

ROADS

Township Supervisor Wayne Boss responded to Lovett's statement with skepticism, saying that the township may have trouble getting one mill passed.

In an effort to gain millage support Lovett suggested educating residents of the costs of road repair work.

Maynard said that by updating the Norwood Township list of priority road repairs and distributing that information in the form of a letter of intention to all of the 685 township property owners the board may be able to show residents the work that needs to be done.

He added that Ferry and Richardson roads will most likely top that list.

At the close of the meeting the board decided to work on generating the list of priority roads, including the costs of those projects. They did not firmly decide to mail this information to all township residents.

The remaining .5 mill to be included on the ballot if the township has the special election slated for August would be used to fund emergency services in Norwood Township.

Norwood officials hope to fix roads like this with money they will get from a proposed millage in August. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

EMT risks injury to keep patient safe in transport

Carver reported that the close encounter Roloff had with the doe caused temporary paralysis in the left side of his face.

Moments later a distress call from Roloff came over the scanner calling for two ambulances near Eastport, one for him and one for his patient.

Central dispatch attempted a couple of times to connect with Roloff to get information about the accident scene, but got no response.

About one minute later a second call from Roloff came through and he stated he was near Barnes Road in Eastport.

Two ambulances were dispatched and Roloff was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital where he was treated for injuries and released later that same evening. A second ambulance continued the patient transfer to Traverse City.

Carver said that after being released Roloff headed right for the station to get a look at the damage to the ambulance. He saw a missing mirror and window on the driver's side, a front seat full of glass and the body of the vehicle covered in deer hair.

Roloff took April 6 off to recuperate from the accident.

The doe and her two unborn fawns were killed as a result of the impact.

This Charlevoix ambulance still shows the aftermath of its run-in with a deer recently. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

R&C Painting wants to brighten your house

Ray and Carolyn Fuller want to help give your house a fresh look this spring.

The couple own R&C Painting, which specializes in painting and staining everything from the outside of your house to the deck in the back.

The couple even provide drywall repair and can remove wallpaper for you.

Ray and Carolyn, both Charlevoix residents, started the year-round business in March of 2000, because they saw a need for their services in this fast growing area.

And, because they are a husband and wife team, Ray and Carolyn believe this allows them the ability to pay more attention to detail in the work they do.

"We put the beautiful into Charlevoix the Beautiful," Carolyn said.

The couple have both been in the painting business for several years. All of the supplies they use are brand-name products from Complete Paint and Supplies.

R&C Painting provides its service after 6 a.m. or before 7 p.m. by appointment.

The couple can be contacted by calling or faxing (231) 547-9243.

VanGuilder to step down as principal to be teacher

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After 16 years as Charlevoix Middle School principal, Dennis VanGuilder has informed the school board that he is ready to turn over his administrative position for a spot in front of the chalkboard.

"I'm moving from being quarterback, back to the line of scrimmage. Schools are about teaching and learning. I'm ready to roll my sleeves up and get back into the classroom," he said.

August 31 will mark his final day as middle school principal.

VanGuilder said that what he enjoyed most during his time as principal was the students. He added that he looks forward to interacting with the students on a different level.

"Middle school kids are unique, they are going through a lot, it is a strange time in their lives. The students need a lot of understanding and love but they also need parameters for their behavior. That is why I went into education," he said.

VanGuilder started his career in education 29 years ago in Ubly where he taught and coached. In 1976 he and his new wife Dianne decided to move to Charlevoix where the couple built a home and had three children.

VanGuilder taught social studies and language arts at Charlevoix High School for four years. Then, in 1980 he became assistant principal under former high school principal Vane Smith, a role he filled for five years.

In 1985 he made the switch to the middle school where he was awarded the position of principal.

"I was 29, just a rookie," he said. VanGuilder has since watched for 16 years as middle school students have come and gone.

"The kids themselves are growing up in a different world, technology, TV, computers — instant everything. The things you deal with as a principal today are not what you dealt with 15 years ago," he said. "I just turned 50, it's time for a change but I still want to be active, the kids keep me young."

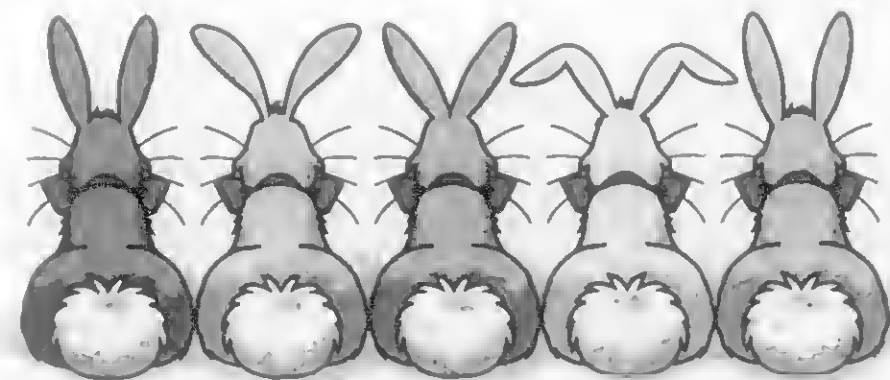

VanGuilder's new role as teacher will start up September 1.

He said that he is not sure where in the middle school he will be teaching yet and that he does plan to continue being the school athletic director in addition to his teaching position.

Charlevoix Middle School principal Dennis VanGuilder will be stepping down from his position to take a new one as a middle school teacher and athletic director next fall. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

A review of the past events in Charlevoix

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

I was reading through some of the Charlevoix Courier papers that I had saved through the years, and it was so enjoyable that I thought you might like to reminisce with me. I am such a saver of everything, that I have been going through my boxes of memorabilia, to throw out things which my children don't have an interest in and I always end up reading the old papers, letters, school memories, etc.

In January of 1973 attorney Arthur R. Reibel was sworn in as district judge for Charlevoix and Emmet counties. The County Clerk's office reported 99 babies born in the county in 1972, which was a modern day low. My grandmother, Mrs. Floyd (Matilda) Ikens, celebrated her ninetieth birthday. (She died nine years later, in the spring of 1982, when she was 99.) Lou Hollow was named president of the First State Bank. Mrs. Edith Gilbert introduced her new book, "Let's Set the Table." Rev. Donald Schorsch returned to the Assembly of God Church. Wave action destroyed the bank at the foot of West Dixon Avenue.

In February, Jim Williams bought Schroeder's Drug Store and changed the name to Dockside Pharmacy. Robert Lieberman was elected president of the Chamber of Commerce.

In March, the city council reported that sewage rates would double in April to make up a deficit and to pay for more costly operations at the new disposal plant. Former coach, Ray Kipke, was named to the "State Hall of Fame." Robert Miller resigned as Charlevoix school superintendent to accept a position in Grand Ledge. Sundew tests ice-breaking "bubbler."

In April, Richard Fochtman was elected first ward alderman, Mrs. Jeannine Wallace, second ward alderman and George Plumm, third ward alderman in city voting. Also elected were incumbent Mayor Edward P. Hansen, clerk Ida A. Heise and treasurer Annabelle Cunningham. The Fochtman Motor Co. store on South Bridge Street was destroyed by fire.

In May, Teresa Ann Phelps was named valedictorian and Wilson Ray Boss, salutatorian of Charlevoix High School, class of 1973. Charlevoix girls captured regional track and field title. Curtis Kipke was named the recreation director. Phil Christ placed second in the freestyle wrestling tourney in Alpena. The proposed city budget showed a 20 percent increase. Hospital board honored retired directors Fred Willis and Gordon Freedman. Fr. E. Francis Denay, pastor at St. Mary's Church was feted on his 40th anniversary of entry into priesthood.

In June, Mrs. Isabell Oliver, 95, Charlevoix's oldest resident died. Max Novak and Larry Warner were elected to the Charlevoix Board of Education. James McKimmy was hired as Charlevoix school superintendent after Richard Fonger declined to move here.

In July, David Norton, DVM, opened a veterinary medicine practice in town. Submarine veterans from around Michigan dedicated their monument in East Park in memory of lost comrades. Mrs. Jane Lieberman was elected president of the Charlevoix building as an office.

In August, Carole Pence was crowned the 1973 Venetian Queen. Her court was comprised of Candy Klooster, Maurine Wallace, Judy Hamilton, Patti Warner, Cathy Dubey, Cathy Morris, Tori Lager and Darcy McCandless. Norman Ance was appointed city attorney, succeeding Robert Hoffman. Robert Wexstaff was named acting city administrator to replace Thomas Hanna who left Sept. 15. Hufford Industries won a $500,000 American Motors Corp. contract. Freedman Aircraft Engineering Corp., worked a full year without a lost time injury accident.

In September, Boulder Park residents honored Earl A. Young after a 40 ton boulder was placed on the shore marking the entrance to the subdivision.

In October, Peggy Carey was crowned Homecoming queen.

In November, the American Legion raised funds to purchase a new electrically operated chair for Fran Martin. A bear left his tracks on the north side, and swam Round Lake, rambling through the Belvedere Club. The South Shore was added to the Beaver Island fleet and started its runs in the spring.

In December, a crazed deer attacked Kenneth MacLean's home in Norwood, breaking a window. Last rites were held for Kit Carson, retired lumber dealer and first ward representative on the Board of Commissioners. City attorney, Norman D. Ance died. Vincent Olach was hired as manager of the Chamber of Commerce.

All in all, it was a busy year, and one to remember, as I enjoyed re-reading about the people who made Charlevoix click.

Residents could get charged for false alarms

ALARMS

He writes letters to the property owner and if the owner is unresponsive, he won't send his officers there anymore. Lasater has taken the problem to another level, fining repeat offenders $100 every time he dispatches an officer to the site of chronic false alarms. He explained that about five or six years ago the County Board of Commissioners passed an ordinance penalizing homeowners for false alarms. After the first instance homeowners receive letters and after that it's a $100 ticket every time an officer is dispatched. But, not all impacts of the alarms were sited by the police department heads as negative. Lasater explained that his department has seen a reduction in breaking and entering violations over the years which he said could be because of home alarms. And, Halverson said regardless of the negative impact of false alarms, they do help his department. "We appreciate more alarms being installed and are more willing to accept false ones to a point," Halverson said. Both Halverson and Lasater said that in most cases the alarms are triggered due to sloppy workmanship on the part of the installer or negligence on the part of the homeowner.

Librarian fears for her job

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After 28 years serving the community as director at the Charlevoix Public Library Marybeth Wallick, 54, of Charlevoix fears she may lose her job.

Wallick claims that some of the seven members on the library board are "railroading" her out of her position.

Richard Brandi, spokesman for the library board and board president, said that this is a personnel issue. He declined to comment on most of the specifics of the situation until after he is able to speak with a labor attorney. Wallick's contract is up for renewal in June.

Brandi explained that discussion of the contract will occur at the next library board meeting to take place at 3:30 p.m. May 10 in the library basement, located at 109 Clinton Street.

"I am not aware of any action the board is taking," Brandi said.

However, the Charlevoix Courier has obtained a retirement proposal given to Wallick on March 16 by Brandi. The first paragraph on the proposal states, "This proposal is strictly confidential and is not to be discussed with any staff, board member, the general public or the press." Brandi said of the proposal: "That's a concept, an idea. It has to be approved by the board."

But, Wallick still worries and has no plans on retiring.

"This has been going on for a long time. I don't sleep and I have nightmares. I don't want to retire. I'm not financially ready to retire. I don't see how I can win, but I'm not going to go away ashamed," Wallick said.

Wallick said the board is taking calculated steps to remove her from her post. One of the steps she referred to was a recent performance evaluation completed by the board. She said the results were poor and didn't accurately reflect her level of performance.

And Marion Township library board representative Linny Arnold agrees with her.

"The problem with the evaluation is they (some board members) don't know the position. They have no clue what is involved in the background work of a library."

MDEQ to clean up contaminated dry cleaning site on Bridge Street

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) is getting ready to clean up groundwater contamination threatening to migrate into Round Lake and the Pine River Channel.

"Residents in the city of Charlevoix are fortunate all city drinking water is treated. There is no risk to people," environmental manager for the MDEQ Bob Wagner said. "It (perchloroethene) is beginning to vent to the surface water and if there is a high enough concentration there could be an aquatic impact."

MDEQ has been investigating the contaminated land located at 701 1/2 Bridge Street, the site of Bradford's Cleaners, for some time.

Wagner said the contaminant, perchloroethene, is almost exclusively used by dry cleaners to get stains out of garments. He added that the contamination caused by the previous site owner, not Bradford's, was not intentional and is a common problem.

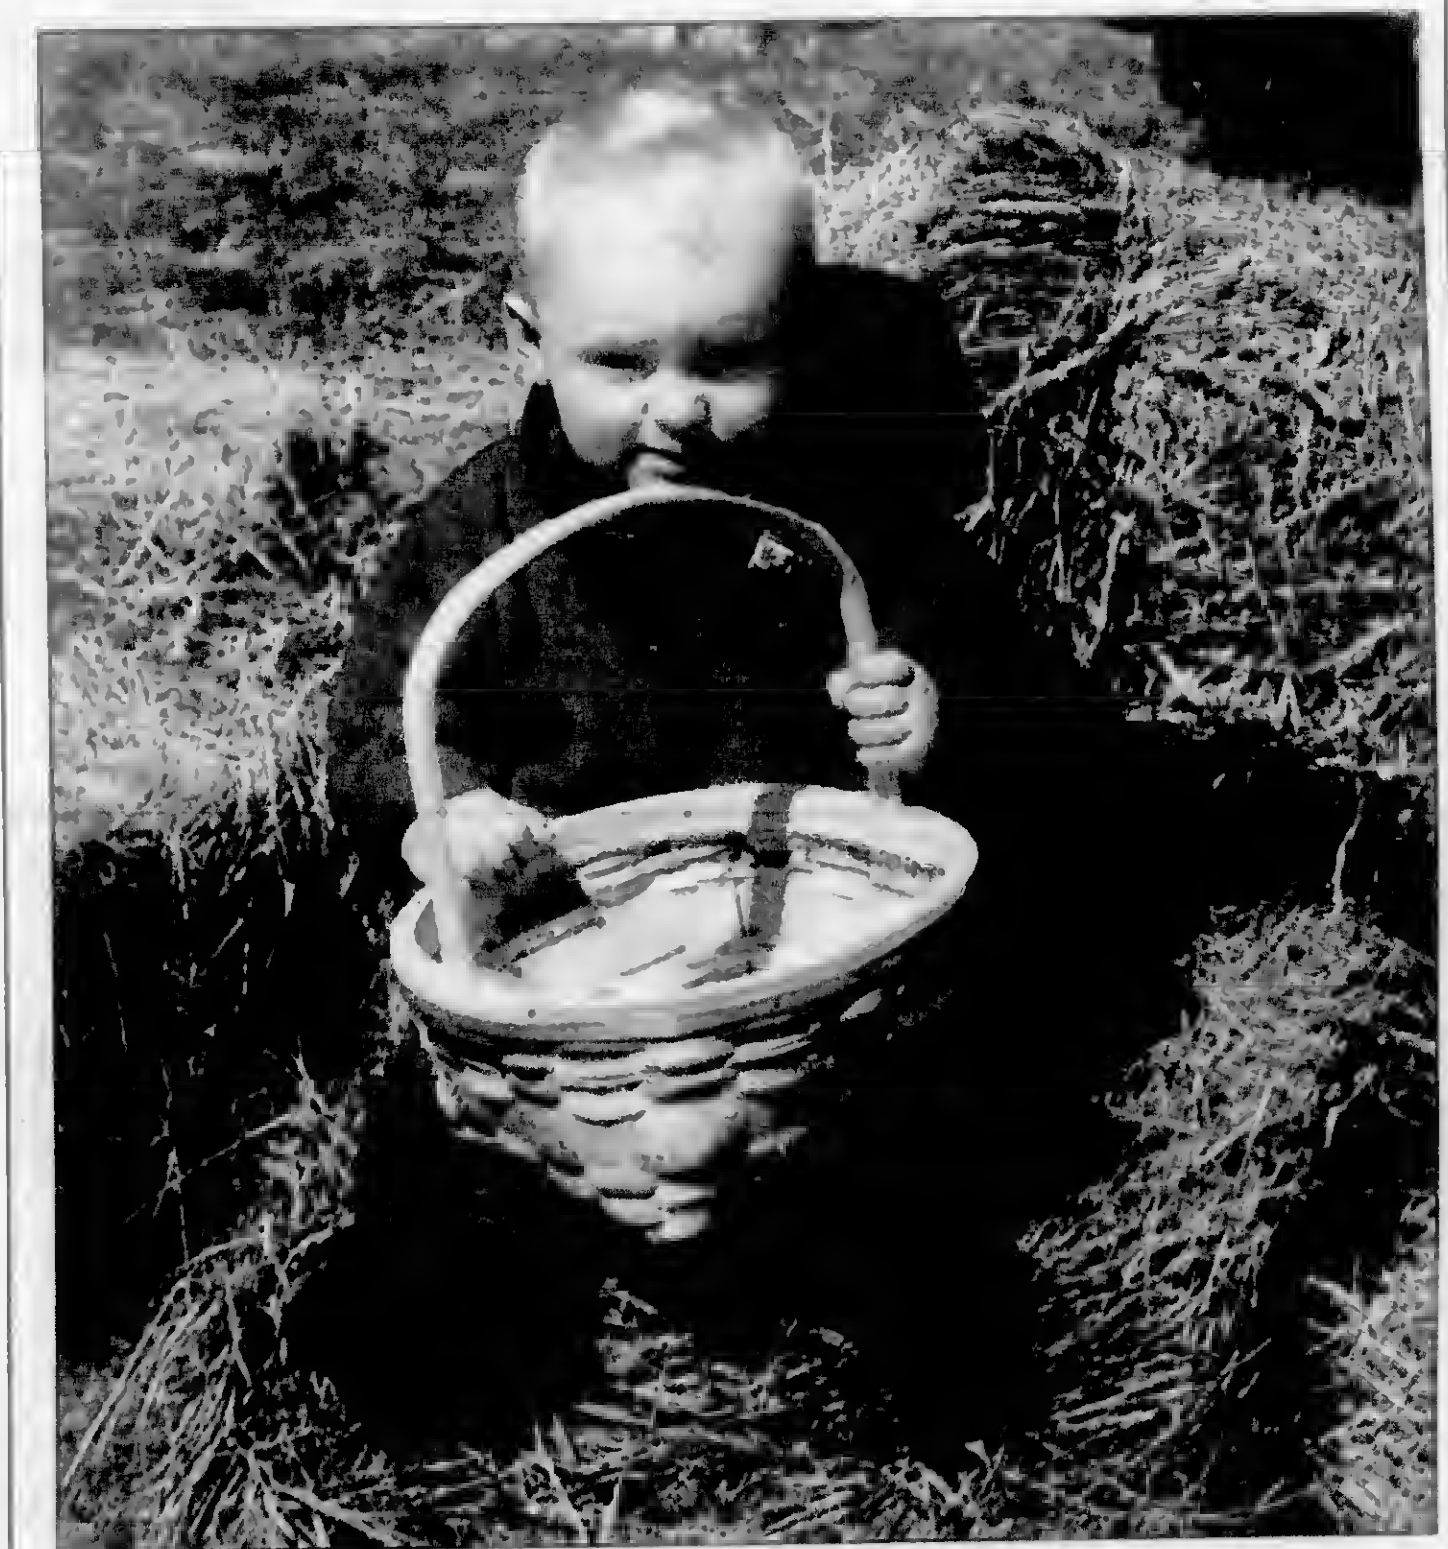

In the mid to late 1970s the MDEQ discovered that the chemical had reached the soil at the property.

The group decided to act now because the contamination has reached the groundwater and is beginning to migrate off-site to where the Pine River Channel and Round Lake come together.

"The MDEQ has a plan to go forward with the installation of a system that will treat the soil and the groundwater at that site," Wagner said.

He added that the clean up effort will not be intrusive and will not interfere with the activities at Bradford's.

Beaver Island students take part in international testing

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Two years ago, 10 eighth grade students from the Beaver Island Community School were invited to participate in an international math and science study and the recently published results reveal that within the United States, Michigan school districts are on the cutting edge of education.

"While Michigan schools still have a long way to go to be competitive internationally, great progress has been made in Michigan in the critical middle school years," Michigan Governor John Engler said in a press release.

The Boston College International Study Center conducted the Third International Math and Science Study — Repeat (TIMMS-R) — a worldwide education companion study — by randomly selecting schools and then employing a common measurement of academic success...testing.

The study used 13 U.S. states and 38 countries as its basis of analysis. Beaver Island was one of the 57 urban, suburban and rural Michigan schools the center used to represent Michigan in the study.

"We feel good about having been invited to participate and we thought of the test as one more measurement of how our kids are doing," principal and superintendent of the Beaver Island Community School Kathleen McNamara said.

McNamara explained unlike Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) testing, which measures progression of education in the state, TIMMS-R is an international measurement tool.

"The TIMMS study is overall very different from the MEAP. It is more of a study, not just a test. It is a much more comprehensive study in terms of math and science instruction worldwide," she said.

The specific scores of Beaver Island students are not available, but as a whole the Michigan group performed better than randomly selected groups from 12 other states including Texas, Indiana and Massachusetts.

However, like previous TIMMS study results have shown, U.S. scores were still below the international edu-

OPINIONS

The First Amendment
Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Public officials — remember who your boss is

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

You cannot govern in secret and still call yourself a democratic country.

Secret governing, that which is done behind closed doors and away from the public, is the worst kind of government. It is basically like having employees try to run the business without letting the boss know what they are doing. In this case, the employees are the governing bodies and the boss is the tax-paying public.

I have very little tolerance for this kind of government at any level. I firmly believe that all of the people's business should be done in front of the people...all of it. My skin crawls every time I hear of a government meeting going into "executive sessions." Whenever I hear of this happening, the folks in the Charlevoix

Courier office can confirm my red face and rantings about "closed-door" shenanigans.

But, governing bodies claim they close their meetings for "property acquisition...for contract negotiations...for personnel evaluations..." and the list of reasons goes on and on, with each one being technically right under the Michigan Open Meetings Act — basically an act that says all government business must be done in view of the public unless you have a really, really good reason it shouldn't. But, to me, I believe even the rules allowing government bodies to go into closed session are too much.

Recently, I picked up a copy of a newspaper industry publication "Publisher's Auxiliary" and read an opinion article telling me I am not alone. The piece, written by Jerry and MacLeod Bellune of the Lexington County Chronicle, stated these "executive sessions" should be called what they are, "secret meetings." They hit the nail on the head with that suggestion.

Why should the government have a right to do any business behind closed doors? As a taxpayer and citizen, I am their boss and I have a right to know what my government is doing.

I will even take it one step further; I do not think it is right for any member of a governing body to discuss the people's business with another member of that same body in private, such as a phone call or during a lunch meeting. We have a right to know what they are saying or thinking on any issue they could vote on.

Furthermore, I am really having a hard time with this latest concept in Charlevoix of a "united-front" government body. This is basically a government body — such as the city council, school board or library board — that insists on never arguing out the issues in public in order to present "a united-front." That reeks to me of poor government. Good government is sometimes nasty and messy. People disagree and argue, but it always leads to a reasonable solution to the problem at hand.

By not allowing this, you are not allowing good government.

Also, right up there under the category of poor government are public bodies that only want to have one person speak for them. For example, it is poor governing for a public official to tell me, any reporter researching a story or any member of the public any one of these answers to questions:

- No comment
- It is premature to talk about that right now. (My next question is, "Why don't you want the public to have as much information as possible?")
- Our board president is the only one who can respond for me.

Let me address the last one of these answers from public officials.

When a person is named to sit on a public body, I believe they have a responsibility to answer to the public on all issues before them. Furthermore, to have just one person speak for an entire public body goes against the spirit of open government by not allowing the public the ability to hear or read what every official thinks on the issue.

By giving this example they are denying responsibility for their actions on that board and not giving the public any idea what kind of person they have representing them.

The problem is each of these examples I have listed have happened or are happening in Charlevoix now (read our page one story about the library board for some examples) or in the recent past. And they are getting more common as more and more public bodies are taking the public's business behind closed doors and keeping their mouths shut.

Public officials should remember the people's business is not private. It is a disservice to democracy to think so.

Consider the cruise ship

Editor:
 One more consideration should be made regarding the expansion of the Charlevoix city marina in Round Lake.

This coming June 21 will be a very special day for Charlevoix. At about 10 that morning, the 367-foot, Greek-flagged cruise ship Arcadia will enter the harbor for a day-long stay, carrying about 260 passengers. This will be the first scheduled port call by a bona fide cruise ship in Charlevoix since the Georgian Bay Lines' steamer South American last visited in the early 1960s.

Arcadia is being chartered by a newly formed company, Great Lakes Cruises Inc. (GLCI) of Waukesha, Wisconsin which is offering some 24 sailings with 11 different itineraries calling at 28 U.S. and Canadian ports in all five Great Lakes between June and October. All cruises embark from Windsor and terminate in Detroit.

GLCI and Arcadia are part of a dramatic revival of the cruise ship industry on the Great Lakes. As we know from many old photos of Round Lake and other Great Lakes ports, passenger ships were long a thriving trade in the Lakes. By the 1950s, however, they started to disappear for a variety of reasons and in 1967 the last one, South American incidentally, sailed out of the Lakes for good.

In 1997 the industry re-awakened with the arrival in the Great Lakes of the German cruise ship C. Columbus, which has visited ports as nearby as Beaver Island. Since then the number of Great Lakes cruise berths sold has jumped about 5,000 percent.

Cruises on oceangoing passenger liners — the international standard — have grown from absolutely nothing on the Lakes five years ago to a total of 38 different cruise offerings this coming season aboard four ships, three of which have been built since 1996.

Great Lakes cruise berth sales totaled about 3,000 in 2000, but are projected to jump to over 10,000 this year.

Charlevoix is fortunate to have impressed GLCI enough to be included in Arcadia's first season itinerary. Now the question is: Will the ship return, and more importantly, will others discover what is clearly one of the most attractive and best suited ports for cruise ships in the Great Lakes?

If the community is interested in capitalizing on the dynamic resurgence of Great Lakes cruise ships, any marina expansion plan should consider such questions as whether a sufficient turning radius and dock space is maintained for such vessels, and what impact they would have operating close to floating docks.

Beyond physical requirements, it should be noted that cruise operators look for many things in prospective ports-of-call, but a crowded recreational boat marina is not one of them. The more Charlevoix can preserve the aesthetic attributes of its unique harbor and downtown, the better chance it will have to participate in the exciting and profitable return of Great Lakes cruise ships.

Keep Wallick

Editor:
 I serve on the Board of Trustees for the Charlevoix Public Library. The board members represent these entities: Charlevoix Public Schools, City of Charlevoix and the townships of Charlevoix, Eveline, Hayes, Marion and Norwood. The residents of Charlevoix County need to be made aware of the actions of some board members with regard to the continuing employment of library director, Marybeth Wallick.

Marybeth has had this position for 28 years. Despite limited space, she always has the library stocked with the most recent books, complementing an impressive collection of classics and non-fiction. Additionally, there are numerous magazines, newspapers, videos, audio books and DVD's available. She stays updated with the latest computer and Internet technology and has managed to set aside $600,000 for library expansion.

But these few board members are trying to force her to retire — WHETHER SHE'S READY OR NOT!

One of our jobs as trustees is to evaluate the library director's performance. This is difficult, since none of us has any experience in running a public library. Each board member completes an individual evaluation and those results are compiled onto a composite form. Our most recent evaluation composite showed Marybeth's rating result to be poor, even though I had rated her as exceptional all the way through because of my respect for her professional abilities. There were also many derogatory comments and some outright lies. This report would be comical except that it's the lever needed to springboard her dismissal and this board has the power to do it.

Now, the board president has prepared a retirement proposal for Marybeth. He did this without the rest of the board's knowledge or approval and it was presented to her as an ultimatum which she has to act upon by May 1, 2001, and is not supposed to discuss with other board members, her staff or the general public.

Don't take my word in all this. Visit the library, talk to the staff, look at a copy of this terrible evaluation and please attend our next board meeting — 3:30 p.m. May 10, in the library basement.

I am ashamed to be part of this board when some of its members are behaving this way. I'm quite certain they aren't serving the best interests of the governing entity they are supposed to represent.

I don't understand the purpose for this power trip they are on, but I wish to distance myself from their hidden agenda.

Linny Arnold

Editor:

Marybeth Wallick has been at the library in Charlevoix longer than I can remember. She practically is the library. With all the huge leaps in technology our little library has kept up very well, all due to Marybeth's vision and perseverance. She's managed to tuck a considerable amount of money aside for a rainy day knowing full well that our library would grow and prosper and when it did the building would have to grow with us.

We have reached that point this year and with the help of Marybeth's nest egg the library will be able to expand to meet the communities' growing needs. Marybeth was hired on 28 years ago by our school board to do the job as librarian. They kept her in her position and approved the job she has done.

In 1997, Governor Engler passed a new law that public libraries had to have a separate millage from the schools and the Charlevoix Public Library Board was born. We have seven trustees on our board representing the five townships plus one for the city and one for the schools.

These people are supposed to represent you, the public. A few members of this board have taken it upon themselves to change our calm peaceful library into a battleground for their own agenda. For whatever reasons, they have decided that Marybeth needs to be rewarded for all of her years of service to our community by being fired with no real basis for her termination.

A member of this board went so far as to say that when they retired from their current job they were going to take over at the public library. I'm not surprised at the politics involved, its par for the course for Charlevoix, but I ask you the public to use your voice and stop your library from being torn apart by people who don't represent you, only their own best interests.

Come to the board meetings and decide for yourself. I have attended the last year's worth of meetings and I am amazed at the childish, backstabbing, underhanded antics that are committed at almost every meeting. These people who make up the Charlevoix Public Library Board, with the exception of a few, DO NOT represent you and I know they don't represent me.

Close the gaps in your medical history.

In these days of self-advocacy and personal health care responsibility, medical record ownership is very important. Having a complete record of your medical history, and your family's medical history, provides awareness, knowledge, confidence and control to you the patient, and it helps your physicians and other health care providers do a better job.

Beginning April 2nd, patients of the former Burns Clinic in Petoskey, during the years 1993 to 1999, will be able to get and keep original copies of their medical records. Distribution of these important files will continue for one year, after which all remaining records will be destroyed. So if you were a patient, or if you are the parent of a minor patient of the Petoskey office of the Burns Clinic between 1993 and 1999, go to the first floor of the former Burns Clinic Building in Petoskey where you will fill out a release form and pick up your medical records.

Photo I.D. is required and all records must be picked up in person. Release forms are also available on the Web at www.northernhealth.org and there is no charge for this service.

You don't have to be Picasso to enroll in an art class or a ballerina to learn dance!

Crooked Tree Arts Center is accepting enrollment for the spring session of the Community School of the Arts. The spring session begins the week of April 16 and ends the week of June 9.

The dance studio at the arts center will be filled with students Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Brought back by popular demand, Jody Adgate will be offering dance classes at the arts center on Wednesdays. Adult stretch, creative dance for ages 4-6, Beginning Tap or Modern Jazz is available for ages 8-10; and both middle school and high school students can learn modern jazz.

On Thursdays, Dorothy Eisenstein teaches ballet and creative dance. Mary Elizabeth Chaney offers Highland Dance on Friday.

Acrylic painting class, which will be held on Tuesday mornings, will explore the unique properties of acrylics and the many directions it can be taken. Students will be painting on canvas and paper, pouring, glazing, and using a palette knife and brushes.

In the Wednesday morning watercolor class, beginning students will receive instruction concerning materials and basic techniques. All students, beginning, intermediate and advanced, will be encouraged to increase their skills according to their individual goals and interests. The drawing class on Thursday mornings, will teach students basic drawing concepts and help develop important drawing skills needed for better paintings. This class will help students develop confidence in composition, shading, and perspective.

Site of old dry cleaning business needs clean up

"It probably won't be visible to people going to the dry cleaners, it will look like a storage building back behind the business," he explained.

The process will be done on-site using drill rigs and a monitoring well as opposed to removing the soil and treating it. MDEQ believes it will take about 10 months to fully clean up the site.

Bids for the project are out now. Once the bids are returned, contracts are signed and the clean up system is built, work will begin at the site.

The contamination is not the result of the Bradford business, who bought the property "as is," and has not contributed to the leak.

Jeff Bradford, owner of the Charlevoix dry-cleaning business since June of 1988, explained that he uses a state-of-the-art dry cleaning machine that reduced the business's overall rate of solvent consumption.

The business now surpasses government regulations. But, he said the problem arose 20 years ago when state regulations were inadequate.

Bradford said the contamination is an issue that has been going on for a long time and he is ready for closure.

Accident injures two

Two people were injured in a two vehicle accident around 2:30 p.m. April 13 on US-31, near Beatty Road. According to police, Daie Kirby, 47, of Ellsworth, had stopped his vehicle in the southbound lane of US-31, waiting to make a left turn. At this point, Erwin Brakel, 72, who was driving south on US-31 in his vehicle, crashed into the rear of Kirby's vehicle. Kirby and Brakel's wife, Jean — who was a passenger in his vehicle — were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital and treated for injuries. Seatbelts were worn and the airbags had activated at the time of the crash. No traffic citations were issued. There was some fuel leakage at the scene so the Charlevoix Fire Department was called. They are seen above hosing down the area. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Hortons celebrated 40 years together, April 8

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Horton recently observed their fortieth wedding anniversary with a trip to Chicago as guests of their daughter and son-in-law, Dr. Daniel and Mary Farrell of Spring Lake, and accompanied by their grandchildren, Laura, Maggie and Jack Farrell.

When they reached Chicago, they were surprised by the arrival of their son, Bill, who had flown in from Los Angeles to join the celebration.

The group spent a few days shopping, sight-seeing and dining out. Their anniversary was observed at a dinner at Berghoff's.

Howard Horton and the former Rosemary Delancy were married April 8, 1961, at St. Catherine's Rectory in Ossineke by the late Rev. Father Robert Pelletier.

They moved to Charlevoix in 1967. Mr. Horton retired from the former Medusa Cement Corporation in 1995 and Mrs. Horton retired in 1989 after teaching high school in Michigan for 30 years, the last 22 at Ellsworth Community Schools.

The Hortons' youngest child, Michael, died in 1998.

Charlevoix Elementary School to be renovated

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In the fall of 2001, high school students will be basking in the comforts of a new school and middle school students will transition to the current high school. These changes might have elementary students asking, "but what do we get?"

Have no fear, plans for school renovations won't leave the elementary student body without a taste of improved accommodations.

The school district is currently finalizing steps in the bid process for a project that will expand the Charlevoix Elementary School located at 13513 Division Street.

Project superintendent Kevan Flory, of the Christman Company of Petoskey, explained that after school is out for the year — June 14 — work will begin on a new 5,000 square foot addition.

John Sturrock, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools said the addition will include a new media center/library and a few classrooms.

Flory added the expansion will extend from the rear of the facility, but it is designed not to impact the playground. The exterior of the expansion will match the existing brick.

Plans show the existing media center will be divided into a computer lab and a corridor where kids can gather before heading out on the playground.

Further elementary school renovations include the removal of the grid ceilings in classrooms. The open ceiling will allow construction crews to access blown-in insulation above the ceiling. Flory said that the insulation does not contain asbestos.

After they remove the popcorn looking insulation, a fire safety sprinkling system will be installed.

Those who have walked in the elementary school and have felt uneven heat throughout the building may also be pleasantly surprised. The current radiant panels will be replaced with a new heating coil unit.

Flory said that the building's current heat system is inefficient.

"We are basically making some corrections now so in the future the school won't have trouble with the heating or the ceiling," he said.

The renovations not only target increasing the comfort of students, but will help mend the nerves of confused parents. Sturrock said the parking lot will be reconfigured so that bus and parent drop-off areas will be separate.

School visitors who have had trouble parking in the school lot in the past may have better luck as the reconfigured parking lot includes additional spaces.

Sturrock said the project is part of the bond passed by district voters in October of 1999.

Elementary school changes are scheduled for completion in late October of 2001.

Planning commission approves smaller lots

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Some north-side residents opposed the City of Charlevoix Planning Commission's decision to rezone a 7.9 acre parcel off of Petoskey Avenue from R1 to R2, but planning commission member and adjoining lot owner Gina Whitney said, "this is the best alternative anyone has come up with."

On April 16 the city Planning Commission hosted a public hearing at city hall that finalized a rezoning effort by Ed Amick, a Charlevoix resident, realtor and owner of the 7.9 acre land parcel affected by the rezoning which runs between Petoskey Avenue and Division Street.

Commission member John Campbell said that this may be a step toward providing affordable housing to families getting started.

"There is no place for those starting out to go in our community so some move to the countryside or Boyne City, East Jordan and Central Lake. Even with R2 zoning it may be out of their reach but at least it gets closer," he said.

The zoning change means that homes can be built on smaller lots. The former R1 zoning required a lot size of 12,000 feet and R2 requires only 9,000 square feet.

"We are finding in our market that there are an increased number of folks who don't care to have a large front or rear yard."

Ed Amick,
Property owner of rezoned parcel

The planning commissioner's decision followed an event that took place almost one year ago to the day.

On April 11, 2000 north-side residents packed the local Italian eatery Giuseppe's to discuss land use at the site. They voiced concerns about a proposed apartment complex that ranged from a reduction in property values to increased traffic volumes by the elementary school, 13513 Division Street.

Prior to Amick taking possession of the parcel, it was owned by Warren Shadko who owned the property when discussion of constructing apartments occurred.

"My understanding is that at one time the site was going to be used for a government subsidized apartment building which is something we have no interest in," Ed Amick, current co-owner of the vacant land parcel said.

Amick's plan deviates from Shadko's as he is looking to section the area into residential lots that commission members said will mesh with the character of the surrounding area.

Amick said that the neighborhood isn't open to multiple family dwellings and that because of this discussion, whether the lots are sized to meet R1 or R2 zoning requirements, the plan has to be single family homes.

In addition, he said that there are already several neighboring homes sitting on R2 size lots. He characterized the adjacent neighborhood as a mixture of R1 and R2 sized lots.

"We are finding in our market that there are an increased number of folks who don't care to have a large front or rear yard. They are looking for a more manageable lot size, they don't want to maintain a lot of grass area," he said.

He sees the rezoning as a way to address the concerns of neighbors and to use the property.

"I can't imagine why someone would object to this. Number one it is designed for single family homes, and two, it won't be any more dense than what they allow there right now," Amick said.

Historical society to honor school's gym

The Charlevoix Historical Society is giving a farewell to the Charlevoix Middle School gym at 6:30 p.m., May 9 at the gym on Mason Street.

The gym will be in service for at least another year before the middle school moves to the old high school site, once the new high school is built. After that, its future has not been determined.

Therefore, to celebrate the gym, all society members and everyone who graduated in this gym when it was a former high school from 1928 to 1961 are invited to this community wide potluck dinner and evening of reminiscences.

The society would also like to display all the class and reunion photos it can obtain. It is currently lacking group photos from the classes of: 1928, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1937, 1938, 1940, 1941, 1945, 1946, 1952 and 1955 through 1964. And it is lacking class reunion photos for the classes of: 1932, 1934, 1935, 1939, 1942, 1943, 1944, 1948, 1952, 1954 through 1957, 1959, 1960, 1962 through 1964.

If you, or anyone you know, has a copy of these pictures please bring them to the Harsha House Museum or call 547-0373.

cation elite of, Singapore, South Korea and Japan.

Singapore schools carried the highest average score in math, posting 604. Michigan schools' math average totaled 517. McNamara said that the Michigan invitational group placed twelfth overall in math.

According to consultant Bob Dunn who organized the invitational groups, student participants from the Naperville School District and the First in the World Consortium, both located in Illinois, posted the highest average science score, 584.

McNamara said that the invitational group's science score placed them fifth in the world.

Overall, U.S. eighth graders performance was in the middle range of the achievement distribution for the 38 participating countries.

McNamara said that Beaver Island's involvement brought in $1,000 for their math and science budget and down the line the administration will share ideas with other schools that participated in the study.

SCRAPBOOK

A history of channel bridges

By DAVID L. MILES
Charlevoix Historical Society

Editor's note: This is the second story of a series on Charlevoix bridges.

The dredging of the channel in 1873 that necessitated the removal of our first known bridge for nine months signaled the beginning of the end for the great Fox and Rose Lake Michigan shipping dock that had been erected in the mid 1860s.

Medium sized schooners and passenger vessels could now make it into Round Lake. The Charlevoix Sentinel reported that "on the day that the dredging was completed, the Maple Leaf arrived with a full cargo of merchandise and took out a full cargo of 100,000 feet of hardwood lumber, with two feet of water under its keel." No longer would they have to contend with swells and wind bringing themselves up to that exposed dock at the channel mouth. The calm harbor gave them a safe haven.

For nine more years the huge dock remained in service, until, in 1882, the channel reached its maximum width when the widest lake vessels could come into Round Lake. Charlevoix was now the premier port of northwest lower Michigan. After that, the dock was not removed, but allowed to perish at the mercy of Lake Michigan. Remnants of it littered the beaches for years, even washing up well into mid-Twentieth Century.

Easier access for boats was fine for those on the water. But the fact of no bridge over 12 new feet of deep water was a terrible inconvenience for those on land. There was a proposal to erect a metal bridge, with the rest of the county to pay 50 percent and Charlevoix Township the remaining 50 percent, but it went down in voter defeat twice.

By the spring of 1874, pioneer businessman Amos Fox had had enough. He offered to erect a wooden bridge for $400, was given the go-ahead and it was ready by May. As the picture shows, he raised the roadbed, from two feet to 16 feet, approximately the height of today's bridge. It was only wide enough to facilitate the passage of one cart. On the south bank stood a tripod of logs that held a fourth, upright log with a pulley on top, looking to be over 30 feet tall. The central portion of the roadbed was hinged and a rope tied to its north edge led over the pulley and down to a winch near the tripod, manned by six people. (Rosa Nettleton, when she came to type up the memoirs of her husband, pioneer settler David C. Nettleton, made a typographical error when she stated "the lift was operated by a rope running a winch on the south shore.")

The Sentinel said, "It is recorded that Jos. M. Clark and S. S. Liscomb, both doing business near the bridge, were employed as bridge-tenders, at salaries of $15 per month each." This meant hailing down anyone they could find to make a six man gang for the operation of the winch every time a boat passed.

Then came James Martin, our first full-time salaried policeman, who was also assigned duties as bridge tender. It was not uncommon for him, if they were lacking five other good men and true to be found on Bridge Street, to go into the saloon (of which Charlevoix had a reportedly surprising total of one) and as the British say, "impress" into service anyone available, in whatever condition, at times under protest and right off their barstool, whether they liked it or not.

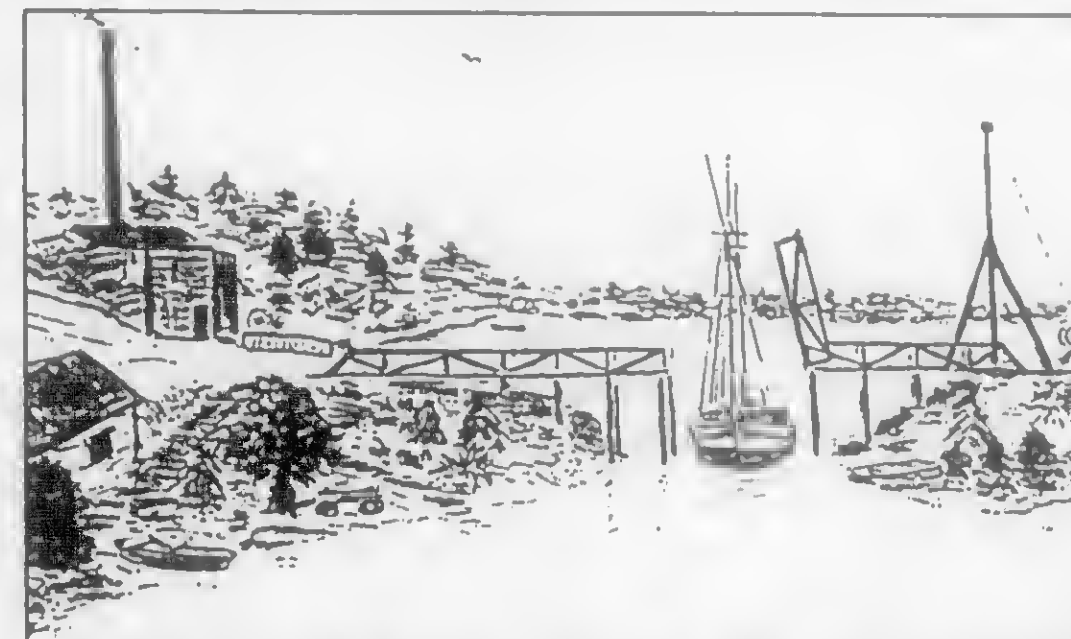

As Lord Nelson said prior to the Battle of Trafalgar, every man is expected to do his duty. So, it was for the manhood of Charlevoix when the need arose.

Unfortunately, no photograph has turned up showing this second bridge, but one does survive of the sign posted at each end: "Five Dollars Fine for Riding or Driving on This Bridge Faster than a Walk, or for Driving On More Than Ten Head of Cattle At Once." Five dollars was an enormous amount of change back then, in some cases the equivalent of two weeks' wages, indicative of the importance of this structure to the community and it was to be treated with respect.

But, in actuality this bridge was no more than a stop-gap measure. Just over a year after its construction, town conscience and goad, Willard Smith of the Sentinel, was grumbling about its inconvenience.

"Our shipping has assumed proportions which demand the attention of our highway authorities to the miserable appliances provided for raising the bridge in this village for the passage of vessels. A force of six men is necessary to raise it every time a vessel passes through, when two should be able to do it easily. Our conveniences for accommodation of Commerce should be improved to keep pace with the increase of navigation," he wrote.

We don't know what happened to this bridge. The only clue resides in a poem written by self-published local poet Mrs. Aldin Chamberlin, who, in "Our lovely Charlevoix" in her book Life Thoughts, stated "when there came a heavy blow! It broke into pieces." The word "blow" could be a reference to one of the monstrous windstorms that wreaked havoc now and then on this area. Or it might mean a collision between ship and bridge.

Whether the bridge's quick demise hastened the decision to build a new one or whether one was coincidentally already in the works, by October of 1877 the County Board of Supervisors had come up with a new, more acceptable financial formula.

This time the rest of Charlevoix County would chip in $3,500 and Charlevoix Township would be assessed half of that amount. The voters considered this to be much more fair and equitable and voted it in. The contract was signed on Feb. 12, 1878 with the Smith Bridge Company of Toledo, Ohio. Navigation opened on March 24 that year, signifying a mild winter with no ice in the channel, so pounding and digging started immediately. Several months later, the $5,200-plus third bridge went into service.

In the meantime, channel crossings again had to revert to rafts and cable

Wallick fears board may fire her from library post

I think she has done an excellent job. I don't think she should be roadblocked out of a job she is not ready to leave yet," Arnold said.

But, Brandi said this evaluation was normal procedure.

The overall rating of Wallick by the board is based on her performance from June of 2000 to February of 2001. The evaluation scale goes from 3, an exceptional rating to -5 and below, an unacceptable rating. Wallick's compiled rating placed her in a range from .5 to -4.

The evaluation includes numerous written comments submitted by board members alluding to areas where Wallick needs to improve her skills.

Included is a statement that Wallick is fiscally irresponsible and that she is operating in the red. Wallick explained that over her 28 year stay with the library she has saved almost $600,000 to help fund an expansion that she knew would some day be needed.

A skills and knowledge critique states Wallick hasn't updated her skills through classes since 1974. Wallick claims she attends seminars and conferences often and reports back to the board.

In the initiative/innovative section, the form states, "Haven't seen any yet." But Wallick explained that she has kept the library up to date as money is available.

She claims she has facilitated the integration of technological improvements at the library. "Charlevoix is the only library in northern Michigan with a web-based, on-line, real-time card catalog," she said.

Other complaints from those who completed the evaluation include a critique of her leadership — "always needs prodding, trying newsletter, weekender a start and only when forced (newsletter)."

In a response to the board, drafted by Wallick, she states, "I think perhaps the problem is that I show too much leadership and the board perceives it as control." In an interview with the Courier, she cited leadership actions she has taken including: deciding to make the move into E-Books and choosing books and videos for the library.

The board describes her work relationship as combative and states that she has a problem with portrayal of the board to other peers.

But, Wallick said that board member Mary Ann Chew attempts to micro-manage the library.

Wallick also said Chew has alluded to her probable dismissal. Wallick explained the happenings of an incident that occurred in late February at the three day Rural Libraries Conference that Chew and Wallick attended.

At the conference Wallick said librarians approached her and said Chew was in the ladies room discussing how to hire a new director, how long to be without a director and how to advertise the position.

Wallick also claims that on April 1 a Charlevoix resident informed her that she had overheard Chew say that she thinks the library is not well organized.

Chew declined to comment at this time. She referred all questions to Brandi.

Library board members Gordon Van Wieren and Betty Heene also declined to comment at this time and referred questions to Brandi. Board members Anne Hansen and Ethel Coeling were unavailable for comment at this time.

Charlevoix Courier Editor Jeremy McBain contributed to this report.

Healthcare Comes Home

"Mom loves her independent life, but she needs some regular assistance. We tried to be with her every day, but our work schedules and the kids' activities made that almost impossible. I worried and felt guilty just about all of the time.

Then we learned that VitalCare could help. Mom went along with the idea of having a home health aide come over three days a week to help her with laundry and light housekeeping. I stopped by the other day, and the two of them were having a great time over lunch. I am so pleased; Mom has her independence, and I have peace of mind."

Hoskins closing down in August

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Several jobs will be lost in Charlevoix this August, due to the recent announcement that Hoskins Manufacturing will be closing its doors.

The Charlevoix plant, which already went through a number of layoffs in March, announced April 18 that it will be closing its doors Aug. 1 and its entire operation will be moved to other Michigan plants owned by the Novi based company.

James Musser, chief executive officer and chairman of Hoskins, said the plant will be closing due to a company-wide "restructuring."

"This is not about the economy; we had already earlier in the year made moves to reduce employees due to an economic downturn. This one is to improve the ongoing operations of the company and reduce overhead..." Musser said.

Hoskins has been in Charlevoix for about 30 years and employed close to 100 employees before the layoffs early this year. The closing of the plant will affect another 82 jobs, Musser said.

Cable customers given protections

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Some Charlevoix cable television subscribers feel that Charter Communications' user rates are too high but don't know how to make a change — however the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) Cable Consumer Bill of Rights tells subscribers you aren't helpless.

"It is my understanding that when we (the FCC) started that initiative (the Cable Consumer's Bill of Rights) we were trying to remind consumers that if they have had it with cable companies, here are their alternatives," Michelle Rouso, spokesperson for the FCC said.

According to information released by the FCC, from 1993 to 1999 the commission resolved about 18,000 rate complaints involving 5,700 cable communities and ordered about $100 million in consumer refunds to 40 million cable subscribers.

Without FCC cable rate regulation, the commission claims cable consumers would have paid an estimated three to five billion dollars more for cable service over that six year period.

However, as of March 31, 1999 the FCC no longer had the authority to receive or act on consumer complaints, leaving rate regulation to be determined by competition.

"The commission believes that, as competition to cable and choice in the video programming marketplace develop, consumers will have access to more services and that prices will be controlled by competition," an FCC consumer alert states.

However, in Charlevoix where one cable provider exists — Charter Communications — effective competition is limited to satellite providers and the consumer has to act as the rate watchdog.

According to Sherrie Martin, operations manager for Charter Communications, after the 1999 "sunset" of federal cable rate regulation occurred, Charlevoix basic cable subscribers realized a rate increase of almost $2 per month (comparison from March 1998 to March 2000).

Survivor joins walk to help fight against breast cancer

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A painted pendent proudly displayed on Charlevoix resident Nancy Ferguson's vest says it all.

"Say it. Fight it. Cure it. Damn it."

Ferguson is a breast cancer survivor and warrior, who preaches the word of early detection.

Ferguson learned the value of early detection when in April of 1996 she did what every doctor encourages women to do, a self exam. At this exam she discovered an abnormal lump under her armpit.

Her self-exam proved to be a moment that may have made the difference between survival and succumbing to cancer. She explained that even before she went in for her lumpectomy on March 15, 1996, a mammogram did not show the malignant growth.

Remission is the destination she has since reached, but the road she traveled to get there was rough. The treatments were intense — radiation, blood tests twice a week, Taxall, chemotherapy and Adreomycin.

But through it all, Ferguson said she held on to her will to conquer the intruder inside of her. Rather than saying, "Why has cancer chosen me?" Ferguson said, "So many people suffer from cancer, why not me?"

"I thought, 'Cancer, I can live with it.' I also had a sense of humor that I called 'cancer humor.' I would say, 'Don't bother me I'm having a no hair day,'" she joked.

Ferguson is now cancer free and only spends her time doing things that are important to her, like maintaining a healthy lifestyle, working at Camp Quality, being an Ellsworth Lioness and helping out with the Exceptional Riders club — an equestrian club.

For the next five years she plans to see a doctor every three months and an oncologist every six months.

She is healthy, but the reality remains. Breast cancer indiscriminately affects one in eight women in every community.

But, to fight this, Ferguson and many other Charlevoix area residents will be taking part in the Sue DeYoung/Judy Edger Memorial Breast Cancer Walk at 9 a.m. on May 12.

Charlevoix residents will gather in East Park to gear up for the walk from the park to the city golf course and back down Dixon Avenue. After the walk there will be refreshments and live music in the park.

Information provided by the American Cancer Society states that funds raised by the Charlevoix walk will go toward helping breast cancer patients and their families, providing educational and early detection programs and to supporting the American Cancer Society's research program.

Ferguson fought the battle against breast cancer and won, but many women faced the devastating illness and are no longer here to wear the pin and make their statement of victory. Research may mean a cure for breast cancer.

Aside from donations, the walk also seeks to heighten awareness. In fact, one of the steps outlined by the cancer society for perspective walkers, is to set an example by going in for regular check ups, something Ferguson strongly agrees with.

The walk is approximately two miles, so children are also encouraged to participate.

And many Charlevoix students are already signed up. On April 18 members of the kids Kiwanis Club at the Charlevoix Elementary school gathered to color promotional posters for the event.

As fourth grade student Ericka Faust carefully shaded the skin of a dinosaur on the event poster she explained that she hopes her participation will make breast cancer a thing of the past, just like dinosaurs are.

Sign-up and sponsor sheets for the event are available at Frisbey Real Estate, 116 Antrim Street, Charlevoix. Information is also available by calling event chairperson, Vivian Mettler at 547-9751.

Healthcare Comes Home

"Mom loves her independent life, but she needs some regular assistance. We tried to be with her every day, but our work schedules and the kids' activities made that almost impossible. I worried and felt guilty just about all of the time.

Then we learned that VitalCare could help. Mom went along with the idea of having a home health aide come over three days a week to help her with laundry and light housekeeping. I stopped by the other day, and the two of them were having a great time over lunch. I am so pleased; Mom has her independence, and I have peace of mind."

OPINIONS

What do you think about the economy?

The results are in from last month's "What do you think?" question.

The question was, "What do you think about Charlevoix's current snowmobile ordinance allowing snowmobiles in the downtown area on designated routes, at designated times."

We received four responses to this question. Of the four, three were against the ordinance and snowmobiles downtown, while one was for snowmobiles downtown. Therefore, our little unscientific poll tells us the city should probably relook at this ordinance.

Now, on to this month's question.

Currently the nation is experiencing what may be an economic slowdown. On some days, we pick up a newspaper and it is filled with stories about massive layoffs, stock market freefalls and bleak reports of a souring economy. Then, on other days, we pick up a newspaper and find stories about corporate gains and economic wonders.

Even the Charlevoix Courier recently published a story stating that the leaders in three of the largest manufacturing companies located in the city think our economic conditions have not affected them yet. But, we also published a story in March about Hoskin's Manufacturing in Charlevoix laying off some of its workers due to an economic slowdown. Now this week, we published a story stating the plant was going to close its doors Aug. 1.

It seems as though no one really knows what kind of shape the local economy is in, much less the national economy.

So, we thought we would ask our readers what they think. Therefore, this month's question is: What do you think of the local economy and what can be done to improve it?

Remember to keep your letters to about 250 words so everyone who submits can be published. All responses will be published in the May 30 edition of the Charlevoix Courier. And please, no personal attacks.

Responses can be mailed to the Charlevoix Courier at P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720, dropped off at our office at 112 Mason Street in downtown Charlevoix or e-mailed to charlevoixcourier@charlevoix-courier.com.

'What do you think?' comments

For snowmobiles

I think that it is childish to have such an ordinance. If you don't like the snowmobiles, go to Florida. They don't have snow. We live in northern Michigan, of course there will be snowmobiles. Get over it.

Matt Krynski

Against

Snowmobiles do not belong on city streets at any time. Snowmobiles tearing up and down residential areas don't do much for the ambience of "Charlevoix the Beautiful." They have trails made specifically for them and that's where they belong. What's next, dirt bikes?

Shirley Gibson

Against

I am against the snowmobile ordinance as it is currently written. Unless there are some "teeth" put into it, people will easily ignore it. I have several neighbors who complained about snowmobilers riding across their property. If snowmobilers would follow the ordinance and stay on certain routes during specified hours that would be fine, but some of them don't. For these people, I see no hope in "re-education." I do not have a statistical count of how many snowmobilers do or do not follow the ordinance; evidently there are enough people who don't to cause problems. Violators need to be given a meaningful monetary fine. Modification of the ordinance needs to include a rule against "late night riding." I certainly don't think the potential for snowmobilers adding to downtown businesses is credible.

Jeanne Blumberg

Against

Snowmobiles are a fun and useful machine when used as they were originally intended, as a powered sled. They are not a safe vehicle for roads and sidewalks and have no business in the city. With high snow banks and poor visibility, they are hard to see. Many drivers seem to have a two position throttle — stop or wide open. This may work in a large snow covered field, but not in town. There are some drivers that try to obey the laws, but there will always be the drivers that never obey the laws and they are the problem. As long as we allow the machines in town we will have a percentage of bad apples. The longer we allow them, the more machines we will have and the bad apples will increase. The excuse is that allowing the machines in town brings in more money to the merchants. No one seems to be able to show that is really happening but even if it is, is it worth the potential accident? The police admit it is almost impossible to enforce the present laws. If they chase a machine going 60 miles per hour then you have two machines going that fast. A very bad situation. Snowmobiles should not be allowed in Charlevoix. Everyone should contact their councilperson and ask that the ordinance allowing snowmobiles in Charlevoix (#654) be rescinded and a new ordinance written that prohibits snowmobiles in Charlevoix.

Editorial rebuttal

Editor:
Regarding your editorial of April 18, 2001:

I wholeheartedly agree with your premise that "...the people's business should be done in front of the people..." However, I would submit that "...in front of the people..." means: at a public meeting. A private conversation with you or with your reporter does not qualify as being "...in front of the people..."

A member of a governing board should reserve public comment on matters before that board until the board is in official session. A member of a board who acts otherwise becomes a rogue board member. Boards elect a president to act as their official spokesperson where public comment is required outside of the board meeting.

This is not to suggest that board members be rubber stamps or always present a "united front." On the contrary, board members should advocate as effectively as they can in the public meeting for their point of view. But, at the end of the day, the will of the majority must prevail.

If you really want to know what is going on, start attending the meetings. Report on them accurately and fairly.

Board is wrong

Editor:
Having been a library user since I could read, I am greatly disturbed at what is going on.

What a shame that most of the people chosen for the board know nothing about libraries and were not even library users so they could have a better understanding. I have attended quite a few of the board meetings and come away sick. Never have I seen meetings in the fashion as these.

The board seems to feel, "Whew...look at the money Ms. (Marybeth) Wallick has saved — let's spend it!" They gave $1,000 to the Friends of the Library. Friends of the Library is supposed to be a group that helps the library and raises funds for it. The library was asked to buy a microwave, a boom box and put a telephone in downstairs so that when the friends were down there they would have all the comforts of home. To say nothing of the fact the librarian has been handed attorney fees to pay. Fees because the board was consulting an attorney on how to get rid of the librarian. Because of this Ms. Wallick has attorney fees too — which will have to come out of her own pocket.

A few years ago when I had my trust set up, the library was included. When I discovered what spend-thrifts the board were and that my money would go for frivolous things and not books and computers to say nothing of more room — which is so badly needed — I withdrew the money.

Now the board is trying to get rid of a person who has spent her adult life dedicated to the library.

We who use the library are delighted with the way it is run. Let's keep the librarian and get rid of the board!

Plants know when the seasons are turning

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

There is one lonely package of last fall's salmon left in the freezer and I am reluctant to thaw and cook it.

Not because of any fear of it being old or freezer burned. It is frozen in a mild salt solution that almost precisely mimics the salt content of salmon fillets and would be good out into the summer. I have the same reluctance to use up the last of this year's maple syrup before there is some assurance that there will be another year with more maple sap. I have concluded that I am unsure about the future.

Plants lack that uncertainty. They know that spring is here and they already know that there will be another spring after that. They are just now preparing in some cases for the spring after next. They don't look at the sky and clouds and say, "Spring's late this year, better pull back and wait."

Just last week all the maple seeds that had lain under the snow on our lawn propped themselves up, pushed that wing that carried them to their present place up off the surface and sent a tiny root down into the barely thawed and sometimes snowed-on earth.

If you get down close to the ground and look sideways at any patch of grass that had maple seeds falling on it last year, you see a miniature forest of just germinated maples. Nothing green shows up until a few days later, but all those old, worn looking maple seeds are standing proudly in honor of their belief that spring has arrived. They all know when to do this and it has little to do with whether it is cold or warm, sunny or snowy.

All the maple seeds begin standing up on nearly the same day. They are probably responding to the longer hours of sunlight we get in April. They know that the sun is still there and that the earth's orbit is secure. They don't hold back until they are sure about warmth and sun.

All the most successful maple seedlings in the past several million years (Maples have been around in their present form for almost 50 million years) have started growing at that same signal. Other plants are well into making the underground buds for a spring which will not begin for 12 months.

I suppose I should have equal confidence that there will be maple sap a year from now and salmon at the end of summer. If humans had lived in this seasonal climate for the millions of years that maples have, we might feel something of the confidence they have.

Humans are late comers on the world scene and have lived in non-tropical climates for only an eye-blink of time compared to the maples and hundreds of other plants. What we have are spring equinox festivals that assure us that the sun is coming back. But no organized human festival can compare with the millions of years of genetic selection and survival that even our simplest plants have.

Look to the plants and be wise.

Shame on the Courier

Editor:
I am extremely disappointed with the headline and article proclaiming "Librarian fears for her job." The purpose of a community newspaper is to disseminate news and information. Charlevoix has just suffered from the conflict over the new high school and now you are promoting a conflict over the library.

My parents, Dr. Gilbert and Charlotte Saltonstall, donated the land for the current library. I was elected and served on the Charlevoix School Board and I was the school board representative to the Charlevoix Library Board. Anyone who has served on a board knows that there are regulations, procedures and policies that you must follow. I believe that the Library Board has been doing that and anyone who is interested is able to go to the meetings to observe and speak.

The Library Board has completed an evaluation. A professional librarian who is doing a good job does not have to worry about an evaluation and try to blame individual members of the board in the newspaper. Dismissal must be approved by a majority of the board and these board members have been appointed by different entities to oversee the library. They are responsible people doing an evaluation they are appointed to do.

Why is the community newspaper reporting hearsay conversations from a woman's restroom? Why is an evaluation being tried in public? Would you as an editor print your complaints with your boss? Instead, why doesn't the newspaper wait and cover the Library Board meeting where people can behave professionally and get the complete story. Newspapers used to follow a code of ethics. Now it appears that the Charlevoix Courier has stooped to the level of the National Enquirer, choosing sensationalism, regardless of the truth of consequences.

It is my hope that in the future the Charlevoix Courier will report more responsibly and support, rather than divide our community.

Connie Saltonstall
Charlevoix

Board needs to answer

Dear Editor:

Nearly 10 years ago, I wrote a "Letter to the Editor" regarding our very own Charlevoix Public Library. In that letter, which was published in the Petoskey News-Review on Oct. 29, 1991, I stated how much our family used the library, utilized the programs available and appreciated the wonderful library staff of Shirley Kemp, Jean McGhee and library director Marybeth Wallick.

After 10 years, I still haven't changed my mind: I think the Charlevoix Public Library is the best deal we've got going in this city. While our library continues to offer all the same services listed in my original letter, it has also kept up with the times, upgrading to include quality in-stock videos and DVDs, as well as free computer and Internet access. In addition, the entire library has gone "on-line" with card cataloging. To keep up with the ever increasing number of library patrons, three part-time staff members have been added: Pati Brannon, Mardy Bohn and Maxine Bergmann. Their presence completes a wonderful staff of dedicated, caring individuals readily available to assist as needed. It's pretty obvious to me that our Charlevoix Public Library is thriving... and anyone who patronizes the library on a regular basis knows it, too.

One individual is responsible for the library you see today: She has hired the staff, she has bought the books, she has literally brought the library into the "New Millennium" (remember Y2K?), allowing computer Internet access, as well as on-line card cataloging. That one individual is Marybeth Wallick. I believe she is to be heartily commended for her hard work and dedication. Yet instead of praise and encouragement, after 27 years of sacrificing her own interests in service to the library (even at considerable risk to her own health two years ago) Wallick is now being asked (or pushed? forced?) to resign. I ask "the powers that be" (i.e.: Charlevoix Library Board members) one question: Why is this happening? Someone like Wallick does not do a good job for 27 years and then suddenly begin to fail. Something is very wrong with this scenario and I would appreciate an answer to my question.

The Charlevoix Public Library is just that: for the public. It is not the exclusive domain of a few interested persons who act solely at their own personal discretion. If you believe, as I do, that the fine job done by Wallick during these past 27 years qualifies her to continue in her position as library director, then I urge you to contact your Charlevoix Library Board representative. In addition, I encourage you to attend the next Charlevoix Library Board meeting at 3:30 p.m. on May 10 in the meeting room, downstairs level of the Charlevoix Library, and let your voice be heard.

For non-profit organizations like The Rainbow Shoppe, National Volunteer Week, which occurs the week of April 22, is extremely important. For without our volunteers The Rainbow Shoppe would cease. It is their constant dedication to give of their time to help others that makes The Rainbow Shoppe function.

On behalf of the board of directors, it is with immense pride that we salute all the volunteers that work at The Rainbow Shoppe. They come each day with a smile and a helping hand. Each person plays an important part to allow this organization to minister to others. Each of us personally and as a community, are better for it.

Official Notice

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR A CONSTRUCTION PERMIT FOR A NEW SOLID WASTE TRANSFER FACILITY

Part 115, Solid Waste Management, of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act, 1994 PA 451, as amended, Section 11510 (2)(b), provides for a notice of application for construction permit for a solid waste disposal area.

On April 10, 2001, the Department of Environmental Quality received a construction permit application from Top Rank Disposal, Inc. for a proposed Type A Solid Waste Transfer Facility. The transfer facility is located at 15890 Bells Bay Road and is in the SW1/4 of Section 33, Township 34 North, Range 8 West, Charlevoix Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

The solid waste transfer facility will be constructed to receive solid waste from hand unloaded vehicles and mechanical compactor trucks. Incoming solid waste will be dumped onto a tipping floor and will be compacted by a loader into open-top transfer trailers. The solid waste will then be transported to a licensed disposal facility.

The complete application package consisting of the application, engineering plans, environmental assessment, hydrogeologic investigation report, and hydrogeological monitoring plan may be reviewed at the Department of Environmental Quality, Waste Management Division, Gaylord Office, 2100 West M-32, P.O. Box 1830, Gaylord, MI 49734-5830, from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday except holidays (telephone number 517-705-3403) or at the Charlevoix County Courthouse Annex, 203 Antrim Street, Charlevoix, MI 49720, (telephone number 231-547-7200).

If significant public comment is received on this project, the Department of Environmental Quality will schedule a public hearing to take additional comments on the proposal.

The Department has until August 8, 2001, to make a final decision on the construction permit application.

Hospital gets new ultrasound machine

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Amber Witthoeft's eyes lit up when she saw her 13-week-old baby move inside her for the first time.

Amber was even more amazed when she held flawless photos in her hand, depicting a few of the first moments in her child's life that were captured by Debi Waldron, Charlevoix Area Hospital's staff ultrasonographer.

This was the fourth baby of Amber's that Waldron had done the first ultrasound with.

But something about the quality of this image was definitely different.

Waldron explained that in January the hospital upgraded their technology from an almost decade old machine.

"Technology moves forward so rapidly it is hard to keep up. This (the ATL-HDI 5000) is the highest level of technology available today," she said.

The hospital's radiology department is now equipped with an ATL-HDI 5000, the same technology used by NASA on its International Space Station that was launched in 2000.

According to an article written by Leslie Versweyvel for Virtual Medical Worlds, the space mission is a 10 year investigation of human adaptation to space-flight environment and to space exploration. The HDI ultrasound technology is being used to perform sophisticated medical diagnostic procedures aboard the space station.

While the new technology advances medicine in outer space, it is also helping advance the realm of possibilities for local practitioners.

Waldron said that the new machine allows for better penetration and resolution — the greater range in scan head frequency allows her to see more.

Those who may not have scanned well in the past will now be able to.

"By being able to see better, we can get more information, which in turn is better for the patient. And the simple thing is that they get a cuter picture, because of the penetration," she added.

The hospital also uses a color printer that prints on photo quality glossy paper. It had Amber headed for home in search of a frame for "baby's first picture."

Aside from performing ultrasounds in the radiology department, Waldron also said that they often do other abdomen work including scanning gall bladders, kidneys, uterus, ovaries and pelvises.

Writer enjoys cleaning the planet on Earth Day

'Stepping out'

With 75 degree days followed by snowy afternoons, my dafodils and I really don't know whether it is time to step out or stay in.

But on April 21, when meteorologists were calling for rain, Charlevoix soaked in an amazing, sunny, spring afternoon and from what I saw everyone stepped out.

Before reading on, answer in your head what April 21 means to you?

For some astrologically inclined readers, it could be the second day of the bull, Taurus. But for those at the beach with me on Saturday, it was a day to celebrate the Earth.

Not many Charlevoix residents gathered at the beach for the Charlevoix Land Conservancy's celebration of Earth Day, but those that did smiled ear to ear as we dipped our toes in the cool water, stooping over now and again to pick up after others.

Saturday morning I felt the warm gusts of wind and steady rays. The inviting weather had me rummaging around the house for sunscreen, a pair of shades, thick-soled shoes, a garbage bag and a plastic glove — all the essentials for an afternoon at the beach.

You may question; why are you packing thick soled shoes, garbage bag and a plastic glove?

Well, the shoes are to safeguard my Earth Day celebration at the beach from turning into a trip to the emergency room. Digging my toes in the warm sand can be really painful when broken beer bottles are masked under the sea of gritty grains.

The bag was so I could properly pitch any trash I found and I use the matching glove to pick up after a species I call, "beach bum litter bugs," a parasitic species that use the beach as their personal landfill.

After filling a kitchen bag I came up with an idea. Why not make these Earth Day afternoon "essentials" part of my summer "must have" list. It's easy to stuff a lightweight plastic bag in your beach tote and to bend over now and then to grab a plastic straw or aluminum beer can.

And for those leaving the mess behind, I have one question, "Do you drink water?"

Cable customers have some protections

CABLE

Martin said that the $2 increase over the two year period does accurately reflect Charter's cost of doing business.

Martin said when extended basic programming added 15 more channels to its line-up customers were aware that a price increase would follow the addition.

The Cable Consumer Bill of Rights lists three options under expectations consumers should have of their cable company including, the expectation of a fair deal from their local cable company, i.e. reasonable rates that fairly reflect the costs of doing business.

The bill also states that consumers should expect an explanation from their cable company whenever rates for the programming service tier are raised, particularly when cable companies attribute price rises to increases in the cost of obtaining programming.

Consumers are entitled to write or call their cable companies whenever they have complaints about the cable services being provided on channels, or about program cost increases and they should expect a speedy response. Rouso defined a speedy response as by the next business day.

If you feel that your cable provider, fails to meet these expectations, the consumer has the right to take their complaint to local, state and national consumer advocacy groups.

One such national group is the Consumer's Union located in Washington D.C. To contact a representative of this union call (202) 462-6262 or log on to www.consumersunion.org.

Also listed in the bill are expectations consumers should have of their local government. The document states, "Consumers are entitled to file complaints with their local government (i.e. city, town, or county) regarding basic tier cable rate increases and service quality."

Rouso explained how some communities use their local government as a tool to regulate rates. In the case of Charlevoix, the city government signed a franchise agreement with Charter Communications this year. When it comes time to renew the agreement the city could use local complaints as contractual leverage.

Or the local government could establish a cable commission to handle consumer complaints.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner said that currently the city is monitoring what is happening in the cable industry.

The bill also includes consumer expectations of the FCC which allows the consumer to provide their own inside wiring for cable hookups and to purchase and use cable set-top boxes at competitive market prices.

If none of the aforementioned options help solve cable consumers' issues with their provider the bill advises users to explore competitive alternatives for video programming service like DBS (direct broadcast satellite).

Volunteer week

Editor:

National Volunteer Week, April 22 - 28, marks a special time for the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan, Inc. (WRC) to recognize our invaluable volunteers. The WRC was founded 24 years ago by individuals with a vision of support and services for women and families in our community. That vision has become a reality thanks to the important role volunteers have played at the WRC over the years.

Over 2,430 hours of service were donated in the 1999-2000 fiscal year. Our volunteers ring up sales at the Gold Mine Resale Shop, support families at the Safe Home, serve on the Board of Directors, assist with agency mailings, answer the 24-hour crisis line, do upkeep and maintenance, style hair and provide makeovers for families at Safe Home and many other important services.

Every volunteer brings with them their own special skills which provide an amazingly diverse and in-depth level of services to the families served by the WRC in Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet and Otsego counties. On behalf of the Women's Resource Center, a sincere thanks goes out to this very special group of people.

How about permanent mooring?

Editor:

I'm a full time resident on Lake Charlevoix, hold a Coast Guard Masters License and over my 40 year boating career, have lived and boated in New England, Florida, California and the Great Lakes. I have seen how dozens of waterfront communities have accommodated boats in their harbors.

Communities that have maintained the beauty of their surroundings, kept costs down and accommodated transient boaters, almost without exception, have installed "permanent moorings" within their harbors. I have never seen long parallel docks, or any kind of large dock facility, used successfully on a small body of water like Round Lake.

A permanent mooring is basically a small round floating buoy attached to the lake bottom with chain. There are numerous ways to accomplish this. A line is then tied from the top of the mooring buoy to a boat.

Cruising all of last summer along the New England coast on my boat, communities charged around $40 per night for the use of their permanent mooring. Size of boat impacts the price. To generate good will and additional revenue, most communities provided launch service to and from shore.

Disadvantages of docks...1) High initial cost. 2) Expensive to maintain, repair and/or replace. 3) Encroaches on navigable water surface. 4) Aesthetically, in a small harbor, a disaster. Water surface is visually broken up by docks 12 months a year. An eyesore when occupied or unoccupied. 5) Boats at docks block water views. 6) Boats moving about in close proximity of other vessels and docks, create a personal safety and property damage threat. Increased insurance costs and liability concerns. 7) Impossible for Dockmaster to maximize use of all dock space. Vessels of various lengths rarely match up with available dock space.

Advantages of moorings...1) Lower initial cost. 2) Less expensive to maintain, far fewer parts and no wood. 3) Moorings are small and spaced apart. When unoccupied, clear view of water.

When occupied, boats are separated from each other and water is still in view. 4) Moorings are removed during winter months. 5) Personal safety and property damage concerns are greatly reduced. Boats are farther apart and no docks to hit. 6) All moorings can be fully occupied, no wasted space.

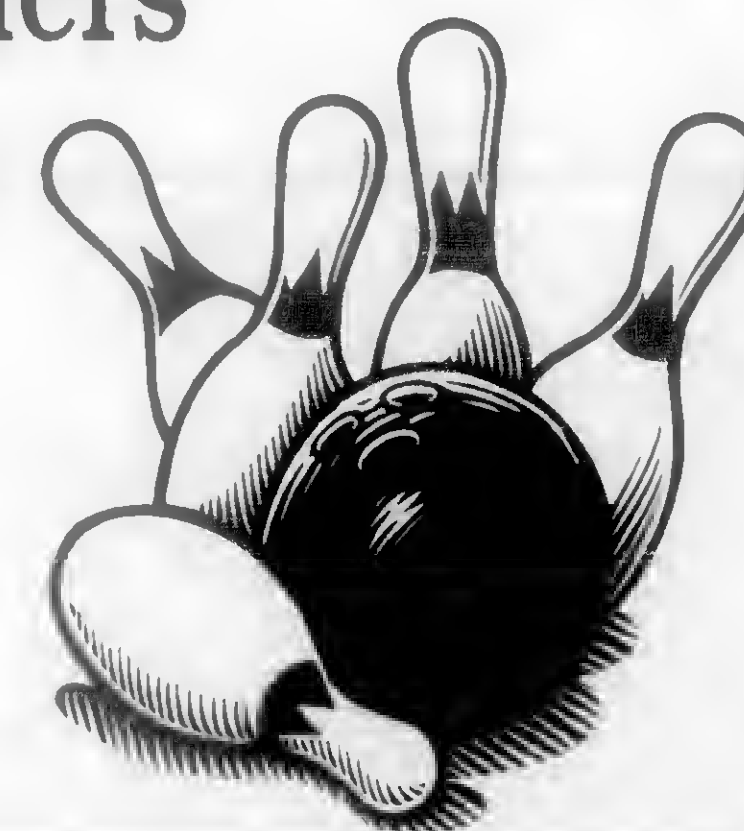

I have no ax to grind. I don't live on, or look at Round Lake from my home. I simply think that Round Lake is a precious jewel and should be cherished and protected for all to enjoy...not just the transient boaters that are here three months a year. Utmost in transient boaters minds, is to obtain a secure and safe place to spend the night. They will come...docks or moorings.

Bottom line...let's not ignore what other waterfront communities have successfully accomplished. It would be an outright shame for us to clog up Round Lake with a bunch of unsightly, ugly docks. We have a treasure! Let's keep Charlevoix The Beautiful!

MAIL AEROPLANE WRECKED IN ST. JAMES HARBOR

TURNED COMPLETELY OVER BY HIGH WIND THURSDAY NIGHT

PILOT DONNELLAN TELLS OF EVENTFUL TRIP TO ISLAND

Returned to Mainland Monday Morning With Dog Team and Driver — Ice Conditions Bad

Charlevoix's mail aeroplane, reported lost either on the ice or in the waters of Lake Michigan between this port and St. James, is now lying in crippled condition in the harbor at St. James, and its pilot, Capt. J. F. Donnellan, is on his way to Chicago, with the expectation of driving back another plane to carry out his contract of three trips a week between this port and St. James.

Since Thursday afternoon the community had been in a state of intense excitement over the failure of the return of the plane from its regular scheduled run to St. James.

The plane, piloted by Capt. Donnellan, loaded with nine sacks of mail and a small amount of merchandise, left Charlevoix Thursday afternoon shortly after one o'clock, on a round trip run to the island. His failure to return that evening caused little apprehension, as it was thought weather conditions compelled him to stay over night. All eyes were directed toward the island Friday, with the hopes that the plane would appear in sight, and the hum of the motor would put at rest the uneasiness and unrest caused by his failure to return the previous day.

Late in the afternoon Friday, Alvin Yeider, Capt. Donnellan's mechanic, who was forced to stay here on account of the bulky mail cargo which filled the plane to capacity on Thursday's run, requested President F. E. Cartier of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, to get in touch with Petoskey's broadcasting station, in an endeavor to find out if the plane reached the island on Thursday's run. This message was sent out on the air by station WBBP at 10 minute intervals Friday evening and also during the noon hour Saturday: "If aeroplane is at St. James or has been there and left, or if there is anything wrong with the plane or Capt. Donnellan, build a huge bonfire. If plane and pilot are safe, build no fire."

It was believed that in case of accident to Donnellan or plane, that a signal of this kind could be seen from the high bluffs at Cross Village, where watchers were stationed throughout the night. The Friday night and Saturday noon messages broadcasted were both plainly received by listeners-in at St. James.

Saturday a party composed of Mechanic Yeider, Eddie O'Neill, Harold Dutcher, Bill Myers, Sheriff Novack and son, drove to Cross Village, where arrangements were immediately made with Joe Davis and Pete Nelson, owners of the famous dog team which has so frequently made the run across the ice to St. James, to take Yeider from the mainland to the island. The start was made at day break Sunday morning.

Before reaching St. James, Yeider with the dog team and drivers met Capt. Donnellan, who had left the island in an effort to reach the mainland. However, he returned to Garden Island with the understanding that the party leave early the following morning for the mainland. Starting at 2:00 a.m. Monday morning, the homeward trip was safely made, Donnellan with Davis and the dog team reaching Cross Village at 11:40, where he immediately telephoned Charlevoix of his arrival. Yeider is now at the island working on the wrecked plane.

In an interview with Capt. Donnellan, he tells the following story of his adventurous trip: "I arrived at St. James harbor after a 20 minute run from Charlevoix and made my usual landing. There was a heavy wind which was increasing in velocity. With the assistance of several Beaver Islanders, I used four anchors and 12 new ropes in an effort to securely anchor the plane, which we parked near the shore, opposite the coast guard station."

"Was about all in that night and retired early. During the night the wind increased, and records at the coast guard station showed it reached a velocity of 62 miles per hour. Sometime during the night it caught my machine, turned it completely upside down, broke the propeller and both planes and otherwise damaged it. Repairs must be obtained from the manufacturer, transferred to the island, and it will take at least three days to put the plane in running order."

When asked about ice conditions, Donnellan said: "Old timers at the island advised me not to attempt the trip across. I fully realized the anxiety among you fellows in Charlevoix and made up my mind I'd cross, even though I would have to make the trip alone. When I met the dog team it sure was some relief. We jumped cracks, climbed ice hills and had the roughest kind of going all the way back. I do not believe there is a chance for boat navigation for at least three weeks. Cross Villagers say there is more ice in the lake today than they have seen for 40 years, and after crossing it, I am inclined to believe them."

Questioned as to conditions on Beaver Island he said: "The folks over there are short in food supplies including sugar, coffee, salt and other minor commodities as well as smoked meats." Continuing he said: "They are a hospitable bunch over there, know how to make a fellow feel at home and did all they could to help me in my trouble."

Capt. Donnellan brought back affidavits signed by prominent Beaver Island residents and government employees wholly exonerating from blame for damage to the plane. The increased velocity of the wind was entirely unlooked for and under ordinary conditions the precautions taken would have held the plane in place.

Islanders Want Regular Service
Capt. Donnellan said the islanders are insistent on having a regular air plane service established between Charlevoix and St. James. They have pledged $6,000 to be used for the purchase of a sea plane and the formation of a permanent carrier company. The sea plane would be used not only in regular runs to the island, but for transportation of mail, light merchandise, and a regular passenger service run. Their idea is to cover not only the island, but a regular service between Charlevoix, Traverse City, Manitowish Island, Naubinway Cross Village and Mackinaw Island. The sea plane would be used during the summer time and a land plane during the winter. Donnellan stands ready to put money in the scheme, and firmly believes it will prove a paying venture, besides an attractive drawing card for all points included on the route.

"The fellows who have had the winter mail contract are sick of the job. The danger of crossing the ice by team or dogs is a risk few men will take. At times they are out for days, sometimes caught in blizzards they wander about for hours before they get their bearings. An established air mail service is the safest way to handle the business," said the captain.

According to Donnellan, it is doubtful if the Air Transit Co., owners of the wrecked plane, to whom the recent air mail contract was awarded, will complete the six run schedule. If a carrier company can be quickly organized, it will be able to handle the business. Until further developments, the island may be without service until lake navigation is open, unless by the ice route from Cross Village.

Charlevoix plant's closing leaves many jobless

HOSKINS

He added there are employees who will get severance pay and some will transfer to other plants. Other employees will just be laid off.

Musser said he is unsure at this time how many employees will be transferred to the other plants or who will get severance pay.

"It depends on person-to-person," Musser said.

He added the company's human resources director is currently contacting other area employers and trying to get Hoskin's employees placed in other companies.

However, things may not be as simple as Musser states.

According to Larry Nunemaker, an employee at the Charlevoix

Hoskins plant for seven years, the company is not offering much, other than job service.

"There are people that have been there 31 years and they are not offering anything to anybody," Nunemaker said. He added there will only be 15-25 jobs created in the other plants for Charlevoix people to transfer to.

According to Nunemaker, statements saying the company is offering severance pay and transfers to employees are frustrating.

Plus, the company will probably start laying off people at the plant in June, to make way for the plant's closing in August, Nunemaker said.

Nunemaker said each shift at the plant was brought into a special meeting April 18 and told the plant was closing.

"There is a lot of frustration; everything from 'Oh well, what's next' to people who are pretty angry," he said. "The general perception is there is a general disgust at the company being put in this position."

However, Nunemaker said he does not blame the current management of the company for this predicament. He said many of the problems faced by the company are due to past management mistakes.

"I understand the current management is trying to save the company, but to offer longer term employees absolutely nothing is inexcusable," he said. Nunemaker said he thinks the company should give at least a token of appreciation to employees who have been with the plant for many years, rather than them just being left out in the cold.

Nunemaker said he is unsure what his future plans are.

Hoskins Manufacturing is located at 05339 M-66 in Charlevoix. The company also has plants in Mio, Hamburg, Lewiston, Mt. Carmel, Penn. and Kildare, Ireland.

Hoskins is a manufacturer of special metal alloys that are used in the manufacturing of spark plugs, heating elements and thermocouples.

Baseball team plans for success

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After only graduating one senior last year and now fielding a group of guys that have successfully played in many sports together, first year baseball coach Pete Scholten is confident in this year's Charlevoix varsity baseball team.

"They have a great ability to play together as a team," Scholten said. "From what we have seen so far, we have seen some solid heads-up baseball played."

For the past five years, Scholten has been an assistant coach to the former varsity baseball coaches Brian Certa and Scott Kelly. After Kelly announced his resignation as coach, Scholten was named to the position.

"I hope to develop a lifelong love of baseball and a passion for America's past-time," Scholten said of his goals for the team.

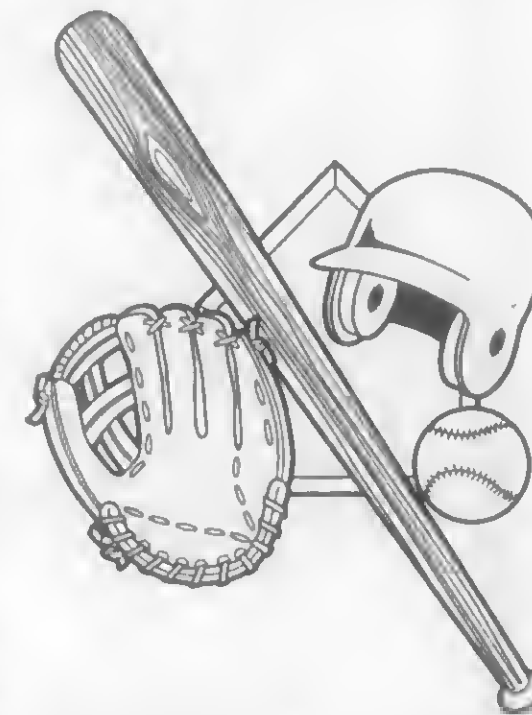

And this year's team certainly has a passion for winning. Many of the players have also been teammates on the Charlevoix varsity football and the varsity basketball teams, which both ended their seasons very successfully.

"We are looking for that to snowball into the baseball season," Scholten said.

The number one person on the pitcher's mound this season will be Chris Loper. Scholten said Loper has a very strong arm, which has won a lot of games in the past for the team. But, the starting pitcher will be Dennis Avery, who also plays center field.

Jeremiah Teuscher will also help out with the pitching, when he is not playing shortstop.

Nick Cole is the starting third baseman, while Nate Teuscher is covering second base, with backup from Ben Spiegel — who is injured right now — and Mike Kochanny and Rob Boss are battling it out for the starting first base position.

Donning the catcher's mitt will also be Loper, with Matt Kilkenny as a backup. Kilkenny also plays in the outfield. Further help in this position will be given from Gordy Lake, who will also be playing at third base.

In the outfield is Matt Horon, who is also a power hitter for the team. Also helping out in the outfield is Nick Schwein and John Kilkenny.

As a team, Scholten said they have a lot of speed and a good number of pinch runners and hitters.

"Both of the Teuschers have a lot of speed, they will be stealing a lot of bases for us," Scholten said.

But, as with all teams, Scholten said there are some areas that they need to work on. For the Charlevoix baseball team, the main area is ironing out some kinks in their fundamentals.

"I think we need to work some of the rust out," he said.

SOFTBALL

Softball team full of returning seniors

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With a strong batch of seniors on the team, Charlevoix varsity softball coach Phil Butler has confidence.

Out of the 15 players on the team, 10 of them are seniors. Six of these seniors will be starting on the field, Butler said. Added to this is a great mix of strong playing and good teamwork.

"One of the things I stress to them is we win and lose as a team. I always stress to them to become their dream," Butler said.

Starting out as pitcher this year is Tasha Morrison. Meghan Vogel is the catcher, who is also a powerhouse of a hitter. According to Butler, this is Vogel's first time playing high school softball, but she went seven for eight in the batter's box against Mancelona recently and hit two home runs.

"(Vogel) is just a great all around athlete," Butler said. Also hitting well this year are Natasha Kleiber, Shawna Flowers and Morrison.

While the team has a lot of potential, Butler's main frustration so far this year has been their inability to get enough practice time outside. Thanks to the poor weather, the team's first outside practice was just two weeks ago.

Added to this problem is the team needs to stop beating themselves in games, Butler said. But, this is due to the practice problems and he foresees it being only a temporary problem.

"I look forward to some improvement as time goes on," Butler said.

But, there has been a setback. One of the team's top players, Shandra Spencley, was injured and will be out for the year. "She was going to be a great asset," Butler said.

As his team goes into the season, Butler will need to concentrate on improvement as the team faces some tough teams this year, most notably Traverse City St. Francis.

According to Butler, St. Francis is a big group of players, who are very strong and have a very dominant pitcher. "Fundamentally, they are a very strong team," he said.

Part of the reason Butler thinks St. Francis is so good, is because they have had the ability to practice indoors during the off-season, a benefit Charlevoix currently does not have due to space constraints.

But, Butler said this problem will be taken care of when the new high school is built, giving them enough room to practice inside.

Track team filled with many choices and students

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With about 57 students on the Charlevoix boys' track team, coach Ken Plude has a lot of choices and plenty of space to play with.

With so many players, Plude can switch kids around to different events to determine their strengths, giving him many options to pick from.

"The only negative is we only have about 10 experienced athletes, so a lot of teaching is going on right now," Plude said.

This inexperience can be seen in the runners Plude has for the speed events. Twenty of his fastest are freshmen in high school. And, making things just a little more difficult, is the high number of injuries on his team. Even his leading scorer, Zach Dennis, is out due to an injury.

"I think we are going to do ok. We are finding people as I am moving them all around," Plude said.

But, Plude has some great senior leadership to help him out, namely Troy Smith.

"He is our leader and he is doing a great job," Plude said.

Leading his endurance runners will be some athletes usually seen in cross country, Gordie Selph, Tim Daining and Josh Popenhagen.

Adding to his arsenal is a wide variety of guys for the throwing events, some of which are also playing on the baseball team. But, as with the rest of the boys' track team, many of them are inexperienced.

"Besides two of them, they have never thrown before and our conference is really tough in throwers," Plude said. In the conference, there are currently three students on other teams that are throwing over 50 feet in the shot put, making it a real challenge for Charlevoix to beat them.

"These boys are not bad, but they are going against some phenomenal athletes," Plude said.

Also proving to be a challenge for Charlevoix are the many seniors making up the other teams, such as East Jordan, Harbor Springs and Kalkaska. But, Plude said, Charlevoix's sheer numbers will help wear down those other teams.

"My goal is to get these guys to believe they can beat these seniors and can wear them down," Plude said. "It is going to be a real battle.

No one is controlling the meets in any sense. There is no stand out 'we're going to blow your doors off' type of team."

Making things a little easier for Plude is the great teamwork the boys show.

"They are really beginning to jell. That is one thing for sure, despite all the injuries, these guys are really digging down and working hard," Plude said.

As for predictions on the team this year, he said it was too early to tell.

"They have the heart, so I know we will be fighting for it," he said.

Girls' team young but filled with a great attitude

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While the Charlevoix girls' track team may be young, they have a great attitude, according to their coach, Jenny Miller.

"They never complain and they are always encouraging each other and cheering each other on," Butler said. "They are just always enthusiastic and always excited to be doing what they are."

And, those members of the team that have experience in track are taking their inexperienced teammates under their wings.

This attitude may be a reason the team is already seeing improvement in its times.

"I have been surprised mainly with their times that have been dropping. They are really positive and that is only going to be a good thing," Miller said.

Out of the 32 members of the track team, Miller only has 13 returners from last year and five seniors.

But, this may not be a bad thing. "With a new team like that, you never know what is going to happen," Miller said. It may also lead to a very strong team for Charlevoix next year.

There are already many members of the team that are showing great track and field skills.

In the distance running, Miller pointed to Liz Ulrich and Katie Swenor as being the top girls. As for the field events, Miller has many fine athletes.

She named Jenny Miller in the long jump, Megan Vogel in the throws, Katie Lieberman in the high jump and Amber Parsons in the hurdles. Added to this are the many "surprises" that Miller expects each season.

TENNIS

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix High School varsity tennis coach Garth Miller may have another rebuilding year on his hands, but he is very excited about the possibilities before him. "We lost two pivotal seniors last year, but we reloading this year," the second year coach said.

Miller added while the team does not have the depth that it had last year, mentally they are better off now.

"We are a lot more positive this year. The chemistry is great," he said. I attribute that to the kids we have."

And Miller does have some strong contenders in this bunch.

His number one singles player is Jason Haas, who moved to Charlevoix this year from South Haven. According to Miller, Haas has some very powerful shots and is very quick on his feet.

"He will really be dominating at the end of the season," Miller said.

In the number two spot in singles is Allen Brooks, also a very strong and all around player. According to Miller, Brooks is also a very smart player that is difficult to beat.

Rounding out Miller's singles lineup is Claas Oberbeck, a German exchange student.

"Claas is a very spirited player. We are very excited to have him," Miller said. "He really brings a lot of spirit to the team."

But, the team's strength does not stop at the singles level, Miller said. The team's doubles line-up is just as exciting.

In the first spot for the doubles team is the combination of Zach Simmons and Lesley Pollard, both juniors. According to Miller, these two players work very well together on the court, they have similar abilities and they are smart players.

"As the year goes on, they will be tough to beat," Miller said.

In the number two spot for the doubles team is Molly Arnold and Melissa McDonough.

"These two are on fire right now," Miller said. "They play very well together and are good friends. They are really just a great match together."

And in the number three spot for doubles are Jim Dilworth and Dale Williams.

Miller expects some great things out of his players this year and he will need it as he faces a very tough conference.

"It's going to be very tough for us to break into the top three of our conference," he said.

Charlevoix is keeping a wary eye on Harbor Springs, Traverse City St. Francis and Elk Rapids, Miller said.

But, Miller said his team has a shot at pulling it off.

"The team does work well together; that really makes my job easier," he said.

SOCCER

Soccer team looking good and has a new coach

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With a new coach and the loss of a few key players due to injuries, the Charlevoix High School varsity girls' soccer team has its work cut out for it.

But first year coach Carol Madison said the team is still looking good and has seven returning starters from last year, even though there are only three seniors on the team.

In the goal is Jennifer Rowe, who Madison calls a very good player.

In the striker position is Karlee

Barnard, who already has some varsity experience under her belt along with returner Danielle Vogelheim.

Another returner is Kate Madison, as a stopper.

On the defense is Jayme Murray. According to Madison, she is a real strong player that is quick and has a "good foot."

And while she is just a sophomore, Katie Zimmerman brings to the team her experience from playing on the varsity squad last year as a freshman.

Rounding out the returning players are Kelly Dreyer and Abby Schaperkotter.

The team captain is Schaperkotter, Murray and Kate Madison.

But while the team has some experienced players, it still finds itself in a rebuilding phase with several freshmen. There are a total of 21 players on the team because there were not enough players for a separate junior varsity squad this year.

According to Madison, that will make it difficult to build experienced players.

Junior varsity teams help because they give a player experience on the field they would not normally get on a packed varsity squad, Madison said.

Along with getting her younger players some experience, Madison is also working on improving the team's speed and some defensive area, like containment.

"We are going to work hard; we are going to work on speed and agility and try to be consistent," she said.

But, the older and more experienced players are stepping up and giving Madison a hand by communicating with their young teammates.

"I think they work well together as a team," Madison said. Madison comes to the varsity team after two years as a junior varsity coach following the resignation of Hagen Manker. She has also spent several years coaching travel soccer teams, mostly at the middle school level.

This is her sixth year as a soccer coach.

But, as she takes over the team, she is doing so with the valuable help of her assistant coach Tom Conlan. Conlan is well known in Charlevoix soccer circles and used to be the girls' varsity coach three years ago.

"(Conlan) is a real valuable asset to us," Madison said.

A 24-year-old Elk Rapids man, Scott Christopher Cook, was fatally stabbed early Sunday morning in the Charlevoix Municipal Marina.

Police have arrested Thomas Arvon Shulick, a 21-year-old from Charlevoix, for the crime.

Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson said Cook had boated to the marina Saturday night with some coworkers from Traverse City. He said, while they were at the marina, Shulick allegedly began harassing the group.

The incident escalated to a verbal argument and a physical confrontation between Shulick and another male boater with Cook's group, witnesses stated to police. Halverson alleges Shulick returned later and stabbed Cook on one of the boat docks in the marina.

He added the two men did not know each other.

"I think he was just making a nuisance of himself," Halverson said.

A short time later, Charlevoix police received a report of screaming near the marina and investigated. During this investigation, Cook was found around 2:30 a.m. Sunday, by
